1. Legislative changes. —

- (1) The words "under this Chapter" have been omitted under the present rule. The effect of the omission is to make the rule applicable also to sales under mortgage decrees. See Note 4.
- (2) The words "other than a sale by the Collector" have also been omitted as a separate provision has been made in Rule 70, infra.

2. Court, meaning of. — The "Court" means the Court executing the decree and not a Court to which such Court is subordinate.<sup>1</sup>

3. "May, in its discretion, adjourn any sale." — Under this rule the Court may, in its discretion, adjourn a sale to a specified day.<sup>1</sup> No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to when the Court should grant an adjournment. It depends upon the circumstances of each case. See the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup>

The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>3</sup> (dissenting from earlier decisions<sup>4</sup>) and Madras<sup>5</sup> have held that an execution sale after it has been stayed by the Appellate Court and before the order of stay is communicated to the officer holding the sale is not a nullity and that it would, at the worst, be an irregularity which will not per se invalidate the sale without proof of substantial injury. The Calcutta High Court has held a contrary view in the undermentioned case,<sup>6</sup> dissenting from an earlier decision of the same Court.<sup>7</sup> According to the Lahore High Court, where an executing Court makes an order postponing the sale but the sale is effected before the order reaches the officer conducting the sale, the sale is illegal and not merely irregular.<sup>8</sup>

The officer conducting the sale is also empowered under this rule to adjourn the sale except where the sale is held within the precincts of the court-house, in which case leave of Court is necessary.<sup>9</sup>

3a. Who can apply for adjournment. — The rule does not specifically provide that a party to the proceeding alone can apply for adjournment under this rule. The rule being general in terms, there is nothing to prevent the Court from adjourning the sale on information from a third party or even on the application of such third party.<sup>1</sup>

3b. Imposition of terms on adjournment. — The Court granting an adjournment of the sale has power to impose terms on the applicant as a condition of the adjournment.<sup>1</sup>

4. Any sale. — This rule applies to the adjournment of any sale including a sale under a mortgage decree.<sup>1</sup>

5. Adjournment of sale of mortgaged property. — See Notes 4 and 11.

6. Adjournment after partial sale. — The provisions of this rule do not apply to a continuous sale. Thus, it does not apply where the sale is ordered to be continued from day to day and the property is kept on hammer in the hope of getting higher bids than those offered on the first day; no fresh proclamation is necessary in such a case even though the sale is adjourned and continued for more than seven days.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where a sale was included in the sale list for a particular day and as the sales could not be finished on that day the nazir in charge continued them on the following day in accordance with the procedure prescribed by the Rules and Circular Orders of the High Court, it was held that there was no adjournment of the sale within the meaning of this rule.<sup>2</sup>

7. Omission to adjourn the sale to a specified day and hour. — Where an execution sale is adjourned, the Court must specify the day and the hour to which it is adjourned.<sup>1</sup> Omission to do so may amount to a material irregularity.<sup>2</sup> It was held in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> that the failure to mention the exact hour ceased to be a material irregularity where the judgment-debtor had agreed that there should be no fresh proclamation of sale.

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>4</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad<sup>5</sup> that the specification of the day and hour is only necessary where the Court adjourns the sale and not when the officer conducting the sale adjourns it.

8. Fresh proclamation, when necessary. — Fresh proclamation is necessary when the sale is adjourned for a longer period than seven days.<sup>1</sup> It is, however, open to the judgment-debtor to waive a fresh proclamation. See Note 9 below.

The omission to issue a fresh proclamation as required by the rule amounts to a mere irregularity and the sale will not be set aside in the absence of proof of substantial injury.<sup>2</sup>

9. Waiver of proclamation. — The judgment-debtor can waive the benefit of a fresh proclamation under this rule and, if he does so, he cannot, later on, object to the sale being irregular on that ground.<sup>1</sup> Such waiver does not, however, estop him from objecting to other irregularities,<sup>2</sup> as for instance, the omission to specify the day and the hour of the sale,<sup>3</sup> or the omission to proclaim properly.<sup>4</sup> The waiver of a fresh proclamation implies a waiver of objection to any defect appearing on the face of the sale proclamation but does not imply a waiver of the right to object to any irregularities in the attachment.<sup>5</sup>

O. 21 R. 69
Notes 9-13

A waiver of proclamation by one of several judgment-debtors does not bind the other judgment-debtors.<sup>6</sup> Nor does the waiver of a fresh proclamation by the judgment-debtor prevent an attaching decree-holder from objecting to the sale on the ground of want of a fresh proclamation.<sup>7</sup>

The guardian ad litem of a minor judgment-debtor can waive a fresh proclamation on behalf of the minor under this rule.<sup>8</sup>

10. Stoppage of sale on deposit of debt and costs. — Any sale including a sale under a mortgage decree can be stopped by the deposit of the decretal amount and the costs before the property is actually knocked down to the bidder.<sup>1</sup> But the words "debt and costs" mean the entire amount and not "the balance of the decree-debt and costs which would remain if, by a legal fiction, the sale of previous lots (not yet completed by the payment of the whole of the purchase-money) were taken as completed by treating the whole of the purchase-money as being actually paid up."<sup>2</sup>

Under sub-rule (3) it is the officer conducting the sale who has to be satisfied that the requisite amount has been paid into Court.<sup>3</sup>

11. Who can tender the amount. — The judgment-debtor or a transferee of the property from the judgment-debtor is entitled to tender the amount under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Where the sale is in execution of a mortgage decree any person holding the equity of redemption,<sup>2</sup> such as a purchaser in execution of a decree on a puisne mortgage,<sup>3</sup> can tender the amount and have the sale stopped.

A payment made to prevent a sale in execution of a decree is not a voluntary payment, whether made by the debtor or by a third person claiming the property.<sup>4</sup>

12. Sale on a date other than the one to which it is adjourned. — The High Court of Calcutta has held in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that if the execution sale does not take place on the adjourned date but is held on a subsequent date to which the sale has not been adjourned, it amounts to a material irregularity. But in a later decision<sup>2</sup> the same High Court has held that if the sale takes place on a day never fixed for it and of which the judgment-debtor has no notice, the sale is a nullity.

2. Failure of execution sale due to auction-purchaser's default — Rights of decree-holder and judgment-debtor.— Where an execution sale fails owing to the auction-purchaser's default, the decree-holder is entitled to a re-sale of the property.<sup>1</sup> See O. 21, Rr. 77, 84 and 86. Where the price bid at the second sale is less than that bid at the first sale, the purchaser at the first sale is liable to make good the difference, and the present rule entitles the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor to apply to the Court to enforce such liability. But the decree-holder is not bound to proceed against the defaulting purchaser. He may recover from the judgment-debtor the judgment-debt or the balance of it that may be due, and leave him to pursue his remedies against the auction-purchaser under this rule.<sup>2</sup> The judgment-debtor may also, instead of proceeding against the auction-purchaser to recover the deficiency in price, apply under Rule 90 to set aside the second sale if he can make out a case under that rule.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 13, infra.

3. Re-sale.— The rule applies to all re-sales made in consequence of the default of the auction-purchaser, not only in the payment of the 25 per cent. of the purchase-money under Rule 84 or in the payment of the balance under Rule 85,<sup>1</sup> but also in the payment of the poundage fee.<sup>2</sup> But the re-sale must be of the same property<sup>3</sup> and under the same decree.<sup>4</sup> The property must also be sold under the same description, and any substantial difference of description will disentitle the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor to recover the deficiency under this rule.<sup>5</sup> Thus, no deficiency can be recovered where —

- (1) encumbrances, not notified at the first sale were mentioned in the sale proclamation at the re-sale;<sup>6</sup>
- (2) property described as that of A at the first sale was described as that of B at the re-sale.<sup>7</sup>

But the rule that the re-sale must be of the same property as that put up for sale at the first sale, does not apply where the property has changed during the interval owing to natural causes or the change in the wording of the sale proclamation has been due to the purchaser's own default and conduct.<sup>8</sup>

Will a difference in the sale proclamations of the two sales which does not substantially prejudice the purchaser at the first sale absolve him from liability under Rule 71? As to this question, it was observed by Wallis, C. J., in Venkatachalamayya v. Nilakanta<sup>9</sup> that Rule 71 is a salutary provision which should be given effect to, unless the defaulting purchaser would be substantially prejudiced. The remarks of Kumaraswamy Sastry, J., in his judgment in the same case lend support to the same view. From the trend of the remarks made in the undermentioned cases, the High Courts of Calcutta<sup>10</sup> and Bombay<sup>11</sup> seem to take a contrary view and to hold that substantial differences of descriptions in the proclamations of the two sales will entitle the defaulting purchaser to exemption under this rule, though he may not have been substantially prejudiced by the differences.

It has also been held by the Calcutta High Court<sup>12</sup> that where a property was misdescribed in the proclamation of the first sale and the decree-holder was aware of the misdescription, he ought not to have had the property again proclaimed for sale under a description which he knew to be wrong and having done that, he could not make the defaulting purchaser answerable for the deficiency.

The re-sale contemplated by this rule is a re-sale held according to law. Hence, an auction-purchaser who fails to pay the deposit required by Rule 84 is not liable for the deficiency on re-sale unless the re-sale is held "forthwith" within the meaning of that rule.<sup>13</sup> But it has been held that Rule 84 does not apply to a re-sale on the purchaser's default in paying the poundage fee and that such re-sale need not be held "forthwith."<sup>14</sup>

Suppose at a re-sale held on the purchaser's default, no bidders are forthcoming. Is there a re-sale within the meaning of the rule and can the purchaser at the first sale be proceeded against for the price bid by him at that sale? On this question it has been held by the Madras High Court<sup>15</sup> that there is a "re-sale" when the property is put up again for sale and that the defaulting purchaser should not be absolved from liability for want of bidders at the re-sale. The Bombay High Court has, however,

O. 21 R. 71

4. Power to order recovery of deficiency. — The power of ordering the recovery of deficiency is vested in the Court. The officer conducting the sale has no power to order the recovery of the deficiency.<sup>1</sup> Even in cases where the execution of a decree has been transferred to a Collector and the property has been sold by him, the Civil Court has jurisdiction to order the recovery of deficiency under this rule.<sup>2</sup> See Section 70, Note 2.

5. Procedure under the Rule. — The Court may pass an order that the defaulting purchaser is liable for the deficiency, but there is nothing in the rule which compels the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor to obtain such an order before asking for execution against the auction-purchaser. The opinion expressed in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that, without such an order execution cannot issue against the auction-purchaser, seems to be not warranted by the terms of the rule. The rule does not expressly provide for notice to the defaulting purchaser; but it is the duty of the Court, under general principles of law, to give him notice and hear and decide on his objections before it orders execution to issue against him.<sup>2</sup>

The proceedings under the rule are not more summary than proceedings to set aside an execution sale.<sup>3</sup>

An order against the auction-purchaser under this rule can be passed only when re-sale has taken place. The Court has no power to order that a property should be re-sold and that the defaulting purchaser should pay the deficiency in price which may occur.<sup>4</sup> An order under this rule to the effect that the defaulting purchaser is liable for the deficiency, passed in favour of the decree-holder, can be executed by the judgment-debtor, because the rule enables either of them to apply under it.<sup>5</sup>

6. Who may apply under this Rule. — This rule entitles either the judgment-debtor or the decree-holder to apply for the recovery of deficiency from the auction-purchaser.<sup>1</sup> By the term "decree-holder" is meant the decree-holder by whom the property was brought to sale. Other decree-holders are not included in the term although they may be entitled to rateable distribution under Section 73.<sup>2</sup> The decree-holder is entitled to enforce the defaulting purchaser's liability for the whole amount of the deficiency and is not bound to confine his application to the decretal amount that may remain outstanding.<sup>3</sup> Where an order has been passed in favour of the decree-holder to the effect that the auction-purchaser was liable for the deficiency but the decree-holder realizes the balance of the decretal amount from the judgment-debtor and does not enforce the order passed in his favour, the judgment-debtor can execute the same against the auction-purchaser.<sup>4</sup> See also Note 10 below.

7. By reason of the purchaser's default. — The "default" referred to in this rule includes default in paying the purchase-money, the deposit required by Rule 84<sup>1</sup> or the poundage fee (see Note 3). The default must be that of a purchaser. Thus, a bid lapses on a higher bid being made and where the highest bidder dies before the acceptance of his bid, the next highest bidder cannot be treated as the highest bidder for the purposes of this rule.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, a bid can be withdrawn at any time before the property is knocked down to the bidder.<sup>3</sup> So also, it has been held that a bid lapses by too much delay in the acceptance thereof.<sup>4</sup> But a bid cannot be withdrawn after the property is knocked down to the bidder.<sup>5</sup> As to whether the Court's acceptance of the highest bid is necessary to complete the sale, see Notes to Rule 84.

In an application under this rule, it is open to the auction-purchaser to raise any objections to the first sale which can be urged in an application to set aside a sale under Order 21,<sup>6</sup> because in such a case it is conceived his failure to complete the sale would be justified.

Irregularities in connection with the re-sale which are not shown to have been responsible for the comparative lowness of the price realized at the re-sale, cannot be pleaded in defence to an application under this rule.<sup>7</sup>

8. Where defaulting purchaser is merely an agent. — A person who bids at a sale merely as an agent of another person is not liable under this rule.<sup>1</sup> See Contract Act, Section 230. But he will be liable if he bids without informing the officer conducting the sale that he is acting as agent of another. See Contract Act, Section 230. In such a case the mere fact that the judgment-debtor knows that the bidder is acting as agent of another will not absolve him from liability. The reason is that in court-sales, the contract is between the bidder and the Court, which acts by virtue of a statutory authority and not as the agent of either the decree-holder or of the judgment-debtor.<sup>2</sup> Where a person professes to bid as agent of another without the latter's authority, the latter is not liable under this rule,<sup>3</sup> while the alleged agent is liable for damages.<sup>4</sup> See Section 235 of the Contract Act.

9. Liability for interest on deficiency. — The defaulting purchaser is not liable to pay interest on the deficiency in price.<sup>1</sup>

10. Certificate. — A certificate issued under this rule has the force and effect of a decree.<sup>1</sup> But the deficiency may be recovered even though the certificate referred to in the rule has not been issued.<sup>2</sup> An order passed to the effect that the auction-purchaser is liable for the deficiency has the effect of a decree and can be attached as such, under O. 21 R. 53.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 16, infra.

11. Rateable distribution. — Money realized from the defaulting purchaser under this rule amounts to "assets" within the meaning of Section 73, and is liable to rateable distribution.<sup>1</sup>

O. 21 R. 71

12. Nature of defaulting purchaser's liability for deficiency. — See Note 13 below.

13. Suit for deficiency on re-sale — Whether maintainable. — It has been seen in Note 62 to Section 9 ante, that where two remedies are available under the law, one must not be taken as operating in derogation of the other, but that this general rule is subject to the qualification that where a right is created by statute and a method of enforcing the right, or of redressing the grievance caused in the exercise or enforcement of the right is pointed by the statute creating such right, the general remedy of suit will be impliedly barred. The question, therefore, whether the right to claim deficiency from a defaulting purchaser can be enforced by suit depends upon the question whether such right is a common law right or a right created by the statute. It was held in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> of the Bombay High Court that the right to recover the deficiency under this rule is one created by the statute relating to the procedure, but the question in that case did not arise as to the maintainability of a separate suit to recover such deficiency. In a later case,<sup>2</sup> however, the same High Court has expressed the opinion that but for this rule a suit would have to be filed to recover such deficiency and that this rule enables the party aggrieved to make an application for that purpose. It would seem to follow from this that the remedy under this rule is only an alternative remedy which does not bar a separate suit. In Amir Baksh v. Venkatachala,<sup>3</sup> an opinion was expressed by the Madras High Court that a suit will not be maintainable in such a case. There was no discussion, however, of the principles and the question that actually arose in the case was not whether a suit would lie. But in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> Wallis, C. J., observed as follows: "By his failure to complete his purchase the purchaser commits a breach of contract and is answerable in damages to the Court or the persons on whose behalf it sells, viz., the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor." In Sitaram v. Janaki Ram,<sup>5</sup> Mr. Justice Walsh of the Allahabad High Court expressed the view that the liability of the defaulting purchaser is not a contractual liability and that no suit would lie to enforce it. The Patna<sup>6</sup> and the Calcutta<sup>7</sup> High Courts have held that right to claim the deficiency is a common law right to recover the damages for a legal wrong done by the purchaser, that Rule 71 provides only a summary remedy for enforcing that right but that it does not bar the general remedy of suit. It is submitted that this last view is correct.

14. Insolvency proceedings. — The provisions of this rule apply to sales by the Court under the Provincial Insolvency Act, so that where a re-sale is held owing to the first purchaser's default and a deficiency occurs on such re-sale, the deficiency is recoverable in execution.<sup>1</sup> But the rule does not apply to sales by the receiver under that Act.<sup>2</sup>

Notes 15-16

15. Suit, if lies to set aside order under this Rule. — It has been seen that the position under this rule is, as if a decree has been passed against the defaulting purchaser for the amount of the deficiency which the decree-holder or judgment-debtor is entitled to execute under the provisions of the Code relating to the execution of money decrees. Hence, it follows that the remedy of a party aggrieved by an order under this rule is by way of appeal (see Note 16), and not by means of a separate suit to set aside the order.<sup>1</sup>

16. Appeal. — It is settled law that an appeal lies against an order deciding an application by a decree-holder or judgment-debtor under this rule against a defaulting auction-purchaser for the recovery of deficiency in price.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that inasmuch as this rule declares that the deficiency in price shall be recoverable from the defaulting purchaser under the provisions relating to the execution of decrees for the payment of money, the rule relating to appeals must be applied mutatis mutandis equally with any other of those rules.<sup>2</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Bombay<sup>3</sup> that no second appeal lies from an order determining an application under this rule, where the amount of deficiency does not exceed Rs. 500. The reason given is that no second appeal would have been maintainable if a decree had been actually passed for the deficiency in such a case and an order had been made determining an application for the execution of such decree. But the Calcutta High Court<sup>4</sup> has taken a contrary view. It is submitted that the Bombay view is correct.

1. Legislative changes. —

(1) The words "subject to the provisions of section 73" in sub-rule (2) did not appear in the corresponding Section of the old Code. See Note 5 below.

(2) The words "if he so desires" which occurred in the old Code, have now been omitted.

2. Permission to bid. — A decree-holder cannot, under this rule, purchase property sold in execution of his own decree, without the express permission of the executing Court.<sup>1</sup> But the prohibition under this rule applies only to the decree-holder and not to the judgment-debtor,<sup>3</sup> or to a holder of a decree other than that under which the sale is to take place.<sup>3</sup> An assignee of the decree under an oral assignment has no locus standi to apply for execution and he is not the holder of a decree within the meaning of Rule 72; hence, he need not obtain the permission of the Court under this rule.<sup>4</sup> The decree-holder cannot get round the condition imposed by this rule, by bidding jointly with a stranger,<sup>5</sup> or by availing himself of the bid of another.<sup>6</sup>

Leave to bid should be very cautiously granted.<sup>7</sup> In granting such leave, the Court can impose any fit and proper conditions for the purpose of safeguarding the interests of the judgment-debtor.<sup>8</sup> But the conditions imposed should not be too stringent,<sup>9</sup> and should not be construed too narrowly.<sup>10</sup> "The main question for the Court to consider is, whether it is to the advantage of every one concerned, in order to obtain the highest price, that the plaintiff should be allowed to bid or not."<sup>11</sup> The executing Court can refuse to accept the bid when the condition attached to the permission to bid is not fulfilled but it cannot for that reason dismiss the execution application.<sup>12</sup>

The principle of this rule governs also sales held by the Collector under the Code.<sup>13</sup> But where the Collector is empowered, under rules, to grant only permission to bid, but not to order a set-off, the decree-holder desiring a set-off should apply to the Court under this rule.<sup>14</sup>

Leave granted under this rule is binding on a superior Court acting under Section 63 of the Code.<sup>15</sup> Consequently, sale proceeds validly set off against the decretal amount cannot be ordered to be refunded and sent to the superior Court. See Note 8 to Section 63, ante.

was passed thereon, but the decree-holder was allowed to bid throughout the course of the sale, it was held by the High Court of Patna<sup>16</sup> that it can be taken that the Court gave the required permission inasmuch as the failure to pass an order in writing was a mistake of the Court.

Where the decree-holder is the receiver of the property sold in execution, permission obtained under O. 21 R. 72 without informing the Court that he is such receiver is not enough. A sale in his favour under such circumstances is liable to be set aside.<sup>17</sup> Where permission was given to a decree-holder to bid under this rule but subsequently he was appointed receiver of the property, it was held that the permission would not entitle him to buy the property when he had thus been appointed receiver of the property and that the sale in his favour should be set aside.<sup>18</sup>

Where permission to bid is granted but the decree-holder did not bid up to amount of upset price fixed by the Court, the Court cannot dismiss the execution on that ground inasmuch as the decree-holder cannot be compelled to bid for any particular amount.<sup>19</sup>

3. "Where decree-holder purchases with such permission." — Leave to bid puts a decree-holder in the same position as an independent purchaser and the judgment-debtor is not entitled to demand a higher standard of fairness from the former than from the latter.<sup>1</sup> A decree-holder-purchaser accordingly is not bound to disclose circumstances within his knowledge and bearing on the sale any more than an independent purchaser.<sup>2</sup> The principle is the same with regard to the decree-holder-purchaser in a mortgage suit also. He does not stand in any fiduciary position to the mortgagor.<sup>3</sup> He is entitled to credit the judgment-debtor only with the purchase-money at the auction and not the real market value of the property and may proceed to execute for the balance, if any, of the decree-amount.<sup>4</sup>

4. Leave obtained by misrepresentation. — The Court has an inherent power to refuse to allow a sale to be confirmed if it is satisfied that the Court has been misled in granting leave to the decree-holder to bid.<sup>1</sup> But allegations of fraud of this character must be specific and the issue must be decided on a trial.<sup>2</sup>

5. Setting off decretal amount against purchase-money and rateable distribution. — For the sake of convenience, sub-rule (2) allows the decree-holder, ordinarily, to set off the purchase-money against his decree instead of paying the money into Court and drawing it out again.<sup>1</sup> But this fact does not alter the substantial nature of the transaction, and the nominal receipt of the sale-proceeds, in cases where set-off is allowed, must be held to amount to the holding of assets by the Court, where the rights of rival decree-holders to share in such proceeds are concerned.<sup>3</sup> Sub-rule (2) accordingly provides that the right to set off is subject to any claims for rateable distribution under Section 73 of the Code.<sup>3</sup> The claims for rateable distribution in such cases must, however, have been made before the conclusion of the sale inasmuch as on the date of the sale, the assets would be deemed to have been realized by the Court.<sup>4</sup> If, however, the amount of the bid exceeds the decree-amount, the claims under Section 73 may be made before the realization of the excess amount by the Court.<sup>6</sup> The existence of other decree-holders who are entitled to rateable distribution does not oblige the decree-holder-purchaser to bring into Court the entire purchase-money. He is only bound to pay into Court the proportionate amounts due to the other decree-holders.<sup>8</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>7</sup> it was held that it was irregular for a Court to allow a decree-holder-purchaser to set off the decretal amount for the purchase-money when the property had been attached by another decree-holder also. This view does not seem to be sound. Where the decree-holder-purchaser who is liable to share rateably with rival decree-holders in the sale proceeds fails to furnish the proportionate amount to the Court for distribution, a refund may be enforced by a summary process in execution instead of in a separate suit.<sup>8</sup> A and B two creditors of C had both applied for execution and A was allowed to purchase and set off his decree amount towards the purchase money. The Court subsequently discovered the fact that B had applied for execution even before the sale, but found that A was unable or unwilling to pay the purchase money into Court. It was held that the proper order to be passed in such a case was to set aside the sale or order re-sale.<sup>9</sup>

Under this rule, no order of Court is necessary prior to sale granting permission to set-off.<sup>10</sup> An application for set-off may be made even after fifteen days of sale.<sup>11</sup> Where permission has been given to the decree-holder to bid and set off, the set-off takes place automatically on the sale being held and the decree-holder purchasing at such sale. An order of the Court setting off the two amounts is not necessary.<sup>12</sup>

Where permission to bid has been granted on condition that there should be no set-off, the Court cannot subsequently allow a set-off.<sup>13</sup> Similarly, where the Court has granted permission to set off and the decree-holder has bid at the sale relying on such permission, the Court cannot go back upon its previous order and call on the decree-holder to pay the purchase money.<sup>14</sup>

As to the exemption from making the deposit into Court of purchase-money by a decree-holder-purchaser, see Order 21 Rules 84 and 85 and Notes thereon.

6. Amount due on the decree. — Where a decree-holder is allowed to purchase the property ordered to be sold on condition that he would purchase it in full satisfaction of the decree, he is not entitled to recover from the judgment-debtor any money that he, as a decree-holder, has to pay by way of poundage.<sup>1</sup>

7. Purchase without permission. — Although the leave of the Court is a condition precedent to the decree-holder bidding for, or purchasing the property, a purchase by him without such permission is not ipso facto void. It is valid until set aside in the manner provided by sub-rule (3).<sup>1</sup> A stranger or a person other than such as is specified in sub-rule (3) has no right to apply to have such a sale set aside.<sup>2</sup>

instance of the judgment-debtor or any other person interested in the sale.<sup>1</sup> But where a decree-holder was refused permission to bid, a purchase by him benami in the name of another was held to be an abuse of process of Court, and the sale was held invalid.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, a purchase by the decree-holder in the name of another for a price lower than that at which the decree-holder was allowed permission to bid, was held liable to be set aside for fraud.<sup>3</sup> A purchase by the decree-holder's undivided son<sup>4</sup> or undivided brother<sup>5</sup> is presumably with joint funds and as such the purchase is for the decree-holder. A purchase by the decree-holder's pleader for himself is not invalid.<sup>6</sup>

9. The Court may, if it thinks fit, set aside the sale.— A purchase by the decree-holder in contravention of this rule being only voidable, it is within the discretion of the Court to set aside the sale on an application under sub-rule (3).<sup>1</sup> Where the conduct of the decree-holder in purchasing the property amounts to fraud,<sup>2</sup> or to an abuse of the process of the Court,<sup>3</sup> the sale will be set aside. Where the purchase has been benami and for an inadequate price, the burden of proving that the sale is to be upheld is clearly on the decree-holder and it will not be a valid ground of objection that the judgment-debtor did not plead fraud or substantial injury.<sup>4</sup> In order that a sale may be set aside under this rule on account of the decree-holder's failure to obtain permission to bid, it is not necessary to find that the judgment-debtor sustained substantial loss by the sale.<sup>5</sup>

An application to set aside a sale, under sub-rule (3), can only be made by the judgment-debtor or any other person whose interests are affected by the sale. A decree-holder entitled to rateable distribution is a person whose interests are so affected but the sons of a judgment-debtor who were not parties to the suit and on whom the decree would not be binding are not persons interested in the sale.<sup>6</sup> The fact of the confirmation of the sale is no bar for setting it aside under sub-rule (3).<sup>7</sup>

the sale, neither Section 47 nor the want of an application under sub-rule (3) being a bar thereto.

12. Interest. — A decree is not satisfied until the sale in execution of it is confirmed,<sup>1</sup> and the decree-holder is entitled to claim interest, if the decree awards it, between the date of sale and the date of its confirmation.<sup>2</sup>

13. Appeal. — Under O. 43 R. 1 (j), an appeal lies from an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale under this rule.<sup>1</sup> But there is no right of second appeal.<sup>2</sup> But an order granting,<sup>3</sup> or refusing,<sup>4</sup> leave to bid to the decree-holder is not appealable.

14. Limitation and step-in-aid of execution. — The effect of a decree-holder purchasing at an execution sale without the leave of the Court is to render the sale voidable and not void. Consequently, a suit to set aside the sale under Article 12 (a) of the Limitation Act must be brought within one year of confirmation of sale.<sup>1</sup>

On the question whether an application for leave to bid is a step-in-aid of execution, see Article 182 clause (5) of the Limitation Act and the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup>

Local Amendment

BOMBAY

After Rule 72 the following shall be inserted, namely :

O. 21 R. 72A
(Bombay)

"72A. If leave to bid is granted to the mortgagee of immovable property, a reserve price as regards him shall be fixed (unless the Court shall otherwise think fit) at a sum not less than the amount then due for principal, interest and costs in case the property is sold in one lot, and not less in respect of each lot (in case the property is sold in lots) than such figure as shall appear to be properly attributable to it in relation to the amount aforesaid."

Note. — Rule 72A framed by the Bombay High Court, as it originally stood, embodied a mandatory provision for fixing, in the case of a mortgagee-decree-holder applying for leave to bid, a reserve price of not less than the amount of the principal, interest and costs due under the decree. It was accordingly held<sup>1</sup> that an execution sale to the mortgagee-decree-holder without fixing the reserve price aforesaid and for less than the decree-amount was vitiated by material irregularity. The rule has since been amended giving power to the Court if it thinks fit, to dispense with the condition relating to the reserve price.

It has been held that Rule 72A has no application to the original side of the High Court of Bombay and a mortgagee-decree-holder purchasing for less than his decree-amount is entitled to recover the balance from the mortgagor or otherwise.<sup>2</sup>

Synopsis

1. Legislative changes.
2. "No officer or other person."
3. Transfer of Property Act, Section 136.

1. Legislative changes. — The words "or other person" are new.

2. "No officer or other person." — The introduction of the words "or other person" in the present rule extends the scope of the prohibition in the rule to all those, besides officers, who have anything to do with the machinery of the sale or have, directly or indirectly, any interest in the result of the sale.<sup>1</sup> A pleader engaged by a party to a suit<sup>2</sup> or the pleader's clerk<sup>3</sup> cannot be said to have a duty to perform in connexion with the sale and is not therefore within the prohibition, and the introduction of the words "or other person" in the present Code does not change the law in this respect.<sup>4</sup> Judicial opinion has, however, been uniform that the conduct of a pleader engaged in the suit, in purchasing the property for himself, is open to grave censure, especially when the purchase is detrimental to the interests of his client.<sup>5</sup> In fact, the pleader will be guilty of professional misconduct in such cases.<sup>6</sup> A receiver appointed by the Court under O. 40 R. 1 cannot purchase at an auction sale, as a decree-holder, property of which he is the receiver.<sup>7</sup> See also Note 3 below.

3. Transfer of Property Act, Section 136. — Under Section 136 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), as it originally stood, "no Judge, pleader, mukhtar, clerk, bailiff or other officer connected with Courts of Justice can buy any actionable claim falling under the jurisdiction of the Court in which he exercises his functions."<sup>1</sup> The Section as it now stands is wider in its scope and prohibits such a purchase, whether the claim is within the jurisdiction of the Court with which the Judge, pleader or other persons referred to is connected or of any other Court.<sup>2</sup>

O. 21 R. 74*SALE OF MOVEABLE PROPERTY

Sale of agricultural produce.

- R. 74. [New.] (1) Where the property to be sold is agricultural produce, the sale shall be held, —
- (a) if such produce is a growing crop, on or near the land on which such crop has grown, or,
  - (b) if such produce has been cut or gathered, at or near the threshing-floor or place for treading out grain or the like or fodder-stack on or in which it is deposited:

Provided that the Court may direct the sale to be held at the nearest place of public resort, if it is of opinion that the produce is thereby likely to sell to greater advantage.

- (2) Where, on the produce being put up for sale, —

- (a) a fair price, in the estimation of the person holding the sale, is not offered for it, and
- (b) the owner of the produce or a person authorized to act in his behalf applies to have the sale postponed till the next day or, if a market is held at the place of sale, the next market-day, the sale shall be postponed accordingly and shall be then completed, whatever price may be offered for the produce.

[See Rule 75 and Section 61.]

1. Place of sale. — This rule makes special provision for the sale of agricultural produce. In other cases of moveable properties attached in execution, sales should ordinarily be held in some place within the jurisdiction of the Court ordering the sale.<sup>1</sup> Where certain ornaments were attached in Belgaum and the judgment-debtor urged that they should be directed to be sold at Bombay on the ground that they would probably fetch a better price and it was found by the Court that a fair price could be had on the spot, it was held that there was no good and sufficient reason to depart from the usual practice.<sup>2</sup>

R. 75. [New.] (1) Where the property to be sold is a growing crop and the crop from its nature admits of being stored but has not yet been stored, the day of the sale shall be so fixed as to admit of its being made ready for storing before the arrival of such day, and the sale shall not be held until the crop has been cut or gathered and is ready for storing.

Special provisions relating to growing crops.

(2) Where the crop from its nature does not admit of being stored, it may be sold before it is cut and gathered, and the purchaser shall be entitled to enter on the land, and to do all that is necessary for the purpose of tending and cutting or gathering it.

1. Sale of moveable property. — A sale of arms by a nazir of the Court in execution of a decree is a sale by a public servant in the discharge of his duty and is therefore excluded from the operation of the Arms Act (XI of 1878) by Section 1, clause (b) of that Act.<sup>1</sup>

2. Payment of price. — Though sales should be conducted strictly according to this rule, still where, in execution of a decree for a large amount the decree-holder purchased some moveable property of small value without the leave of the Court and filed into Court a receipt setting off the amount towards his decree, it was held in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that it might be treated as a cash payment.

This rule gives the officer conducting the sale a discretion to allow the purchase-money to be paid at a reasonable time after the sale.<sup>2</sup>

Under sub-rule (2), the sale becomes absolute as soon as the purchase-money is paid to the officer or other person holding the sale and no order of Court is necessary as in the case of a sale of immovable property.<sup>3</sup>

3. Re-sale and applicability of Rule 71. — A purchaser who has defaulted in the payment of price is liable under Rule 71, for any loss which may happen on a re-sale.<sup>1</sup>

Synopsis

1. Irregularity in publishing and conducting sale of moveable property.

Other Topics (miscellaneous)

"At the hand of any other person." See Notes 1 and 2.

Scope of the Rule. See Note 1.

What are not irregularities. See Note 2.

1. Irregularity in publishing and conducting sale of moveable property. —

Rule 77, ante, provides that on payment of the purchase-money the sale of moveable property shall become absolute.<sup>1</sup> This rule provides that a sale of moveable property in execution of a decree cannot be set aside on the ground of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.<sup>2</sup> But it does not provide that a sale of moveable property shall in no case be set aside. Thus, if there is an express assertion in the proclamation of sale that the goods sold are the property of the judgment-debtor, then the purchaser, if he has not got that for which he paid the price, is entitled to have the sale set aside and to recover the purchase-money from the hands of the Sheriff or the execution creditor.<sup>3</sup> Where a judgment-debtor died after the issue of the sale proclamation and before sale and the sale was held without bringing on record his legal representatives, it was held that it was not a case of mere irregularity but that the sale was void and could be set aside under Section 47.<sup>4</sup> On this question, however, there is a conflict of decisions, for which see Note 12 to Section 50, ante.

In a sale of moveable property in execution of a decree, there is no warranty of title and all that is sold is the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor. The right, title and interest of the real owner remain unaffected and he is, therefore, entitled to recover the property or damages.<sup>5</sup>

2. Person injured may, however, sue for compensation. — Any person sustaining any injury by reason of an irregularity in conducting or publishing the sale may sue the person by whom the injury was caused, for compensation.<sup>1</sup>

Though this rule would enable a judgment-debtor also to sue for compensation, it must be read with Section 47 which bars a separate suit regarding any question arising between the parties in execution.<sup>2</sup>

3. Money decree is not moveable property. — A money decree is not moveable property within the meaning of this rule and therefore where such a decree is sold contrary to the procedure laid down in Rule 53 ante, the sale can be set aside on the ground of irregularities in the conduct of the sale.<sup>1</sup>

1. Delivery of debts. — Where a debt is sold, the method of delivery is, as provided in sub-rule (3), by a prohibitory order of the Court resembling that made on attachment and the purchaser cannot apply for possession under Rule 95, infra.<sup>1</sup>

2. Shares. — In the case of sale of shares in a company, when an order is issued under sub-rule (3) there is nothing further to be done by the transferee or by the Court and the company cannot permit the transfer of the shares to anybody else.<sup>1</sup>

What passes to the purchaser of shares at a court-sale is the right to the property and not an absolute right to have the transfers registered. Therefore the company has still a discretion to recognize such purchasers or not, as in the case of private purchasers.<sup>2</sup>

1. Execution of deed of transfer.—This rule is only permissive and, therefore, in order to effectuate the transfer of ownership of a share or of a negotiable instrument, a deed of transfer of the share or an endorsement of the negotiable instrument is not required by law.<sup>1</sup>

This rule also empowers a Court to cancel a previous endorsement made by the judgment-debtor in order to enable the auction-purchaser of a promissory note to realize the amount due under it.<sup>2</sup>

R. 83. [S. 305.] (1) Where an order for the sale of immoveable property has been made, if the judgment-debtor can satisfy the Court that there is reason to believe that the amount of the decree may be raised by the mortgage or lease or private sale of such property, or some part thereof, or of any other immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, the Court may, on his application, postpone the sale<sup>2</sup> of the property comprised in the order for sale on such terms and for such period as it thinks proper,<sup>3</sup> to enable him to raise the amount.

Postponement of sale to enable judgment-debtor to raise amount of decree.

(2) In such case the Court shall grant a certificate<sup>4</sup> to the judgment-debtor authorizing him<sup>2</sup> within a period to be mentioned therein, and notwithstanding anything contained in section 64,<sup>6</sup> to make the proposed mortgage, lease or sale :

Provided that all monies payable under such mortgage, lease or sale shall be paid, not to the judgment-debtor, but, save in so far as a decree-holder is entitled to set off such money under the provisions of rule 72, into Court<sup>5</sup> :

Provided also that no mortgage, lease or sale under this rule shall become absolute until it has been confirmed by the Court.<sup>7</sup>

(3) Nothing in this rule shall be deemed to apply to a sale of property directed to be sold in execution of a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage<sup>10</sup> of, or charge on, such property.

"Notwithstanding anything contained in S. 64." See Note 6.

Scope of rule. See Note 2.

"The amount of the decree may be raised." See Note 2.

1. Legislative changes. —

(1) The words "save in so far as a decree-holder is entitled to set off such money under the provisions of rule 72" in the first proviso to sub-rule (2) have been newly added. See also similar saving clauses in Rule 84, sub-rule (2) and Rule 85, infra.

(2) Sub-rule (3) is new. See Note 10, infra.

2. Postponement of sale. — A Court has to exercise its discretion in making an order for postponement of the sale to enable the judgment-debtor to raise money by private alienations.<sup>1</sup> It will not be exercising its discretion properly in making an order for postponement, where the judgment-debtor has had sufficient time to pay the decree amount,<sup>2</sup> or where there is no sufficient reason to believe that the amount due under the decree could be raised by any of the methods mentioned in the rule.<sup>3</sup> Where the sale has taken place in execution of the decree, the executing Court has no power to grant an application under this rule and is bound to confirm the sale subject to the provisions of Rule 92, infra.<sup>4</sup>

This rule only authorizes the Court to grant time to the judgment-debtor and does not give any authority to the Court to grant a lease or mortgage.<sup>5</sup>

This rule and Rules 84 to 88 (inclusive) are applicable to proceedings under the Chota-Nagpur Tenancy Act<sup>6</sup> but not to proceedings under the Acts noted below.<sup>7</sup>

3. "For such period as it thinks proper." — The postponement of the sale should be for a reasonable period and not unreasonably long.<sup>1</sup>

4. "Shall grant a certificate." — A mere order of the Court postponing the sale of the property and permitting the judgment-debtor to alienate the property privately is not sufficient to entitle the judgment-debtor to do so. The issue of a certificate to him under sub-rule (2) is an essential step in the procedure, and in the absence of such a certificate the transferee can get no title.<sup>1</sup>

5. "Shall be paid into Court." — Payment to the decree-holder's pleader under the orders of the Court is payment into Court, the pleader in such a case becoming the agent of the Court.<sup>1</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>3</sup>

6. Effect of private sale. — This rule qualifies the prohibition in Section 64 and on compliance with the conditions of this rule a private alienation, notwithstanding Section 64, becomes absolute even against all claims enforceable under the attachment.<sup>1</sup> Where, on 15th January 1911, a Court granted a certificate to a judgment-debtor under this rule for private sale of his properties, and on 24th January 1911 the properties were attached in execution of another decree, and on the 31st of January the Court confirmed the sale, it was held that the purchaser got an absolute title and the subsequent attachment was of no avail.<sup>2</sup> But the Madras High Court has held in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> that sub-rule (2) refers only to attachments in existence at the date of the certificate and does not apply to subsequent attachments so that an alienation made after such an attachment will not be protected.

In authorizing a sale under this rule, a Court cannot empower a judgment-debtor to transfer any higher interest than he has and bind the interests of others in the property.<sup>4</sup> A private alienation made after obtaining the sanction of the Court cannot affect a prior encumbrance already existing on the properties.<sup>5</sup>

An alienation effected by a judgment-debtor by virtue of a certificate granted under this rule is a private alienation, even though it does not become absolute unless it is confirmed by the Court and therefore it cannot be said that it is not liable to pre-emption under the provisions of the Punjab Pre-emption Act (I of 1913).<sup>6</sup>

7. Confirmation of sale by Court.—A sale effected privately is not a completed transaction until it is sanctioned and confirmed by the Court.<sup>1</sup> Until this is done, it would not be operative against claims enforceable under the attachment, but would be defeasible to that extent.<sup>2</sup> Where the sanction for private sale has been granted by two Courts executing different decrees, it is enough if the sale is confirmed by one Court.<sup>3</sup>

It is not necessary that any formal application should be made for the purpose of obtaining the Court's confirmation of a private transfer, nor is there any provision under which a formal order declaring such confirmation should be recorded.<sup>4</sup> It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> that it is extremely doubtful whether a private sale under this rule comes within the purview of Rule 92 infra, and that, even if Rule 92 governs this rule, there is no legal bar to the confirmation of a sale before the expiry of thirty days from the date of sale.

Where the approval of the Court has been obtained by misrepresentation or by the withholding of the material information, the Court will treat such misrepresentation of Court and balance paid to judgment-debtor—Purchaser cannot be ordered to pay over again the amount paid to the decree-holder but may be required to pay the amount paid to the judgment-debtor.)

or withholding of information as a fraud and will refuse to give effect to the private transfer as against claims enforceable under the attachment.<sup>6</sup>

8. Permission under Section 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act. — Where the judgment-debtor is a minor for whom a guardian has been appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, the certificate of the executing Court is not sufficient to validate a transfer under this rule; it is also necessary that the guardian should obtain the sanction of the Court that appointed him as guardian.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the matter for inquiry under this rule is the protection of the execution-creditor, while under Section 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act the matter to be considered is the benefit of the minor and therefore compliance with this rule should not render unnecessary the fulfilment of the requirements of Section 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act.

9. Rateable distribution. — Money paid into Court under sub-rule (2) is money paid under a pending execution application and is therefore liable to rateable distribution under Section 73 ante.<sup>1</sup> Where property is attached at the instance of several decree-holders, permission should not be granted under this rule to satisfy one of the decrees.<sup>2</sup>

10. Mortgage decrees — Sub-Rule (3). — This rule does not apply to cases in which property is directed to be sold in execution of a decree on a mortgage.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the creditor's right of sale rests on the mortgage decree, and not on the attachment in execution. The undermentioned cases<sup>2</sup> under the old Code holding that Section 305 corresponding to this rule applied to mortgage decrees also are no longer law under this Code, in view of the specific enactment of sub-rule (3).

"Shall pay immediately." See Note 4. "The property shall forthwith be re-sold." See Note 5.

1. "Declared to be purchaser."—The person to be declared purchaser under this rule is the bidder whose bid has been accepted.<sup>1</sup> There is no sale till the bid has been accepted by the competent authority.<sup>2</sup>

A bidder can withdraw his bid at any time before the property is knocked down to him.<sup>3</sup> A bid lapses by a higher bid being made<sup>4</sup> or by extraordinary delay in accepting it.<sup>5</sup> As to whether the acceptance is to be by the Court or the officer conducting the sale, see Note 2 below.

A person declared to be purchaser under this rule has, even before the confirmation of sale in his favour, sufficient interest in the property to prevent a forfeiture or preserve the title from destruction. Thus, where the property sold is the right of the judgment-debtor to obtain a re-conveyance of certain properties on paying a certain sum by a certain date, the person declared to be the purchaser under this rule can make a valid tender of such sum so as to prevent a forfeiture under the clause.<sup>6</sup>

2. Acceptance by Court, if necessary for completion of sale. — There is a conflict of opinion on this question and three different views have been expressed :

(a) A court-sale is not complete till the highest bid is accepted by the Court, though the officer conducting the sale may have knocked down the property in favour of a particular person as being the highest bidder.<sup>1</sup>

(b) The sale is complete as soon as the property is knocked down to the highest bidder by the officer conducting the sale.<sup>2</sup>

(c) The Court has a quasi revisional jurisdiction in the matter.<sup>3</sup> According to this view the sale is complete as against the purchaser as soon as the property is knocked down to him, and he cannot withdraw his bid thereafter, although the Court may, in its discretion, refuse to accept his bid and order a re-sale.

It has been held that in a Collector's sale the acceptance of the bid by the Collector is necessary for the completion of the sale.<sup>4</sup>

3. Deposit, payment of. — The payment of deposit under this rule cannot be insisted on before the property has been knocked down to the bidder.<sup>1</sup> But the officer conducting the sale may, if the circumstances justify such a course and in order to satisfy himself that he is a bona fide bidder, ask any bidder if he has the deposit money ready.<sup>2</sup> The deposit under this rule should be paid though no demand is made for it.<sup>3</sup>

4. Non-payment of deposit — Effect of. — The deposit under this rule must be made immediately after the purchaser is declared and must cover 25 per cent. of the purchase-money.<sup>1</sup> The officer conducting the sale has no authority to extend the time for the payment of the deposit.<sup>2</sup>

The failure to pay the deposit immediately as required by the rule does not render the sale void but only amounts to irregularity within O. 21 R. 90.<sup>3</sup> But a Court has no power to sell a property to a purchaser who does not pay for it. Thus, where a decree-holder-purchaser does not pay the balance of the purchase-money after deducting the decretal amount, the sale to him is void even though it may be confirmed by the Court.<sup>4</sup>

An auction-purchaser who had not paid the deposit under the rule at all, professed to transfer the property to another and on the latter paying the purchase-money the Court confirmed the sale in his favour. It was held by the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh<sup>5</sup> that the Court had no power to recognize the transferee from an auction-purchaser who had not paid the deposit at all.

It is submitted that the remark in the undermentioned case<sup>6</sup> that the date of sale is the date of deposit is not correct. The date of sale is the date on which the bid is accepted by the proper authority.<sup>7</sup> See Notes 1 and 2 above.

5. Re-sale. — On the failure of a purchaser to deposit 25 per cent. of the purchase-money under this rule, the property should be re-sold.<sup>1</sup> The re-sale should be held "forthwith";<sup>2</sup> otherwise the defaulting purchaser will not be liable under Rule 71 for the deficiency in price that may occur on such re-sale.<sup>3</sup> In the undermentioned Full Bench case,<sup>4</sup> the Madras High Court has held that "forthwith" in this rule means "as expeditiously as circumstances permit." The same view has also been held by the Nagpur High Court.<sup>5</sup>

Rule 87 infra does not apply to a re-sale under this rule and a fresh proclamation is not necessary for such a re-sale.<sup>6</sup> But, if in the circumstances of a particular case, the issue of a fresh sale proclamation is to the advantage of the defaulting purchaser, the fact that such proclamation is issued does not make the re-sale one not held "forthwith" within the meaning of this rule.<sup>7</sup>

The officer conducting the re-sale is not bound to commence it from the next highest bid below that made by the defaulter.<sup>8</sup> As to the procedure to be followed when objection is taken to the re-sale on the ground that the deposit was tendered but refused by the sale officer, see the undermentioned case.<sup>9</sup>

6. Sub-rule (2). — Sub-rule (2) is new.<sup>1</sup> It provides for the exemption of the decree-holder-purchaser with the Court's permission from making the deposit under this rule. The decree-holder-purchaser is not exempt in every case from making the deposit: the rule only gives the Court the power to exempt him from making the deposit. Hence, the deposit must be made<sup>2</sup> unless dispensed with by the Court.<sup>3</sup> The dispensation may be express or implied.<sup>4</sup>

An order dispensing with the deposit of 25 per cent. of the purchase-money may be made after the auction.<sup>5</sup> Where the decree-holder's application for being allowed to set off his decree-amount towards the purchase-money is pending, a failure to deposit the 25 per cent. does not render the sale a nullity.<sup>6</sup>

7. Interest. — Notwithstanding the deposit of 25 per cent. of the purchase-money under this rule, the decree-holder is entitled to interest on the entire decretal amount till the confirmation of the sale, because the decree-holder is not bound to withdraw the money before the sale is confirmed.<sup>1</sup>

8. Appeal. — An order of the Court directing the property to be re-sold on default of the auction-purchaser to deposit the 25 per cent. of the purchase-money under this rule is not appealable.<sup>1</sup> It has been held that in this respect it makes no difference that the auction-purchaser is the decree-holder.<sup>2</sup>

R. 85. [S. 307.] The full amount of purchase-money payable shall be paid by the purchaser into Court before the Court closes on the fifteenth day from the sale of the property:

PATNA

For the portion beginning with the words "the full amount" and ending with the words "sale of the property," substitute the following:

"The purchaser shall pay into Court the full amount of the purchase-money and shall also tender the stamp necessary for the certificate referred to in Rule 94 before the Court closes on the fifteenth day from the sale of the property."

1. Applicability of the Rule. — Where on an execution sale being confirmed in appeal, the purchaser who had withdrawn the purchase-money on the sale being set aside in the lower Court, is ordered to re-pay it, the time limit of fifteen days provided by this rule does not apply.<sup>1</sup>

2. "On the fifteenth day from the sale." — In calculating the period of fifteen days, the day of sale should be excluded.<sup>1</sup>

Payment into Government Treasury is equivalent to payment into Court for the purposes of this rule.<sup>2</sup> But where the money is sent through the Post Office, it will not be sufficient compliance with this rule if it does not reach the Court in time, for the Post Office is not an agent of the Court.<sup>3</sup>

Where a purchaser tendered the balance of the purchase-money on the last day with the chalan to the officer of the Court for the signature of the Judge and the chalan was returned only the next day when the amount was duly paid, it was held that there was sufficient compliance with the provisions of this rule.<sup>4</sup>

poundage is less than the decree-amount, the whole of the amount must be deemed to have been received eo instanti the sale is made, and there is no necessity for the purchaser to pay into Court any amount.<sup>1</sup> But if the amount of the bid is greater than the decree-amount, he may be excused from depositing the twenty-five per cent. on the date of sale, but will have to deposit the balance within fifteen days from the sale.<sup>2</sup> Where a decree-holder is permitted to bid subject to certain conditions and those conditions are not fulfilled, the Court can, either under Rule 86, infra or under its inherent powers, refuse to confirm the sale and may order a re-sale.<sup>3</sup>

A brought the properties of X to sale in court auction. B who had attached the same properties in execution of his decree for Rs. 14,000 against X purchased the properties for Rs. 31,000 and deposited 25 per cent. under Rule 85. He also applied that his decree amount should be allowed to be set-off against the balance of the purchase-money. He was allowed to do so, and he therefore deposited Rs. 10,000 on the fifteenth day. It was held that there was no failure to deposit the balance within the meaning of this rule.<sup>4</sup>

8. Extension of time for payment — Material irregularity. — The time for the payment of the balance of the purchase-money under this rule can be extended with the consent of all the parties concerned.<sup>1</sup> In the absence of such consent, the Court ought not to extend the time or accept a deposit made beyond time.<sup>2</sup> But where the Court does so extend the time, it is only an irregularity within the meaning of Rule 90, infra and does not render the sale a nullity.<sup>3</sup> If in such a case the sale is confirmed and the money is drawn by the decree-holder without objection, the judgment-debtor must be taken to have waived the irregularity, and the sale cannot be set aside by reason of such irregularity.<sup>4</sup>

| 1. Scope of the Rule.     | 3. Deficiency in re-sale. |
| 2. Forfeiture of deposit. | 4. Appeal.                |

1. Scope of the Rule. — Where the auction-purchaser fails to pay into Court the balance of purchase-money as required by Rule 85, it is the imperative duty of the Court to have the property re-sold.<sup>1</sup> The discretion under this rule is confined to forfeiture and not to the re-sale of the property.<sup>2</sup> Anyone who is interested in having the property re-sold may move the Court to do so; there is nothing to justify the view that the decree-holder alone can move the Court in the matter.<sup>3</sup>

The provisions of this rule do not apply to sales held in execution of decrees passed by the High Court of Calcutta in the exercise of its original jurisdiction, inasmuch as that Court has framed rules, under Section 129, regulating its own procedure.<sup>4</sup>

2. Forfeiture of deposit. — Under Section 308 of the old Code, it was held that that Section was imperative and that on default by the purchaser at a court-sale to deposit the purchase-money within fifteen days from the sale, the deposit made on the date of sale must be forfeited.<sup>1</sup> The word "shall" in the old Section has been replaced by the words "may, if the Court thinks fit." Therefore, under this rule, the Court has got a discretion to forfeit the initial deposit or not.<sup>2</sup> Where there is no question of re-sale, as where after the default by the purchaser the judgment-debtor pays off the decree-amount, it is not a proper case for ordering the forfeiture of the deposit.<sup>3</sup>

Where an auction-purchaser deposits a sum in excess of the twenty-five per cent. on the date of sale, the Court has jurisdiction to forfeit only the twenty-five per cent.<sup>4</sup>

1. Scope and object of the Rule. — The object of this rule is to enable co-sharers in undivided immovable property to keep out strangers if they so desire.<sup>1</sup> The rule provides, in substance, that a co-sharer of the immovable property of which a share is sold, is entitled to pre-empt that share when the highest bid is made by a person who is not a co-sharer.<sup>2</sup>

This rule does not apply when the property sold is not a share of undivided immovable property, but the right and interest of a mortgagee in such a share.<sup>3</sup> Nor does it apply to land sold in execution of the decree of a Revenue Court.<sup>4</sup>

This rule is applicable to sales under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (see Rule 83 Notes), and is unaffected by the Agra Pre-emption Act, II of 1922 (see Section 6), or by the Punjab Pre-emption Act, I of 1913 [see Section 2 (2)].

2. Co-sharer. — There is no right of pre-emption in the case of involuntary sales except as provided in this rule and therefore a usufructuary mortgagee, not being a co-sharer, is not entitled to claim the benefit of this rule.<sup>1</sup> A defeasible title to a share in immovable property acquired by a person does not give him the right to pre-empt another share in the same property as a co-sharer.<sup>2</sup>

Where several properties are sold in one lot, and a person who is a co-sharer in one of such properties only makes a bid, this rule does not apply.<sup>3</sup>

3. "Bid the same sum." — In order to enable a co-sharer to claim the benefit of this rule, it is not enough if he merely asserts his claim and offers to pay, at the time the sale is knocked down, the sum equal to that bid by the stranger purchaser; but he must make a distinct bid in the ordinary manner of offering bids.<sup>1</sup>

4. Duty of officer conducting the sale. — It is the duty of the officer conducting the sale to take notice of a claim of pre-emption made by a co-sharer under this rule and to receive the purchase-money, subject of course to any question which may be raised by any party interested in the sale as to the claimant's title to advance the claim.<sup>1</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>2</sup> where several properties had been ordered to be sold in one lot and a person claimed pre-emption in respect of one of such properties only, it was held that the sale officer had no jurisdiction to determine such claim and that if he did so, the proceedings could be questioned by the Civil Court.

Where the claimant has deposited the purchase-money and fulfilled the conditions of sale so far as he is concerned, the sale is not defeasible by reason of the failure of the bidder to complete the deposit of the purchase-money.<sup>3</sup>

purchaser and confirms the sale, a suit by the person against whom the order is made to set it aside will, it is conceived, be barred by general principles of res judicata. The High Court of Allahabad seems to be of the opinion that a confirmation of an execution sale can be made only under Rule 92, that therefore, a confirmation of the sale under this rule is also one under Rule 92, and that a suit would consequently be barred by sub-rule (3) of that rule.<sup>1</sup>

Section 310A was introduced in the old Code for the first time by Act V of 1894. It was held in the undermentioned cases<sup>1</sup> that Section 310A was applicable to execution proceedings pending on the date Act V of 1894 came into force.

• 2. Scope and object of the Rule.—The provisions of this rule are in the nature of an indulgence to the judgment-debtor; they give him a last chance of getting the sale set aside before confirmation upon the terms of satisfying the decretal debt and of paying compensation to the auction-purchaser for the loss of bargain.<sup>1</sup> The object of the rule is "not merely or not specifically to preserve the immovable property in the hands of the judgment-debtor, but to ensure, so far as may be possible, that immovable properties shall not, at court-sales, be sold at inadequate prices."<sup>2</sup>

It has been already mentioned in Note 2 to O. 21 R. 2 that once a court-sale has been duly effected in favour of a third person, it is not competent to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor to get rid of it by merely asserting that the decree has been adjusted or satisfied out of Court. The only means by which the sale can be avoided is by an application under this rule accompanied by the required deposit in Court; where no such application is made within the time limited, it is obligatory on the Court under Rule 92, to pass an order confirming the sale, notwithstanding the circumstance that the decree-holder had admitted satisfaction of the decree.<sup>3</sup> But if the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser agree and the decree is otherwise adjusted to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, the Court can set aside the sale under its inherent powers notwithstanding that the procedure prescribed by this rule has not been followed.<sup>4</sup> This rule has no application to a sale under O. 21 R. 32 to compensate a decree-holder for the disobedience by the judgment-debtor of a decree against him for restitution of conjugal rights.<sup>5</sup>

Under this rule, the Court is bound to set aside a sale when once the proper amount has been deposited in time by the person entitled to make the application.<sup>6</sup>

3. Applicability of this Rule to sales under mortgage decrees.—The words “sold under this Chapter” in Section 310A of the old Code gave rise to a conflict of opinion on the question whether that Section was applicable to sales under mortgage decrees. The High Courts of Allahabad, Bombay and Madras and the Judicial Commissioner’s Court of Oudh held that though the mortgaged properties were sold by virtue of a power given by the Transfer of Property Act, still the properties were sold under Chapter XIX (Execution of Decrees) of the Code and that Section 310A therefore applied to such sales.<sup>1</sup> The High Court of Calcutta, however, held a contrary view.<sup>2</sup> This conflict has now been set at rest by the substitution of the words “sold in execution of a decree” for the words “sold under this Chapter” and by the incorporation in the Code of provisions relating to mortgage decrees. It is now clear that the rule applies to sales in execution of mortgage decrees also.<sup>3</sup>

The High Court of Calcutta has held that this rule applies to sales in execution of mortgage decrees passed on its original side.<sup>4</sup>

4. Sales under decrees on award.—Where an award in a pending suit directs the sale of certain immovable properties, and a decree is passed in terms of the award, this rule applies to a sale held in pursuance of the terms of such award.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the sale is one in execution of the decree.

5. Sales by receiver.—A sale by the Official Receiver is not governed by this rule.<sup>1</sup> Nor does this rule apply to a sale by the Official Referee in a partnership suit, for the purpose of realizing the assets of the partnership.<sup>2</sup>

6. Sales under Rent Acts.—This rule does not apply to sales under the Bengal Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act (VIII of 1869)<sup>1</sup> or to sales under the Public Demands Recovery Act<sup>2</sup> or to proceedings under the Madras Estates Land Act, I of 1908 (see Section 192A) or to proceedings under the Bengal Patni Regulation, VIII of 1819 [see Section 14A (b)].<sup>3</sup>

Notes 6-8

The Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) contains a provision in Section 174 almost similar to this rule prescribing the procedure for setting aside sales in cases where a tenure or holding has been sold for arrears of rent. Under that Section, as it originally stood, the judgment-debtor alone was entitled to apply. Therefore, it was held that the application of a person other than the judgment-debtor came under the scope of this rule, provided he was otherwise entitled to apply under this rule.<sup>4</sup> This Act was amended by the Bengal Legislative Council by Act I of 1907, Section 54 which provided that Section 310A of the Code of 1882 (corresponding to this rule) shall not apply to sales under the Bengal Tenancy Act.<sup>5</sup> It has been further amended by the Bengal Council in 1928, providing that the judgment-debtor or any person whose interests are affected by the sale may apply. The Legislative Council of Eastern Bengal and Assam, to which territory also the Bengal Tenancy Act applies, has not amended this Act. Therefore, in cases arising in that Province the application of a person other than the judgment-debtor is governed by this rule.<sup>6</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup>

It was held that S. 310A applied to sales under the Landlord and Tenant Act (Bengal Act X of 1859).<sup>8</sup>

Similar provision is made in respect of sales of a tenure or holding for an arrear of rent under the Orissa Tenancy Act, II of 1913 (Section 228). Where the sale is in execution of a decree for an amount which is not really rent, there is no bar to the applicability of this rule.<sup>9</sup> enforcement of a mortgage<sup>2</sup> is not immovable property within the meaning of this rule. But the interest of a mortgagee in a usufructuary mortgage is immovable property for the purposes of this rule.<sup>3</sup> See also Notes to Order 21 Rule 54, ante.

7. Applicability of Order 9 to proceedings under this Rule. — An application to set aside a sale under this rule is a proceeding in execution and consequently the provisions of Order 9 do not apply to it.<sup>1</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>2</sup> a second application to set aside the sale after the dismissal for default of the first application, was treated as one for review.

O. 21 R. 89
Notes 8-11

Where a judgment-debtor was the owner of a house and of the land on which it stood, and the superstructure alone was sold in execution of a decree, it was held that it was immovable property and that therefore an application would lie under this rule to set aside the sale.<sup>4</sup>

See also Note 12 and Section 16 ante.

9. Court, meaning of. — The "Court" mentioned in this rule is the Civil Court and not the Court of the Collector or of the Mamlatdar to which execution has been transferred under Section 68, ante. Therefore, a deposit made in such Court is not a valid deposit.<sup>1</sup> But where an applicant deposits the amount required in the office of the Collector who had sold the property, and intimation is sent to the Civil Court that the money had been transferred to the Civil Court account, within thirty days of the date of the sale, the deposit is good and the provisions of this rule are complied with.<sup>2</sup>

The High Court of Bombay has, by virtue of its rule-making powers, framed a new Rule 91A which provides that where a decree has been sent for execution to a Collector and the sale has been held by him or his subordinate, an application and a deposit made under this rule, if made to the Collector or his subordinate, must be deemed to have been made to or in the 'Court' within the meaning of this rule, and that the sale can be set aside on the basis of such an application and deposit.<sup>3</sup>

10. Who may apply under this Rule. — Where an application is made by a person to set aside a sale under this rule on the allegation that he is a person entitled to apply and such allegation is challenged by the opposite party, the question must be determined by the Court.<sup>1</sup>

Under Section 310A of the old Code, "any person whose immovable property had been sold" was entitled to apply. The amending words in this rule, "any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale," have widened the scope of this rule by allowing persons who are not parties to the suit to apply to have a sale set aside.<sup>2</sup>

As to persons who are entitled to apply under this rule, see Notes 11 to 15 below.

11. "By virtue of a title acquired before such sale." — The words "by virtue of a title acquired before such sale" apply to the words "owning such property" as well as to the words "holding an interest therein."<sup>1</sup>

Note 12

12. "Any person owning such property or holding an interest therein."

A judgment-debtor who has not sold his property is clearly entitled to apply under this rule for setting aside the sale of his property. A purchaser from a mortgagor. judgment-debtor, who is bound by the decree, is also entitled to apply under this rule.<sup>1</sup> An interim receiver appointed under Section 20 of the Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920) after the execution sale of the insolvent's properties has no power to apply under this rule, as he cannot be said to be the owner "by virtue of a title acquired before such sale."<sup>2</sup> But where the interim receiver has been expressly authorized by the Court to make an application under this rule, he can do so. In such a case, the application will be deemed to be made on behalf of the owner of the property.<sup>3</sup>

A mortgagee of the property sold in execution of a decree is a person who has an interest therein by virtue of which he is competent to apply.<sup>4</sup> Under the old Code it was held that he was not a person whose immovable property has been sold, as his interest in the mortgaged property could not pass by the sale.<sup>5</sup> Under this rule, the word 'property' means tangible property (whether or not persons other than the judgment-debtor have any interest in it), and does not mean merely the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor alone.<sup>6</sup> Therefore, a mortgagee or lessee whose interests are not affected by the sale is also entitled to apply.<sup>7</sup>

Can a person who has purchased the property from the judgment-debtor before attachment or a person who claims by a title paramount to that of the judgment-debtor, apply to set aside a sale? It was held under the old Code that he could not, on the ground that the property was not sold as his.<sup>8</sup> Under the present Code there is a conflict of opinion, some cases holding that he can apply,<sup>9</sup> others that he cannot.<sup>10</sup> It is submitted that the latter view unduly restricts the scope of this rule.

Under the rule as amended by the Lahore High Court it is enough if the applicant claims interest at the time of making the application. He need not prove that he had an interest in the property before the sale.<sup>11</sup> The same is the law in the North-West Frontier Province.<sup>12</sup>

O. 21 R. 89
Notes 12-14

13. Transferee before court-sale. — A transferee from the judgment-debtor of immovable property sold in execution of a decree for money, after the attachment but before the court sale, is the owner of the property and can apply to set aside the sale.<sup>1</sup> Though, under Section 64 ante, the transfer may be void as against the claim under the attachment, that Section does not invalidate the transfer for all purposes. Under the old Code it was held that a judgment-debtor who has sold the property after attachment was also entitled to apply to set aside the sale.<sup>2</sup>

14. Transferee after court-sale. — Where the judgment-debtor transfers his property to a third person after the execution sale, but before confirmation thereof, the transferee is not a person who holds an interest in such property "by virtue of a title acquired before such sale." He is, therefore, not entitled to apply under this rule to set aside the sale of such property in execution of a decree.<sup>1</sup> But, can the judgment-debtor in such cases apply under this rule? Where the transfer is by way of a mortgage it is, of course, clear that the judgment-debtor would still be the owner of the equity of redemption and, therefore, will be entitled to apply.<sup>2</sup> Even where the transfer is by way of an absolute sale, it has been held by all the Courts except the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh that he can apply.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that, in such cases, the judgment-debtor must be deemed to own the property for the purpose of the proceedings under this rule. The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh has, however, held that he is not so entitled to apply.<sup>4</sup> It is submitted that this view is not correct. It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad in the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> that where, after the court-sale, the judgment-debtor executes a mortgage of the properties and the mortgagee and the judgment-debtor apply to set aside the sale, each depositing a portion of the amount, the two applications may be treated as one made by the judgment-debtor, notwithstanding that the mortgagee is not independently entitled to apply.

15. Other persons interested. — Apart from the class of persons already mentioned in Notes 11 to 14 above, the following persons are also entitled to apply under this rule :

- (1) A beneficial owner, in cases where the property has been sold in execution of a decree against his benamidar.<sup>1</sup>
- (2) A benamidar transferee from the judgment-debtor.<sup>2</sup>
- (3) A co-sharer in the property sold.<sup>3</sup>
- (4) Where the share of a member of a joint Hindu family is sold, the other members having an interest in the properties.<sup>4</sup>
- (5) Where property is sold in execution of a decree against a Hindu widow, the reversioner to the estate.<sup>5</sup> It is not necessary to have an interest de presenti.
- (6) An under-raiyat<sup>6</sup> or a dar mokararidar.<sup>7</sup>
- (7) Where the holding is sold in execution of a decree for arrears of rent due thereon a purchaser of a portion thereof.<sup>8</sup> Where the holding is, however, non-transferable there is a conflict of opinion.<sup>9</sup>

The following persons are not entitled to apply under this rule :

- (1) The holder of a money decree who has attached the property sold, is not a person who has an "interest in the property by virtue of a title acquired before such sale."<sup>10</sup>
- (2) A person having no title to the property and not in possession thereof, is not entitled to apply,<sup>11</sup> but a trespasser who has entered into possession before the court-sale holds an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale, even though his title has not been perfected or completed by prescription.<sup>12</sup>
- (3) A person in whose favour there is merely an agreement to sell the property cannot apply to have the sale set aside.<sup>13</sup>

17. Deposit and application. — An application for setting aside a sale is necessary before the Court can be called upon to act under this rule.<sup>1</sup> A mere deposit of the amount without an application in time, is not enough, and the sale cannot be set aside.<sup>2</sup> A mere lodgment schedule cannot be treated as an application within the meaning of this rule.<sup>3</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta<sup>4</sup> that where a judgment-debtor pays the requisite amount by a challan and prays that the execution may be closed, a separate application is not essential and that the challan which sets out the purpose is a sufficient compliance with this rule. An application for permission to deposit in Court the decree-amount and a sum equal to 5 per cent. of the purchase-money is an application to set aside the sale, even though there is no express prayer in the application to set aside the sale.<sup>5</sup> It has also been held that an application for challan or an application with a memo of deposit and its receipt is a proceeding within the meaning of Section 153 and can be amended by the inclusion of a prayer for setting aside a sale although the application for amendment is made beyond the period of limitation for an application to set aside the sale.<sup>6</sup>

The application may be oral or written.<sup>7</sup> It will not be rendered invalid by the tenant of the property sold but who has not executed his decree cannot apply under this rule.)

absence of a formal prayer for setting aside the sale.<sup>8</sup> Where the application does not disclose the nature of the interest of the applicant, the Court should not reject the application, but should direct the applicant to supply the necessary particulars.<sup>9</sup>

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>10</sup>

18. Failure to deposit full amount. — It has been already mentioned in Note 2 ante, that this rule is in the nature of a concession shown to the judgment-debtor. The applicant must, therefore, strictly comply with the requirements thereof and a sale will not be set aside unless the entire amount specified in sub-rule (1) is deposited within 30 days from the date of the sale.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a part payment coupled with an undertaking to pay the balance cannot be considered as a valid deposit.<sup>2</sup> But if the conditions of this rule are complied with, the failure to pay an additional amount to cover the poundage fee is a mere irregularity which will not prevent the Court from entertaining the application.<sup>3</sup>

An execution sale cannot be set aside under this rule on deposit of a part of the amount specified in the proclamation of sale, even though the decree-holder consents not to claim any further sum so far as that execution application is concerned.<sup>4</sup> Where, however, the amount mentioned in the proclamation of sale is deposited, the fact that the proclamation of sale was incorrectly drawn up and did not specify the full amount for the recovery of which the sale was ordered, will not render the deposit invalid.<sup>5</sup> A contrary view has been expressed in the undermentioned case.<sup>6</sup>

Sub-rule (3) does not mean that the applicant should deposit also costs and interests not covered by the proclamation, and a Court cannot refuse to set aside a sale merely because such costs and interests are not also deposited within time.<sup>7</sup> Nor can it refuse to set aside a sale merely because the amount due under another decree, the holder of which has applied for rateable distribution, has not been deposited.<sup>8</sup>

A decree against a father and son ordered the sale of the father's interest and the son's interest was to be sold only if there was a balance due after the sale of the father's interest. The father's interest was sold and then for the balance, the son's interest was also sold. The son thereupon deposited the balance for which his properties were sold and applied under this rule. It was held that he was not bound to deposit the whole of the decree amount and that his application was valid.<sup>9</sup>

19. Mistake in calculating the amount to be deposited. — Where the original deposit is deficient and it appears that the deficiency is due to a wrong calculation made by an officer of the Court and the applicant makes good the deficiency as soon as it is pointed out, though after thirty days have elapsed, is the deposit valid? It has been held that if the mistake is the act of the prescribed officer acting in accordance with the prescribed rules of the Court, then it will not affect the party.<sup>1</sup> Otherwise no relief can be given to a party even though he is misled by an officer of the Court.<sup>2</sup>

In the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> it was held that a trifling mistake as to four annas in making the deposit should be overlooked on the principle de minimis non curat lex — the law pays no regard to trifling matters.

20. Conditional deposit. — In order that a deposit under this rule may be valid, it must be unconditional.<sup>1</sup> If the applicant prevents the money from being available to the decree-holder forthwith and unconditionally, the deposit is bad and will not entitle him to have the sale set aside.<sup>2</sup> Since this rule is inconsistent with the notion that a payment into Court may be made under protest or subject to conditions, the Court has no power to order that the decree-holder should draw out the money only on his executing a security bond.<sup>3</sup> If, as soon as an objection to the conditional deposit is taken, the applicant withdraws his condition, the money becomes available for payment to the decree-holder before he has made any attempt to withdraw it and therefore the deposit is not invalid.<sup>4</sup>

Where a deposit is properly made under this rule, but subsequently an application is made that the money may be retained in Court pending the result of an application under O. 9 R. 13, the subsequent condition cannot invalidate the deposit which was originally good.<sup>5</sup>

21. A sum equal to five per cent. — Sub-rule (1) clause (a) provides that the deposit should include a sum equal to five per cent. of the purchase-money for payment to the purchaser, and a sale cannot be set aside unless the five per cent. is also deposited.<sup>1</sup> That amount is intended partly as a solatium to the purchaser for the loss of that which is, perhaps, a good bargain.<sup>2</sup> A decree-holder-purchaser is as much entitled to that solatium as an outside purchaser.<sup>3</sup> To hold otherwise would be to read into the rule after the word 'purchaser' the words 'if such purchaser be not the decree-holder.'<sup>4</sup> But a mere deposit of the five per cent. without the decree amount is not a valid deposit.<sup>5</sup>

Where one of two joint decree-holders obtains permission to bid for himself alone and not on behalf of the other, and purchases the property and thereafter the sale is set aside under this rule, the compensation amount of five per cent. should go exclusively to him and not to the other decree-holder.<sup>6</sup>

22. Less any amount received. — The amount that can be deducted under clause (b) of sub-rule (1) need not have been received by the decree-holder before the sale.<sup>1</sup> Nor need such amount have been paid to him through the Court.<sup>2</sup>

If, after the proclamation of sale is drawn up, the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor adjust the decree in full or in part, the adjustment is tantamount to a receipt of the amount by the decree-holder and it is not necessary that that amount should be deposited when applying to set aside a sale under this rule.<sup>3</sup> The expression "any amount which may have been received by the decree-holder" in sub-rule (1), clause (b) means money actually received by the decree-holder and does not include payment of the sale proceeds into Court,<sup>4</sup> which is not available to the decree-holder until the sale is confirmed.

Certain properties divided into two lots, A and B, were ordered to be sold to realize a sum of Rs. 843-9-9. Properties A and B fetched Rs. 420 and Rs. 584 respectively at the sale. The judgment-debtor paid into Court Rs. 452-13-0 and applied to have the sale of lot B set aside. This amount would have sufficed to satisfy the requirements of the rule if the Rs. 420 for which lot A was sold could be deducted from the decretal amount and if the five per cent. could be calculated on the purchase money of lot B alone. It was held that as the decree-holder had not actually received the sum of Rs. 420 the deposit was not full and the sale could not be set aside.<sup>5</sup>

O. 21 R. 89
Notes 22-23

On the same principle a judgment-debtor is not entitled to take advantage of any deposit made by his co-judgment-debtor which was made not conjointly with him, but independently of him.<sup>6</sup>

But where money is deposited by the judgment-debtor in Court and it is available to the decree-holder without any obstacle of law, then does that money amount to receipt by the decree-holder? According to the High Court of Allahabad it does. Thus, where the judgment-debtor deposited Rs. 5000 in Court towards the decree on the date of sale, and subsequently on the same date the properties were sold and the judgment-debtor thereafter deposited under this rule Rs. 71,000 which, together with the Rs. 5000 already deposited was the decree-amount, it was held that the amount of Rs. 5000 must be held to be "received" by the decree-holder, and the deposit of the balance was proper.<sup>7</sup> According to the High Court of Madras,<sup>8</sup> on the other hand, "received" does not mean "virtually received" or "constructively received" and an amount which has been deposited in Court cannot be said to have been "received" within the meaning of this rule. A similar view has also been held by the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court.<sup>9</sup>

Where a sale proclamation specified the entire amount due under the decree and also contained a direction that certain items were to be sold for only a part of the decree amount and after sale the persons interested in such items applied to set aside the sale on their depositing the amount for which their property was sold together with the five per cent. due to the purchaser, it was held that the deposit was valid.<sup>10</sup> The reason is that in such a case the words "amount specified in the sale proclamation" can only mean the amount which is to be realized by the sale of the particular properties.

23. "For payment to the decree-holder." — The word 'decree-holder' in this rule means the decree-holder for the satisfaction of whose decree the sale was ordered and does not include other decree-holders who may be entitled to claim rateable distribution under Section 73. Therefore, it is not necessary for the applicant to deposit into Court the amounts due to the other decree-holders claiming rateable distribution.<sup>1</sup> There is a conflict of decisions as to whether money deposited under this rule will be 'assets' available for rateable distribution among the other decree-holders of the judgment-debtor. The undermentioned decisions<sup>2</sup> have held that such money will not be 'assets' available for rateable distribution under Section 73, the reason being that the money has been paid for a specific purpose. But the contrary view has been held in the undermentioned decisions.<sup>3</sup> In view of the discussion in Note 4 to Section 73 ante, it is submitted that the latter view is more correct. Where a decree is attached by two persons who are both substituted for the decree-holder-defendant and a sale held in execution of the attached decree at the instance of one of them is set aside under this rule, both of them will be regarded as the "decree-holder" and will be entitled to the amount deposited.<sup>4</sup> Where the property of a judgment-debtor is attached in execution of several decrees and a sale in execution of one of the decrees is set aside by a deposit, the sale does not put an end to the attachment made at the instance of the other decree-holders.<sup>5</sup>

Where, in a mortgage suit, a decree for sale in favour of the plaintiff was passed subject to the payment of a certain prior charge in favour of a defendant out of the sale proceeds, and the sale in execution was set aside under this rule by one of the subsequent mortgagees, the decree-holder was held entitled to draw the whole amount without any deduction being made on account of the prior charge.<sup>6</sup> The reason is that there were no sale proceeds out of which the prior charge was to be paid, as the sale was set aside.

Upon a sale being set aside under this rule, the decree-holder is not entitled to claim interest from the date of sale till the date of deposit.<sup>7</sup>

24. Sub-rule (2). — The object of this sub-rule is to prevent a person who intends to impeach a sale under Rule 90 from, at the same time, obtaining the benefit of the concession granted by this rule.<sup>1</sup> It has been held by the Allahabad High Court<sup>2</sup> that where applications under Rules 89 and 90 made by the same person are pending, the Court ought to call upon the applicant to make his election as to which application he will prosecute. But this view has been dissented from by the Nagpur High Court<sup>3</sup> which has held that it is for the applicant to withdraw the application under Rule 90 and not for the Court to ask him to do so. The fact that an applicant makes an application under Rule 90 is not a permanent disqualification and therefore he may carry on the application under this rule, if the other application has been withdrawn.<sup>4</sup> A person whose application under Rule 90 is dismissed is also not disqualified from subsequently applying under this rule.<sup>5</sup> An application made by a person under this rule is not barred by the pendency of an application under Rule 90 by another person.<sup>6</sup> But where the same person first applies under Rule 90 and then applies under Rule 89, the latter application is not competent and cannot be entertained so long as the previous application is pending.<sup>7</sup>

28. Limitation. — An application under this rule to set aside a sale is governed by Article 166 of the Limitation Act and must be made on or before the thirtieth day from the date of the sale.<sup>1</sup> The starting point of limitation for such an application is the date on which the sale is completed, that is, the day on which the highest bid is accepted and the twenty-five per cent. of the purchase money is deposited<sup>2</sup> and not the date on which the sale is confirmed.<sup>3</sup> The provisions of Section 14 of the Limitation Act are not applicable to an application under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

As to the effect of the failure to implead the auction-purchaser and to issue notice to him within thirty days, see Notes to Order 21 Rule 92.

Sub-rule (2) of Rule 92, infra and the words "may apply . . . . on his depositing" in this rule show that not only the application, but the deposit also must be made within thirty days from the date of the sale.<sup>5</sup> If the deposit is not made in time, the Court has no power to extend the time either under Section 148 of the Code or under Section 5 of the Limitation Act.<sup>6</sup> It has, however, been held by the Oudh Chief Court in the undermentioned case<sup>7</sup> that where a decree-holder who is himself the auction-purchaser consents to accept a deposit made by the judgment-debtor in full satisfaction of his decree and consents to have the sale set aside on receipt of such deposit, it is open to the Court to set aside the sale although the deposit was made beyond thirty days from the date of the sale.

Where the applicant, without any fault of his own, is not able to deposit the money into Court, on account of the fact that the challan was not signed by the Judge and returned to him in time or on account of some other act of the Court, the deposit made on the next day will be a valid deposit on the principle expressed by the maxim actus curiæ neminem gravabit—an act of Court shall prejudice no man.<sup>8</sup> Where the Court is closed on the last day for making the deposit it may be made on the next re-opening day by virtue of the provisions of Section 10 of the General Clauses Act.<sup>9</sup>

The provisions of Section 7 of the Limitation Act do not apply to the period of thirty days for making a deposit under this rule, as that period is not fixed by any provision of the Limitation Act, but by a provision in this Code, namely, Rule 92, infra. Consequently a minor is not entitled, by reason of his disability, to an extension of the period under Section 7 of the Limitation Act.<sup>10</sup>

Where A had applied under the rule, but the sale was set aside on the application of B under Rule 90 infra, whereupon A withdrew his application which was dismissed as withdrawn and got back the amount deposited, but subsequently B's application was dismissed by the appellate Court and the sale confirmed, it was held that A could not claim to revive the original application made by him by re-depositing the amount after limitation.<sup>11</sup>

29. Appeal.— There was no provision in the old Code for an appeal against an order under Section 310A. Being, however, a decision on a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, it was held that such an order would be appealable if the decree-holder was the purchaser, inasmuch as the question was one between the parties to the suit.<sup>1</sup> But where the auction-purchaser was a stranger, there was a conflict of opinion as to the appealability of the order.<sup>2</sup> See Note 19 to Section 47 for a fuller discussion.

Under this Code an order setting aside a sale or refusing to set aside a sale under Rule 92 is appealable as an order under Order 43 Rule 1 clause (j).<sup>3</sup> An appeal will lie even in a case where the sale is in execution of a small cause decree, transferred to the original side for execution against immovable property.<sup>4</sup> The forum of appeal depends upon the value for jurisdiction stated in the suit in which the decree has been passed.<sup>5</sup> No second appeal will lie from an order under this rule read with Rule 92, by virtue of the provisions of Section 104.<sup>6</sup>

Even though the matter may fall under Section 47 (in cases where the decree-holder is the purchaser) the order will not be appealable as a decree under this Code, as the definition of decree in Section 2 excludes even an order under Section 47 if it is appealable as an order. See Note 2 to Section 2, sub-section (2).

In cases under Section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act an appeal lies as from a decree where the decree-holder is the purchaser,<sup>7</sup> but not where such purchaser is a stranger.<sup>8</sup> But the Bengal Legislature has in 1928 amended Section 174 of that Act by adding a clause providing for an appeal under that Section in such cases.

When an application under this rule has been dismissed for default and an application for restoration thereof has been unsuccessful, no appeal lies against the order refusing to restore the application.<sup>9</sup>

An order confirming the sale is tantamount to a refusal to set aside the sale on the application of the judgment-debtor, and is therefore appealable.<sup>10</sup>

No second appeal lies against an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale under this rule.<sup>11</sup>

On a dispute between a person (not the judgment-debtor) who had applied under this rule to set aside a sale and the decree-holder, the latter's application to withdraw the money deposited by the former was refused. It was held that the matter did not fall under Section 47 and so was not appealable.<sup>12</sup>

30. Revision.— Where a Court refuses to entertain an application, under this rule, of a person who is entitled to apply, on the ground that the applicant has no locus standi to apply or allows the application of a person who has not the legal character specified in this rule, is the order revisable by the High Court? on this point.<sup>2</sup> In a recent decision of that Court<sup>3</sup> it has been held that where a decree-holder, though his decree has been fully satisfied, fails to enter satisfaction and fraudulently brings the property to sale and the mortgagee of the property makes a payment under this rule to avoid the sale, the payment so made can be recovered back by the mortgagee under Section 72 of the Contract Act. It is pointed out in the decision that in such cases there is no outstanding decree as contemplated by this rule.

Where the deposit is made by one of several judgment-debtors or by a person entitled to apply under this rule and the sale is set aside in consequence, the person making the deposit is entitled to sue the other persons liable to pay the decree-amount for contribution or for re-imbursement as the case may be.<sup>4</sup> The High Court of Madras has held in the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> that where the sale is set aside at the instance of a purchaser subsequent to the court-sale, the payment made by him is not lawful within the meaning of Section 70 of the Contract Act, even though he was allowed by the Court to apply and, therefore, he cannot sue for compensation.

ALLAHABAD

For the words "Provided that no" read the words "Provided that—

(a) no . . . . . or fraud;"

and add the following proviso:

"(b) no such application shall be entertained upon any ground which could have been taken by the applicant on or before the date on which the sale proclamation was drawn up."

CALCUTTA

Add the following to sub-rule (1):

"or on the ground of failure to issue notice to him as required by Rule 22 of this Order."

Cancel the proviso and, substitute therefor the following:

"Provided—

(ii) that no sale shall be set aside on the ground of any defect in the proclamation of sale at the instance of any person who after notice did not attend at the drawing up of the proclamation or of any person in whose presence the proclamation was drawn up, unless objection was made by him at the time in respect of the defect relied upon."<sup>1</sup>

LAHORE

Add the following proviso:

"Provided that no such sale be set aside on the ground which the applicant could have put forward before the sale was conducted."<sup>1</sup>

MADRAS

After the first paragraph and before the present proviso to the rule, insert the following:

"Provided that the Court may, before admitting the application, call upon the applicant either to furnish security to the satisfaction of the Court for an amount equal to that mentioned in the sale warrant or that realized by the sale, whichever is less, or to deposit such amount in Court:

Provided also that the security furnished or the deposit made as aforesaid, shall

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "or any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets" after the word "decree-holder" have been newly added. See Note 7.
2. The words "or whose interests are affected by the sale" have been substituted for the words "or any person whose immovable property has been sold." See Notes 6 and 8.
3. The words "or fraud" have been newly added after the word "irregularity." See Notes 37 and 50.
4. The words "unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied" have been substituted for the words "unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court." See Note 40.

2. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — The rule provides for the setting aside of sales in execution on the ground of material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting them. The auction-purchaser at an execution sale has no absolute right to its being confirmed when there is an irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting it; if the irregularity or fraud is a material one and has caused substantial injury to any party, the sale will be set aside at the instance of that party<sup>1</sup> even though the purchaser be a stranger.<sup>2</sup>

Before a sale can be so set aside, the following conditions must be satisfied, viz. —

- (1) There must be an application for the purpose.<sup>3</sup> The Court cannot set aside the sale under its inherent powers<sup>4</sup> especially when it is barred by limitation.<sup>5</sup> But the application need not be accompanied by a deposit as is necessary for an application under Rule 89.<sup>6</sup>
- (2) The application must be one under this rule. A sale cannot be set aside under this rule on an application made under Rule 89.<sup>7</sup>
- (3) The application must be by one or other of the persons specified in the rule.<sup>8</sup>
- (4) The application must be made to the Court executing the decree. As to the power of the Collector to set aside a sale in cases where the execution of a decree has been transferred to him, see Note 6 to Section 70, ante.
- (5) The application must be based on an irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale.<sup>9</sup>

O. 21 R. 90
Note 2

Thus, the following objections are outside the scope of the rule, viz.—

- (i) An objection that the sale is illegal and therefore null and void.<sup>10</sup>
- (ii) An objection that the Court had no jurisdiction to execute the decree or sell the property.<sup>11</sup>
- (iii) An objection that the property is not legally saleable.<sup>12</sup>
- (iv) An objection that the decree is invalid,<sup>13</sup> for example, on the ground of fraud in obtaining the decree.<sup>14</sup>
- (v) An objection that the execution is barred by limitation<sup>15</sup> or that no execution ought to have issued under the decree.<sup>16</sup>
- (6) The applicant must prove not only irregularity or fraud in the publishing or conducting of the sale but must also show that he has sustained substantial injury thereby.<sup>17</sup>

An application under the rule cannot be disposed of summarily, without any investigation.<sup>18</sup> Opportunity must be given to either party to adduce evidence in respect of the several allegations made.<sup>19</sup> The proceeding under this rule is a judicial one,<sup>20</sup> and the decision must be based on findings arrived at on legal evidence.<sup>21</sup>

It is open to the parties to compromise the proceedings.<sup>22</sup> In such a case all the parties affected must be parties to the compromise.<sup>23</sup> The judgment-debtor and the decree-holder cannot, by a compromise between themselves, have the sale set aside behind the back of the auction-purchaser.<sup>24</sup>

An execution sale vitiated by irregularity or fraud should ordinarily be set aside in its entirety<sup>25</sup> except when the sale is by separate lots<sup>26</sup> in which case only the sale of the lots so vitiated will be set aside.<sup>27</sup> (See also Note 43a.)

Note 2

The effect of setting aside a sale under the rule is to restore the parties to the position which they occupied immediately before the sale.<sup>28</sup> If the purchaser has got into possession after the sale, the judgment-debtor can be put back in possession by way of restitution.<sup>29</sup> In proper cases he can be awarded compensation for the loss of profits during the period he was out of possession.<sup>30</sup> Conversely, the purchaser can recover from the judgment-debtor any money which he might have paid bona fide in order to save and preserve the property;<sup>31</sup> and if there was no irregularity or fraud for which he was responsible, he can also be awarded interest on the purchase-money deposited by him.<sup>32</sup>

The rule applies also to sales in execution of mortgage decrees.<sup>33</sup> The principle of the rule is also applicable to the following sales, viz. —

- (1) Sales by receivers appointed by Court.<sup>34</sup>
- (2) Sales under the Bengal Tenancy Act.<sup>35</sup>
- (3) Sales under the Madras Rent Recovery Act, VIII of 1865.<sup>36</sup>

The rule does not apply to sales held by the Official Receiver under the Provincial Insolvency Act.<sup>37</sup> It has also been held to be inapplicable to sales under the Madras Estates Land Act.<sup>38</sup> Again, it has been held that where, as the result of the compulsory winding up of a company, the official liquidator sells a decree standing in the name of the directors by auction and the liquidator assigns the decree to the purchaser with the sanction of the Court, this rule does not apply and the Court has no power to set aside the sale.<sup>39</sup>

As to whether an application under this rule can be filed after confirmation of the sale, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>40</sup>

under Section 47 or this rule, see Notes 51 and 55 to Section 47 ante, and the undermentioned cases.<sup>41</sup>

3. Immovable property.—A house attached to land is “immovable property.”<sup>1</sup> A debt secured by a mortgage of immovable property or a decree thereon is only moveable property and this rule does not apply to a sale thereof in execution.<sup>2</sup> It has, however, been held in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> that mortgagee rights as well as the mortgage debt are immovable property. See also Section 16, Note 4 and O. 21 R. 54.

4. Sale will not be set aside unless application is made under this Rule.
— See Note 2 above.

5. Who may apply under the Rule.—Under the old Code the right to apply under the corresponding Section was limited to the decree-holder and to persons whose property had been sold.<sup>1</sup> Under the present rule, however, the right is conceded to —

- (1) the decree-holder;
- (2) any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of the assets; and
- (3) any person whose interests are affected by the sale.

Where A who holds a decree against B, attaches a decree held by B against C, and as attaching creditor executes B's decree, and C's properties are sold in such execution, B will be considered to be a decree-holder entitled to apply under the rule.<sup>2</sup>

Where after making an application under the rule the applicant dies, his legal representative can continue the proceedings.<sup>3</sup>

See also Notes 6 to 9 below.

6. Auction-purchaser. — Under the old Code an auction-purchaser could not apply under this rule as he was neither a decree-holder nor “a person whose immovable property has been sold.”<sup>1</sup> In the present rule the expression “or any person whose interests are affected by the sale” has been newly introduced. Does this expression include an auction-purchaser? Yes, according to the High Courts of Madras, Allahabad, Patna and Nagpur, the reason being that the word “interests” is not confined to interest prior to the sale but includes “interest” created by the sale itself.<sup>2</sup> The High Courts of Calcutta<sup>3</sup> and Lahore<sup>4</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind<sup>5</sup> have, on the other hand, held that the "interests" referred to in the rule are interests independent of the sale and not such as come into existence as a result of the sale. The Bombay High Court has also held a similar view.<sup>6</sup>

The decisions of the High Court of Rangoon<sup>7</sup> are conflicting on the point.

7. Persons entitled to rateable distribution. — Although a person entitled to rateable distribution had not been specified in Section 311 of the old Code as a person entitled to apply thereunder, such right had been conceded to him on the ground that he was a "decree-holder."<sup>1</sup> The present rule specifically includes such persons.<sup>2</sup>

Persons entitled to dividends under the Provincial Insolvency Act are not "persons entitled to rateable distribution" within the meaning of the rule, and cannot therefore apply to set aside execution sales.<sup>3</sup>

8. "Any person whose interests are affected by the sale." — The expression "any person whose immovable property has been sold" in the old Section 311 was interpreted by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court to mean "any person whose interests are affected by the sale."<sup>1</sup> The present rule gives effect to this view.

The judgment-debtor is a person whose "interests are affected by the sale."<sup>2</sup>

The 'interest' need not necessarily be a proprietary or a possessory interest; it may be a pecuniary or other interest.<sup>3</sup> Thus, an attaching creditor in whose favour a decree has been passed is a person 'whose interests are affected by the sale' within the meaning of this rule.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, where a mortgage decree was passed against A and B, and the sale of the properties of A was postponed until the sale of the properties of B, and the properties of B were sold for an inadequate price, it was held that A was a person whose interests were affected by the sale.<sup>5</sup> There is a conflict of decisions as to whether a person who has merely obtained an attachment before judgment and in whose favour a decree has not yet been passed can be said to be a person having any such interest. It has been held by the Madras High Court<sup>6</sup> that such a person is one whose interests are affected by the sale within the meaning of the rule. But the Calcutta High Court has held a contrary view.<sup>7</sup> It is not necessary that the applicant should have a present interest in the property;<sup>8</sup> a reversioner to a Hindu widow's estate<sup>9</sup> or a person who is entitled to specific performance of a contract to sell the property<sup>10</sup> can apply under this rule. Similarly, a defaulting auction-purchaser who would be liable to make good the deficiency on a re-sale, and whose liability is only a contingent one, can apply under this rule.<sup>11</sup> But whatever the nature of the interest might be, it must be in existence at the time when the sale takes place. If it is created after the sale, it cannot be affected by the sale. Thus, a person purchasing the property after the execution sale cannot apply under this rule.<sup>12</sup> Similarly, a decree-holder who attaches the property after the court-sale and before confirmation of the sale has no locus standi to apply under this rule to set aside the sale.<sup>13</sup>

The following persons have been held entitled to apply as being persons "whose interests are affected by the sale" —

- (1) A real owner of property sold in execution of a decree against his benamidar.<sup>14</sup>
- (2) A judgment-debtor who has sold away his property.<sup>15</sup>
- (3) The legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor.<sup>16</sup>
- (4) Where the judgment-debtor is a minor, his guardian.<sup>17</sup>
- (5) Where the judgment-debtor is a ward of Court, the Court of Wards.<sup>18</sup>
- (6) Where he is an adjudicated insolvent, the Official Receiver.<sup>19</sup>

(ii) that substantial injury has resulted to the applicant thereby.<sup>3</sup>

A sale which is illegal and void is not within the contemplation of this rule. Such a sale need not in fact be set aside at all and can be ignored.<sup>3</sup> Nor need any injury be shown to have been sustained by reason of such sale.<sup>4</sup> Where the decree-holder is the purchaser, it is open to the judgment-debtor under Section 47 to attack a sale on grounds other than those specified in this rule.<sup>5</sup>

In determining what is illegal and what is irregular, it may be remarked that the distinction is one of degree.<sup>6</sup> As a general rule, in order to establish an illegality there must be shown some disregard of a positive prohibition of the law.<sup>7</sup>

See Note 12 to Section 115, ante for a fuller discussion on this point.

11. Material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.—The term “irregularity” means “not being in conformity to some recognized rule” and in the present context it means “not being in conformity to the rules proscribed for regulating execution sales.”<sup>1</sup> The material irregularity referred to in this rule is an irregularity in the procedure to be followed before property is put up for sale. It does not include the irregularity of selling property not belonging to the judgment-debtor.<sup>2</sup> The expression “publishing or conducting the sale” refers respectively to the proclamation of sale under Rule 66 and to the action of the sale officer.<sup>3</sup> The words “conducting the sale” do not refer to anything done before the sale or any proceedings unconnected with the actual carrying out of the sale.<sup>4</sup> The material irregularity complained of must be one on the part of the Court or its officer.<sup>5</sup>

12. Omission to attach property and irregularity in attaching property before sale.—It was originally held by the High Court of Allahabad<sup>1</sup> that a regularly perfected attachment was an essential preliminary to sales in execution of simple money-decrees and that where there was no such attachment the sale was void and not merely voidable. In view of the decision of the Privy Council in Tassaduk v. Ahmad, I. L. R. 21 Calcutta 66, it has now been held by the said High Court that the absence of attachment is only a material irregularity which would not render the sale ipso facto void.<sup>2</sup> The same view has been held by other High Courts also.<sup>3</sup>

The question next arises whether, in cases in which it has been held that the absence of attachment is only a material irregularity, it is an irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale within the meaning of this rule. According to the High Courts of Calcutta and Rangoon, it is not.<sup>4</sup> The reason, it is conceived, is that such an irregularity is one which is antecedent to the publishing and conducting of the sale and, therefore, will be a ground for a proceeding only under Section 47. The High Courts of Allahabad, Lahore and Madras have, on the other hand, held that it is an irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale.<sup>5</sup> The publication of the attachment is a step leading up to the publication of the sale, the actual proclamation of sale being a notice to the public that the sale is to take place upon a particular date. The absence of attachment may, therefore, be deemed to be a material irregularity in the publishing of the sale.<sup>6</sup>

Where there has been an attachment, an error in the warrant of such attachment<sup>7</sup> or the absence of notice of the attachment to the judgment-debtor<sup>8</sup> would only be mere irregularities which will not vitiate the sale.

13. Omission to make an order for sale. — The omission to pass an order absolute for sale under Section 89 of the Transfer of Property Act in a mortgage decree was held in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> to be not an irregularity in publishing or conducting a sale but one antecedent to it and, therefore, did not fall within this rule.

14. Omission to issue notice. — An omission to issue notice under Rule 22 is an irregularity in proceedings which are anterior to the publishing or the conduct of the sale.<sup>1</sup> It also goes to the root of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree and renders the sale illegal and void.<sup>2</sup> It is therefore not a matter coming under this rule. In the undermentioned cases,<sup>3</sup> however, it has been held that want of a notice under O. 21 R. 22 is a ground for setting aside a sale under this rule. (For a full discussion of the subject, see Order 21 Rule 22 Note 5.)

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the non-service of notice under Rule 66 will be a ground for setting aside a sale under this rule. According to the High Court of Madras,<sup>4</sup> the irregularity is not one relating to the publication or the conduct of the sale and the question can be considered only under Section 47. The Chief Court of Lower Burma<sup>5</sup> has held that the absence of such a notice is more than an irregularity and renders the sale void. The High Courts of Calcutta and Lahore and the Judicial Commissioner's Courts of Nagpur and Peshawar have held that it is an irregularity in publishing the sale.<sup>6</sup> The onus of proving that notice under Rule 66 was not properly served is on the judgment-debtor.<sup>7</sup>

Where no notice under Rule 66 is required to be given, as where a fresh proclamation is ordered to issue under Rule 69, the non-issue of notice is no ground for setting aside a sale under this rule.<sup>8</sup>

The absence of notice prescribed by O. 21 R. 16 is not a mere irregularity but affects the jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>9</sup>

A sale in execution of a decree pending an insolvency petition against the judgment-debtor is not bad for want of notice to the interim receiver.<sup>10</sup>

Non-publication of the notices prescribed by Regulation VIII of 1819 in cases of putni sales has been held to be a material irregularity.<sup>11</sup>

15. Irregularities in publishing the sale — Omission to publish or irregularity in publishing sale proclamation. — The failure to publish the sale proclamation is an irregularity within this rule;<sup>1</sup> so is an irregularity in the preparation and service thereof.<sup>2</sup> As has been seen in the Notes to Rule 67 ante, the proclamation should be published on the spot<sup>3</sup> and a copy of the proclamation should be affixed to a conspicuous portion of the property,<sup>4</sup> and a failure to do the one or the other will be an irregularity within this rule. If the properties are situated in several villages or are distinct, the failure to proclaim the sale at each village or property will be an irregularity.<sup>5</sup> If, however, the properties are sold in lots and they are sufficiently separated from each other, the affixture of the proclamation on one of such lots may

16. Misdescription of property. — A mere misdescription of property in the sale proclamation where the parties concerned knew what had been attached and sold, is a mere irregularity which would not necessarily invalidate a sale.<sup>1</sup> But a fundamental misdescription of the property which has misled the purchaser will be a ground for setting aside the sale.<sup>2</sup> The principle of caveat emptor cannot apply to such cases.<sup>3</sup>

The non-specification of the share of the judgment-debtor in the property sold is also a material irregularity.<sup>4</sup>

See also the undermentioned decision.<sup>5</sup>

An attachment is not an encumbrance on the property and hence an omission to mention an attachment in a sale proclamation is not a material irregularity.<sup>3</sup>

20. Other mistakes in the sale proclamation. — Where the sale proclamation advertised the sale of property in satisfaction of the whole decree amount but as a matter of fact part of the decree had been satisfied, it was held in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that it was only an irregularity and did not render the sale a nullity.

21. Omission to beat drum. — Omission to have the drum beaten at the time of the proclamation of sale as required by O. 21 Rr. 54 and 67 is a material irregularity within the meaning of this rule.<sup>1</sup> But an omission to have the drum beaten at the time of the sale is not such an irregularity.<sup>2</sup>

22. Postponement of sale and issue of fresh proclamation. — Where a sale is adjourned under Rule 69 by more than seven days, a fresh proclamation is necessary, unless the same has been waived. (See Notes 8 and 9 to O. 21 R. 69, ante.)

23. Irregularities in conducting the sale — Sale within thirty days of the proclamation. — A sale held within thirty days of the date of the publication of the proclamation at the place where the property is situate, or within thirty days of the affixture of the proclamation in the court-house is vitiated by a material irregularity within the meaning of this rule; but it does not become ipso facto null and void.<sup>1</sup>

26. Sale of property in one lot though advertised for sale in separate lots. — Where property has been ordered and advertised to be sold in separate lots, it will be a material irregularity to sell it in one lot. But if there was no order for sale in separate lots though the sale proclamation described the property in several lots, it is not a material irregularity to sell all the property in one lot.<sup>1</sup> Again, where property has been advertised for sale in one lot it is not an irregularity to sell it in separate lots.<sup>2</sup>

27. Irregularities regarding the order of sale of lots. — Where the decree itself directs the sale of properties in a particular order, a sale held in any other order will be vitiated by a material irregularity.<sup>1</sup> Where a mortgage decree does not give any direction as to the order in which the mortgaged properties are to be sold but there are a number of judgment-debtors with rights of contribution, they can apply to the executing Court to look into the equities inter se and direct a sale in consonance therewith. Where the Court disregards such equities, there is a material irregularity.<sup>2</sup> In the absence of any direction in the decree, a particular course followed by the Court in selling the properties cannot be said to constitute a gross irregularity merely because a better way of carrying out the sale was possible.<sup>3</sup>

Where, in the absence of a direction in the decree the executing Court fixes the order in which the properties are to be sold, any change in the order so specified will be a material irregularity unless the change is notified in time to the bidders.<sup>4</sup>

The practice in the Madras Presidency as regards execution sales is to sell the lots in the order in which they appear in the sale proclamation and a departure from that order may amount to material irregularity.<sup>5</sup>

In the absence of a direction by the executing Court for the sale of the properties in a particular order, the sale of the items in an order different from that specified in the sale list will not be irregular.<sup>6</sup>

28. Other cases where the sale is not in terms of the proclamation. —

It is a material irregularity for a decree-holder to cause the sale officer to announce at the time of the sale an encumbrance not stated in the proclamation and an application to notify which had been rejected by the Court.<sup>1</sup> It will be equally an irregularity if without notice the property is sold free of encumbrance, when the sale proclamation advertised the sale subject to encumbrances.<sup>2</sup>

Where an entire interest in a property has been proclaimed and brought to sale but on the date of sale a portion only of such property is sold without fresh proclamation, does it amount to an irregularity? According to the High Courts of Allahabad, Madras and Patna it does not.<sup>3</sup> But according to the High Courts of Calcutta, Lahore and Nagpur it amounts to a material irregularity rendering the sale liable to be set aside.<sup>4</sup>

29. Purchase by decree-holder without permission to bid. — See Note 7 to Rule 72, ante.

30. Irregularities in the grant of permission to bid. — Where after the decree-holder had been given leave to bid and without notice to him the Court imposed a limit below which the decree-holder should not bid and the property was sold at an undervalue, it was held that the sale could be set aside for irregularity.<sup>1</sup> Where there were three applications by the decree-holder on different dates for leave to bid, but the affidavit required by Rule 153 of the Madras Civil Rules of Practice was not attached to the first two applications but only to the last one, it was held by the Madras High Court that this did not amount to any irregularity.<sup>2</sup>

31. Sale after satisfaction of the decree. — Where after a decree has been satisfied and the satisfaction has been recorded, a sale is held in execution of the decree, the sale is a nullity<sup>1</sup> and therefore the matter does not fall within this rule. See Note 71 to Section 47, ante.

If the satisfaction has not been recorded and the period for certification has expired, the Court cannot go into the question at all and an application to set aside the sale on the ground that the decree was satisfied cannot be maintained under this rule.<sup>2</sup> Even if the ninety days have not elapsed, there is no irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale and the matter will not fall under this rule but only under Section 47.<sup>3</sup>

32. Sale after an order of postponement. — A sale held after an order of postponement passed by the executing Court is a nullity whether the order was or was not communicated to the selling officer before the sale.<sup>1</sup>

33. Sale after attachment under Rule 53. — A sale held in contravention of an attachment of the decree effected under Rule 53 is invalid as being without jurisdiction and is not a mere irregularity.<sup>1</sup>

34. Omission to make the legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor or decree-holder parties to sale proceedings. — Where an execution is taken against a wrong representative, the sale is not a nullity though it may amount to a material irregularity.<sup>1</sup>

A sale held during the lifetime of the judgment-debtor but confirmed after his death without impleading his legal representatives on the record is not void.<sup>2</sup>

Where properties had been attached during the lifetime of the decree-holder but the sale was held after his death without impleading his legal representatives, it was held that there was no irregularity.<sup>3</sup>

As to the effect of a sale where the judgment-debtor dies after attachment but before sale and the sale is held without impleading his legal representatives, see Note 12 to Section 50 ante, and the undermentioned cases.<sup>4</sup>

35. Non-representation of minor. — A sale held in execution of a decree against a minor is not void for the reason that no guardian had been appointed for him in the execution proceedings.<sup>1</sup> It will, however, be a material irregularity under this rule.<sup>2</sup> But where the minor is not represented in the suit itself, a sale in execution of such decree is void even though he is represented by a guardian in the execution proceedings.<sup>3</sup>

Where subsequent to the decree but prior to the sale in execution, the judgment-debtor had been adjudged insane and no guardian was appointed for him in the execution proceedings, it was held that there was a material irregularity under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

- (2) Holding a sale for a sum larger than what is really due.<sup>13</sup>
- (3) Knocking down the sale to the highest bidder for a price which is subsequently found to be too low.<sup>14</sup>

undermentioned case<sup>32</sup> the High Court had directed stay of sale on the judgment-debtor furnishing security. He did not furnish security, but on the day of sale offered a security which was rejected by the officer conducting the sale. Thereupon the sale was held. It was held that the sale could not be set aside on the ground that there was an impression that the sale had been postponed and consequently few bidders attended the sale.

37. Fraud in publishing and conducting the sale. — Section 311 of the old Code provided only for cases of material irregularity as a ground for setting aside a sale and did not include fraud in publishing and conducting a sale as a ground of attack. It was held under that Code that such an application came within the scope of Section 244 (now Section 47).<sup>1</sup> The fact that Section 312 of the old Code provided that the sale shall be confirmed in the absence of an application under Section 311 on the ground of material irregularity, was held not to deprive the Court of the power to refuse to confirm the sale where it had been brought about by fraud.<sup>2</sup> The present rule has been framed so as to include fraud as well, so that an application can now be made under this rule to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing and conducting the sale.<sup>3</sup> The effect of including fraud in this rule is to take the applications setting up fraud in publishing and conducting the sale out of the scope of Section 47 and to bring them under this rule.<sup>4</sup> See also Note 55 to Section 47, ante.

The word "fraud" in this rule means "that which is dishonest and morally wrong" and does not include an irregularity.<sup>5</sup> The burden of proving fraud rests upon the applicant and must be proved by clear and definite evidence.<sup>6</sup> General and vague allegations of fraud<sup>7</sup> and mere proof of suspicious circumstances are not enough.<sup>8</sup> But it is open to a Court to make an inference of fraud from established facts taken together as a whole.<sup>9</sup> In order to enable an applicant to succeed, it is not necessary that the auction-purchaser should also have been a party to the fraud; the fraud of the decree-holder would be sufficient.<sup>10</sup> The reason is that the applicant claims relief not against the purchaser alone but also against the decree-holder. The view expressed in the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> that it must be proved that the auction-purchaser was a party to the fraud is, it is submitted, not correct.

A mere undervaluation of property will not amount to fraud within the meaning of this rule.<sup>12</sup> But a wilful mis-statement of value in the sale proclamation evidencing a deliberate design to get the property sold for a low price will amount to fraud.<sup>13</sup> Similarly, any other wilful mis-statement in the sale proclamation calculated to affect the price of the property may amount to fraud.<sup>14</sup> So also, a great discrepancy between the value of the property stated in the proclamation and the real value is valuable evidence of fraud.<sup>15</sup> have acted in concert with him have acted in such a manner as to prevent the best price from being obtained, does not of itself amount to a charge of fraud, nor will proof of such concert invalidate the sale.<sup>3</sup> There is a distinction between an honest combination among intending purchasers and a dishonest concert for the suppression of all competition. If the object be to obtain the property at a sacrifice by artifice, the combination is fraudulent; if the object be to make a fair bargain or even to divide the property for the accommodation of the purchasers, the combination cannot be said to be fraudulent.<sup>3</sup>

39. Substantial injury—Proviso.—Before a sale is set aside under this rule, it is essential under the proviso to the rule that there should have been substantial injury and that such injury should have been sustained by the applicant by reason of the irregularity or fraud. A Court has no jurisdiction to set aside a sale under this rule without going into the question of substantial injury.<sup>1</sup> That is to say, the applicant must prove substantial injury in addition to the material irregularity, or fraud in publishing and conducting the sale, and a mere proof of irregularity or fraud alone is of no avail.<sup>2</sup> A decree-holder who has suffered substantial injury is entitled to have a sale set aside under this rule; it does not matter whether that substantial injury is suffered by him in his capacity as a decree-holder or as an individual.<sup>3</sup> The onus of proving substantial injury lies on the applicant.<sup>4</sup>

"Injury" means loss which is wrongful.<sup>5</sup> Such loss must also be substantial.<sup>6</sup> The fact that the price realized at the sale is less than the value stated in the proclamation of sale is no proof of wrongful loss.<sup>7</sup> Nor is the market value of the property a safe criterion in finding substantial injury.<sup>8</sup> But a denial of opportunity to purchase the property is a substantial injury.<sup>9</sup>

Where in a case it was found that there had been material irregularity in the conduct of the sale and the property fetched an inadequate price in consequence, the mere fact that the real value of the property did not exceed the amount of the decree and that the unsatisfied balance of the decree could not be realized from the judgment-debtor on account of limitation, would not bring the case within the proviso to this rule.<sup>10</sup>

See the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> which is illustrative of what is and what is not "substantial injury."

40. Applicant must have sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity or fraud. — As has been already mentioned in Note 39 above, in order that an applicant under this rule may have a sale set aside, a mere proof of irregularity is not enough; he must show that he sustained substantial injury as a result of such material irregularity or fraud.<sup>1</sup> In the absence of evidence to show that the injury is the result of irregularity, the Court cannot presume from the proved existence of irregularity and injury that the latter occurred by reason of the former.<sup>2</sup>

The proviso to Section 311 of the old Code provided that "no sale shall be set aside . . . unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court that he has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity." In a case<sup>3</sup> arising under that Section their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"Their Lordships cannot accept the judgment of the Judicial Commissioner that loss is to be inferred from the mere fact that a sale was held without full compliance with the provisions of Section 290 (now Rule 68 of Order 21). The Section clearly contemplates direct evidence on the subject."

Relying upon this passage, the High Court of Allahabad<sup>4</sup> held that it was not sufficient for an applicant under Section 311 to prove material irregularity and injury, but that he must connect the irregularity with the inadequacy of price as cause and effect, by means of direct evidence. But the High Courts of Calcutta<sup>5</sup> and Madras<sup>6</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh<sup>7</sup> held that the relation of cause and effect between a proved material irregularity and inadequacy of price may either be established by direct evidence or be inferred, where such inference is reasonable from the nature of the irregularity and the extent of the inadequacy of the price. As regards the phrase "direct evidence" used by their Lordships of the Privy Council, it was held that their Lordships intended only to say that there must be evidence showing that substantial injury was the necessary result of the irregularity complained of.<sup>8</sup> The substitution of the words "unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied" in this rule gives legislative recognition to the latter view.<sup>9</sup> In order to connect the two things the applicant should point out some facts from which the Court can reasonably infer substantial injury from the irregularity or fraud complained of.<sup>10</sup> Thus, where in a sale proclamation the property is undervalued and it has been sold at an inadequate price, the sale may be set aside.<sup>11</sup> The reason is that where the irregularity is an understatement of the probable price of the property, the connection is so near that it is open to the Court to infer, without any other evidence, that injury has resulted from the irregularity.<sup>12</sup> proceedings were vitiated."<sup>2</sup> The same principle will apply if the judgment-debtor had consented to the irregularity before sale.<sup>3</sup>

Where a judgment-debtor applies for postponement of the sale and gets it adjourned, he must be deemed to have admitted that the proclamation was correct, or at any rate, there was no such mistake or irregularity as would be likely to mislead.<sup>4</sup> The judgment-debtor cannot also urge any objections to the sale if at the time of postponement of the sale he consented to waive any irregularity.<sup>5</sup> Where, however, he was not aware of the facts to which he was bound to object at the time when he had an opportunity of so doing, there can be no waiver or estoppel.<sup>6</sup> The reason is that a person can be taken to have waived only such rights as were within his knowledge.

In the following instances it has been held that there is no waiver :

- (1) Where a judgment-debtor agrees to waive an irregularity provided the sale is postponed, but the Court does not allow such postponement, there can be no relinquishment of his right to object to the sale.<sup>7</sup>
- (2) Where the judgment-debtor waives the issue of a fresh proclamation only, he can urge any objection on the ground of an irregularity in the publication of the original proclamation.<sup>8</sup>
- (3) Even though a sale is postponed at the instance of the debtor on the condition that fresh proclamation is waived, if an attaching decree-holder subsequently applies that a fresh proclamation should issue and that prayer is refused, the latter can question the sale on the ground of want of fresh proclamation.<sup>9</sup>
- (4) A judgment-debtor who waives a fresh proclamation will not be deemed to have waived the non-specification of the hour of sale on the day to which the sale is postponed.<sup>10</sup>
- (5) The fact that the applicant himself bid at the sale will not amount to a waiver of the irregularity.<sup>11</sup>

Where a judgment-debtor's objection to an irregularity made before sale is overruled by the Court, he is not precluded from urging the same ground in an application to set aside the sale.<sup>12</sup>

a sale, the debtor got time for paying the decree amount on condition that the petition should be dismissed on his failure to do so, he would be estopped, on his failure to abide by the agreement, from continuing the proceedings.<sup>13</sup> O. 21 R. 90 Notes 41-43a

A question of waiver is a mixed question of law and fact.<sup>14</sup>

As to whether an objection can be taken in the event of appeal, see Note 43.

42. Bona fide purchaser for value without notice. — Where the conditions laid down in this rule are satisfied, the fact that the auction-purchaser is a stranger and a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of irregularity or fraud will not prevent the sale from being set aside.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 37, ante. The plea of bona fide purchaser for value may, however, be given effect to in proceedings or suits to set aside sales on the ground that the decree and the execution proceedings are tainted by fraud and collusion.<sup>2</sup>

43. Setting aside sale on grounds not taken in the application. — It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad and Lahore that where an application under this rule is made on certain grounds, it is not open to the applicant to ask the Court to adjudicate upon objections which were not expressly taken in the application.<sup>1</sup> But he can apply, even after the expiry of thirty days, to be allowed to furnish further particulars and this application may be treated as one to amend the original application.<sup>2</sup> The High Court of Madras<sup>3</sup> has, however, held that there is nothing to prevent a Court even in appeal from considering the validity of the sale from every point of view and exercise its inherent powers in setting aside a sale on a ground not pleaded. It has been held by the Nagpur High Court<sup>4</sup> that where an irregularity is demonstrable from the record itself, it is within the power of the Court to consider the objection based on such irregularity even if not specifically taken in the application. But a new ground requiring evidence cannot be taken for the first time in appeal.<sup>5</sup>

43a. Setting aside sale in part only, if and when permissible. — It has been held by the Patna High Court that where properties are sold in several lots, the Court can set aside the sale in respect of some only of the lots but that the circumstances under which this can be done are limited to cases in which both the irregularity and the injury can be satisfactorily allotted to one part only of the sale: where the irregularity extends to the whole property and to all the lots, it is not justifiable to retain the efficacy of the sale with respect to some of the plots only in which the sale

O. 21 R. 90 price obtained cannot be shown to be inadequate in view of the advertised value.<sup>1</sup> But
Notes 43a-44 this view has been dissented from by the Madras High Court which has held that in such cases the sale should be set aside only in respect of the items which have been sold for an inadequate price in consequence of the irregularity but not in respect of the items which notwithstanding the irregularity have been sold for an adequate price.<sup>2</sup>

It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that where, after dismissing the applications under this rule made by some of the judgment-debtors, the Court passes an order setting aside the sale on an application by another judgment-debtor under this rule, the order will take effect only so far as the share and interest of that judgment-debtor are concerned and the sale will stand confirmed as regards the share and interest of the other judgment-debtors.<sup>3</sup> But, this decision has been distinguished by the Nagpur High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> in which it was held that where there are several judgment-debtors to whom the property belongs but the application is made by only one of them and the property sold consists of only one item and the irregularity cannot be apportioned, the entire sale must be set aside and not only with regard to the share of the judgment-debtor who applies.

See also Note 2, ante.

44. Joinder of claims under Section 47.—A prayer for a relief coming within the scope of Section 47 can be joined with a prayer for a relief under this rule in one and the same application.<sup>1</sup> Every application to set aside a sale involves a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, and therefore comes within the scope of Section 47.<sup>2</sup> But where the application falls within the scope of this rule, and Section 47, a second appeal against an order on such an application is barred by Section 104.<sup>3</sup> See Note 15 to Section 2, sub-section (2), ante. But where the matter falls within Section 47 alone, even though the application purports to be under this rule also, and the question is between parties to the suit, the order will be appealable as a decree.<sup>4</sup> Where an application contains grounds coming both under Section 47 and this rule, that portion of the order relating to the question under Section 47 is

48. Applicability of Order 9 to applications under this Rule. — The general trend of opinion is that the provisions of Order 9 do not apply to proceedings under this rule.<sup>1</sup> See Note 2 to Section 141. But the Court has inherent power to dismiss an application under this rule for default where the applicant fails to appear in support of his application.<sup>2</sup> So also, the Court has got inherent power to set aside an order under this rule passed ex parte or to restore an application dismissed for default.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 1 to Order 9, 'General'.

As regards appeal against orders of dismissal for default of an application under this rule and orders refusing to restore such an application, see Note 50 below.

49. Limitation. — It has been already mentioned in Note 37 ante, that under the old Code it was held that an application to set aside a sale on account of fraud in publishing and conducting the sale fell within the scope of Section 244 (now Section 47). Article 166 of the Limitation Act of 1877 did not apply to cases where the application to set aside a sale was based on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale. It was therefore held that under Article 178 (now Article 181) of the Limitation Act of 1877, the period of limitation for such an application was three years from the date of the sale.<sup>1</sup> Under the Limitation Act of 1908, an application to set aside a sale in execution of a decree on whatever ground the application is based is governed by Article 166 which provides for a period of thirty days from the date of sale. Therefore an application under this rule whether made on the ground of material irregularity or fraud must be made within thirty days of the date of sale.<sup>2</sup>

The starting point of limitation is the date on which the officer conducting the sale has accepted the final bid; therefore, the period of limitation does not begin to run until then.<sup>3</sup>

The period of limitation prescribed by Article 166 cannot be enlarged by Section 5 of the Limitation Act.<sup>4</sup> Where an execution sale is held by the Collector to whom the decree has been transferred for execution, and the applicant applies to the Collector under this rule and after the expiry of thirty days prefers a second application to the Court, the time spent in prosecuting the first application cannot be excluded under Section 14 of the Limitation Act.<sup>5</sup> Where the applicant was a minor on the date of sale, it was held in cases arising under the old Limitation Act of 1877 that he was entitled to the benefit of Section 7 of the Limitation Act in computing the period of limitation for an application under this rule.<sup>6</sup> The present Sections 6 and 7 of the Limitation Act, 1908, limit the application of those Sections to applications in execution of a decree and do not apply to an application to set aside a sale.<sup>7</sup>

Where, in an application under this rule made more than thirty days of the sale, the applicant relies upon fraud as an exemption from limitation, he must bring his case within Section 18 of the Limitation Act.<sup>8</sup> Where a sale is brought about by fraud, for instance, by suppression of processes and submission of false returns, and an application to set aside the sale is made more than thirty days after the date of the sale, it is not enough for the applicant to show that the execution proceedings were irregular and fraudulent, but he must carry the fraud further and show that the existence of his right to set aside the sale had been kept concealed from his knowledge by fraud.<sup>9</sup> Such fraud need not necessarily be that of the decree-holder or auction-purchaser but may be of a third person.<sup>10</sup> When once such fraud has been established by the applicant, it is for the opposite party to show at what precise point of time the applicant had clear and definite knowledge of the facts which would entitle him to apply for setting aside the sale. The reason is that the fraud is a continuing influence and until that influence ends, it retains its power of mischief.<sup>11</sup>

Notes 49-50

Where notice under Rule 22 of this Order is not given, the sale is void. But if an application is made under this rule to set it aside, it must be filed within thirty days of the sale.<sup>13</sup>

See also Notes to Article 166 in the Authors' Commentary on the Limitation Act.

49a. Step-in-aid of execution. — It has been held that an application by a decree-holder praying for the dismissal of an application made by the judgment-debtor under this rule is a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of Article 182 of the Limitation Act.<sup>1</sup>

50. Appeal. — Order 43 Rule 1, clause (j) provides for an appeal against an order under Rule 92 infra, setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale.<sup>1</sup> Section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act as amended by the Bengal Legislative Council in 1928 allows an appeal against an order under that rule.<sup>2</sup>

It has been already mentioned in Note 37 ante, that Section 311 of the old Code allowed an application to be made only on the ground of material irregularity and that an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing and conducting the sale fell within the scope of Section 244. It was therefore held that no second appeal lay against an order on an application seeking to set aside a sale on the ground of material irregularity,<sup>3</sup> but that if fraud was the ground of the application, a second appeal would lie if the matter was between parties to the suit.<sup>4</sup> But under this Code an order on an application under this rule, whether made on the ground of material irregularity or on the ground of fraud, is not open to second appeal by virtue of the provisions of Section 104.<sup>5</sup> The result will be the same even if the question fell within Section 47; for, the order being appealable as an order will not fall within the definition of the term "decree" in Section 2 ante. As to the right of second appeal in cases where objections are taken both under this rule and under Section 47, see Note 44, ante.

Where the objection to the sale does not fall under this rule but falls under Section 47, a decision deciding such objection will be open to second appeal.<sup>6</sup>

No appeal lies under the Letters Patent against the order of a single Judge of the High Court made on appeal or in revision against the order of an executing Court in an application under this rule.<sup>7</sup>

The provisions of Section 104 and O. 43 R. 1 cannot restrict the provisions relating to appeals to the King in Council. Therefore, an appeal to the Privy Council will lie against an order of the High Court under Rule 92.<sup>8</sup>

An order dismissing an application under this rule for default is appealable under O. 43 R. 1, the effect of such order being the confirmation of the sale.<sup>9</sup> The fact that a distinct order confirming the sale has not been recorded does not alter the character of the order and is no ground for refusing to entertain an appeal.<sup>10</sup> But an order refusing to restore an application under this rule which has been dismissed for default is not appealable.<sup>11</sup> The reason is, as already mentioned in Note 48 ante, that Order 9 does not apply to proceedings under this rule.

An application by the Official Receiver to set aside a sale in execution is one under this rule and not under Section 47, inasmuch as he is not the representative of the judgment-debtor for this purpose. No second appeal therefore lies in such a case.<sup>12</sup>

In an appeal from an order confirming the sale, the purchaser in auction is the principal person interested and is a necessary party.<sup>13</sup>

Where an application by a judgment-debtor for setting aside a sale is dismissed and thereafter he is adjudicated insolvent on an application by a creditor filed subsequent to the sale, the judgment-debtor can appeal from the order; the property in such cases does not vest in the Official Receiver, having been sold away before adjudication.<sup>14</sup>

51. Revision. — Where a sale is set aside under this rule without proof of substantial injury,<sup>1</sup> or on the application of a person who is not entitled to apply,<sup>2</sup> or where a sale is confirmed before an application under this rule is decided,<sup>3</sup> or where the lower Court sets aside a sale having misunderstood the legal position with regard to sales,<sup>4</sup> the order is open to revision. Similarly, an order refusing to set aside a sale, on the ground that the applicant had no locus standi to apply, is open to revision.<sup>5</sup> But an order passed by a Court under this rule in the exercise of its jurisdiction is not revisable even though it may be erroneous.<sup>6</sup> An order dismissing an application the property of the judgment-debtor. A sale in execution of a decree is therefore not void, so far as the purchaser is concerned, by reason of the fact that the property sold does not belong to the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> This rule may be considered an exception to the general principle in that it allows an auction-purchaser to set aside a sale by an application under this rule, on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold. The distinction between this rule and Rule 90 is that while the latter provides for the setting aside of a sale for irregularities in the proceedings which have led up to the sale, this rule applies to an entirely different state of affairs and comes into operation in those cases where, in spite of the prescribed procedure having been regularly followed, property has been sold in which the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest.<sup>2</sup> The object of the rule is to provide a quick and inexpensive remedy in such cases by which the auction-purchaser could get out of his difficulty.<sup>3</sup> But the rule is intended for the protection of an innocent auction-purchaser; where, therefore, the purchaser knew at the time of the sale that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold,<sup>4</sup> or where the purchaser has abused the process of the Court for a fraudulent purpose and has not acted in good faith,<sup>5</sup> he is not entitled to the benefit of the provisions of this rule.

It follows from what has been stated above that an auction sale cannot be set aside on the ground of want of a saleable interest in the judgment-debtor, except by an application under this rule within the period of limitation prescribed therefor.<sup>6</sup> Where, therefore, no application under this rule is filed within time and the sale is confirmed under Rule 92, the auction-purchaser cannot treat the sale as void or (where he is the decree-holder) apply for execution again on the ground that he has subsequently discovered that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold. This is the view of the High Court of Madras.<sup>7</sup> The High Court of Patna has, however, held in the undermentioned cases<sup>8</sup> that the proposition that no judicial sale can be set aside for want of saleable interest in the judgment-debtor, except by a resort to the procedure of Order 21, is not well founded; it has accordingly held that where, in a suit to which both the auction-purchaser and the judgment-debtor were parties, the auction sale has been declared to be invalid as against a stranger, the sale must, in effect, be taken to have been set aside, and the auction-purchaser, if he is the decree-holder, can again apply for execution. But the same High Court has held in the undermentioned Full Bench decision<sup>9</sup> distinguishing the above cases, that once a sale has been confirmed, it will not be open to the decree-holder auction-purchaser to apply for execution again on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property. The Allahabad High Court has also held the same view.<sup>10</sup>

So also, except by following the procedure laid down in this rule and in Rule 93, infra, an auction-purchaser cannot recover the purchase-money paid by him on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property.<sup>11</sup> See for fuller discussion, Notes to Rule 93, infra.

Where a sale in execution of a decree is set aside on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold, the execution proceedings are revived and the decree-holder can file an application for execution again within three years of the judgment of the Court setting aside the sale.<sup>12</sup>

This rule does not apply to sales held under the Bengal Tenancy Act 1885<sup>13</sup> or to sales under the Orissa Tenancy Act, II of 1913 [Section 228, sub-section (3)], or to proceedings under the Madras Estates Land Act, I of 1908 [Section 192, sub-section (a)]. It does not also apply to sales held by the Registrar under Chapter 27 of the Calcutta High Court Rules.<sup>14</sup>

This rule is applicable to proceedings under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act: see Rule 95 Note 1, infra.

Where after a sale in execution of a decree, a third party files a suit for a declaration that the properties belong to him, and the purchaser thereupon files an application that he should be allowed to pay the purchase-money after the decision of the declaratory suit, it has been held that such an application is not one under this rule and is not justified by any provision in the Code.<sup>15</sup>

2. Saleable interest. — The words “no saleable interest” in this rule mean “nothing to sell” and are not intended to be confined to cases where a judgment-debtor’s interest is unsaleable either by prohibition of law or for some other reason.<sup>1</sup> Where there is a total failure of consideration for the price paid by the purchaser at a court-sale by reason of the fact that the judgment-debtor has no saleable interest whatever in the property sold, the sale can be set aside on an application under this rule.<sup>2</sup> But where the judgment-debtor has some saleable interest, however small it may be, the purchaser buys at his own risk and, there being no warranty that the property sold shall answer to the description given of it, the sale cannot be set aside under this rule.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where in a court sale several parcels of immovable properties are sold in one lot and it is found that the judgment-debtor has a saleable interest in one of such parcels and none in others, this rule does not apply.<sup>4</sup> The fact that it is found that the property sold is subject to a mortgage does not mean that the debtor has no saleable interest,<sup>5</sup> and this is so even if the amount due under the encumbrance exceeds the value of the property.<sup>6</sup>

The saleable interest contemplated by this rule is the interest on the date of sale.<sup>7</sup> Thus, where a decree for foreclosure of certain mortgaged properties allowed time till 20th July 1883 to the mortgagor to redeem and the property was sold in execution of a money decree on 30th June 1883, it was held that the fact that before the confirmation of the sale the judgment-debtor had lost his interest was immaterial and that this rule did not apply, inasmuch as on the date of sale he had a saleable interest.<sup>8</sup>

See also Note 5 to Section 60, ante.

3. Who may apply under this Rule. — It is only the auction-purchaser who is entitled to apply under this rule.<sup>1</sup> The judgment-debtor cannot apply under this rule.<sup>2</sup> But a decree-holder auction-purchaser can apply under this rule.<sup>3</sup> Where the purchase is made by an executor of the deceased judgment-debtor in his personal capacity, he is not debarred from applying under this rule, even though he had applied under Rule 90 in the capacity of executor.<sup>4</sup>

4. Necessary parties to application. — A person alleged by the auction-purchaser to be the real owner of the property is not a necessary party to an application under this rule, as he is not a person who will be affected by the order.<sup>1</sup> See also Notes to Rule 92, infra.

5. Limitation. — An application under this rule is governed by Article 166 of the Limitation Act and must be made within thirty days of the date of the sale.<sup>1</sup>

6. To what Court application should be made where execution is transferred to Collector. — Where a decree is transferred for execution to the Collector, an application under this rule should be made to the Civil Court and not to the Collector.<sup>1</sup> See also Rule 91A added by the Bombay High Court.

7. Notice. — See Rule 92, proviso.

8. Compensation for loss of property bought at court-sale. — As has been seen in Note 1 above, there is no warranty of title in court sales.<sup>1</sup> The reason is, as observed by Peacock, C. J. : "A purchaser at a sale in execution knows that all that he purchases is the right and title of the judgment-debtor. He knows that no one guarantees to him that the judgment-debtor has a good title and he purchases the property with his eyes open, and he regulates the price which he bids for the land with reference to the circumstances under which he is purchasing, and the risk he runs."<sup>2</sup>

Now, suppose that, subsequent to the sale, the auction-purchaser finds that the judgment-debtor has title only to a portion of the property, that is to say, that he has only a fractional interest. It has been already mentioned in Note 2 ante, that to such a case this rule does not apply. Has the purchaser got any other remedy? On the principle mentioned above, he cannot claim to recover a proportionate part of the purchase money by way of compensation either by an application in the execution proceedings<sup>3</sup> or by a separate suit.<sup>4</sup> Where the purchaser is induced by misrepresentation or fraudulent concealment to buy the property for a price much more than it is really worth, the purchaser has no remedy under this rule.<sup>5</sup> He can, however, recover compensation in a separate suit.<sup>6</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta<sup>7</sup> that in the case of execution sales held by the Registrar on the original side of that Court, the purchaser is entitled to recover compensation for deficiency of the interest of the judgment-debtor. See also Note 1 above.

An execution sale is also liable to be set aside on account of the misrepresentations of the officer conducting the sale, which has led to a useless property being sold for a high price.<sup>8</sup> The reason is that it is incumbent on the Court to be scrupulous in

1. Under Section 312 of the old Code, the Court was bound to confirm the sale only if no application under Section 311 (now Rule 90) had been made or if such application is made and disallowed. Under the present rule the Court should confirm the sale only where no application is made under Rules 89, 90 or 91 or where such application is made and disallowed.

2. The words "as regards the parties to the suit" which occurred in the first paragraph of Section 312 of the old Code have been omitted. See the undermentioned case.<sup>1</sup>

3. The words "on the ground of such irregularity" after the words "no suit to set aside" in the last paragraph of Section 312 corresponding to sub-rule (3) have been omitted.

2. Scope of the Rule. — This rule provides for the confirmation of sale in certain cases and for the setting aside of sale in certain other cases. A sale should be confirmed where no application is made under Rules 89, 90 or 91 or where such application is made and disallowed. It is the duty of the Court in such cases to confirm the sale,<sup>1</sup> even without an application by, or the presence of, the party concerned.<sup>2</sup> Where the purchaser is a stranger, the Court cannot refuse to confirm the sale on the ground that the decree has been subsequently adjusted by the decree-holder and judgment-debtor.<sup>3</sup> Upon confirmation the sale will become absolute.<sup>4</sup> The rule requires an order confirming the sale. In the absence of such order, the sale will not automatically get confirmed merely because no application to set aside the sale has been made within the period of limitation or an application has been made and disallowed.<sup>5</sup> It has, however, been held that an express order of confirmation is not necessary.<sup>6</sup>

A sale should be set aside under this rule where an application under Rules 89, 90 or 91 is made and allowed. But this does not mean that the Court has no power to set aside an execution sale on any ground whatever in the absence of such an application. Thus, under Section 47 of the Code the Court can, at any time before the sale is confirmed, take notice of an objection by the judgment-debtor that the property is not liable to sale and refuse to confirm the sale.<sup>7</sup> Under its inherent powers, the Court can refuse to confirm the sale or can set it aside where it has been misled by the decree-holder or where there has been abuse of the process of Court,<sup>8</sup> or where the decree has been reversed before the date of confirmation of the sale.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, a sale can be set aside on the ground that before the sale, the decree had been adjusted between the parties although the fact of such adjustment is brought to the notice of the Court only after the sale.<sup>10</sup> (See also Note 2 to Section 151.) But a sale is not liable to be set aside merely on the ground that the application for execution was time-barred,<sup>11</sup> or on the ground that the decree has been amended.<sup>12</sup> Similarly, the inherent power of the Court cannot be invoked where there is another remedy available for getting the sale set aside.<sup>13</sup> The Court has also no jurisdiction to set aside a sale under Section 151 of the Code on the application of a third party alleging that owing to the conduct of another third party, he was misled and therefore did not attend and could not bid at the auction of the property.<sup>14-15</sup> As to the effect of the reversal of a decree on the rights of the auction-purchaser, see Note 13 to Section 144.

This rule relates only to cases of valid sale where no application is made under Rules 89, 90 and 91 or where such application is made and disallowed. It has no application to cases where the sale is a nullity.<sup>16</sup> In such cases the Court can declare the sale to be void.<sup>17</sup>

Where an application is made to set aside a sale under the inherent powers of the Court,<sup>18</sup> or where an application is made under Rule 90 after the expiry of thirty days from the date of the sale, relying on Section 18 of the Limitation Act,<sup>19</sup> the fact that the sale has been confirmed is no bar to the maintainability of the application.

Where a sale is set aside, and, in the meanwhile, the purchaser has obtained possession of the properties, the Court has got inherent power to order restitution to be made.<sup>20</sup> See also Note 34 to Section 144.

A decree-holder is entitled to interest on the decretal amount up to the date of confirmation, inasmuch as he is not bound to withdraw the money deposited by the auction-purchaser before the sale is confirmed.<sup>21</sup>

The effect of an order setting aside the sale is to remit the parties to the position in which they stood before the date of the sale.<sup>22</sup>

Section 21 of the Central Provinces Debt Conciliation Act, II of 1933, does not preclude the Court from confirming an execution sale held prior to an application made by the debtor under Section 4 of the Act.<sup>23</sup>

2a. Court, meaning of.—The word “Court” in this rule means the Court which held the sale.<sup>1</sup>

3. Deposit made within thirty days.—See Notes to Order 21 Rule 39.

4. Necessary parties and notice to them.—It has been seen in the Notes to Rules 89, 90 and 91 that an application under these rules to set aside the sale must be made within thirty days of the date of the sale under Article 166 of the Limitation Act. If no such application is made within time, the sale cannot be set aside under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

Before an order setting aside a sale under this rule is made, it is essential that notice of the application should be given to all persons affected by the order thereon.<sup>2</sup> Thus, notice must be given to the auction-purchaser.<sup>3</sup> An order setting aside the sale, made without giving such persons an opportunity of being heard, is, according to the High Courts of Madras and Patna, without jurisdiction.<sup>4</sup> According to the High Court of Calcutta such an order is not a nullity and if the person affected does not impugn the validity of the order in a proceeding directed against it, he cannot attack it collaterally in any other proceeding.<sup>5</sup> The Peshawar Judicial Commissioner's Court has held that the omission to issue notice under this rule makes the order setting aside the sale illegal.<sup>6</sup> Where on an agreement between the decree-holder and some of the judgment-debtors the Court settled a sale with X and confirmed it on the same date without notice to the other judgment-debtors, it was held by the High Court of

Allahabad that the proceedings were materially irregular and that the sale should be set aside.<sup>7</sup> But in any case it is not necessary that the notice should be given within thirty days of the date of the sale.<sup>8</sup>

It is not necessary that the persons who would be affected by an order under this rule need be described as parties in the application: it is sufficient if the notice required by this rule is given to them.<sup>9</sup> Certain decisions, however, hold that such persons are necessary parties.<sup>10</sup> Where an application to set aside a sale was made bona fide impleading the decree-holder as a party, but he was dead on the date of the application, and his legal representative was brought on the record after the expiry of the period of limitation, it was held in the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> that the application would not be defeated by reason of the fact that the legal representative of the decree-holder was not impleaded within the period of limitation.

Where the auction-purchaser is alleged to be a benamidar for a third party, it is not necessary to give notice to the latter under this rule.<sup>12</sup> Persons who have applied for rateable distribution in the proceeds of an execution sale have no such direct or proximate interest as would entitle them to notice under this rule.<sup>13</sup>

5. Suit to set aside or restore sale.—Section 312 of the old Code provided in the last paragraph thereof that “no suit to set aside on the ground of such irregularity, an order passed under this Section shall be brought . . . .” etc. In the undermentioned cases<sup>1</sup> these words were interpreted as not including suits to confirm the sale which had been set aside under Section 312. These cases are now no longer law in view of the alteration effected in sub-rule (3) of the present rule which enacts that “no suit to set aside an order made under this rule shall be brought,” etc.

A suit to set aside an execution sale on grounds covered by Rules 89, 90 and 91 is barred by sub-rule (3),<sup>3</sup> inasmuch as the suit would in effect be one to set aside an order under this rule.

A suit to set aside a sale in execution on grounds other than those covered by Rules 89, 90 and 91 is not within the prohibition of sub-rule (3) and is, therefore, not barred by it.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where the decree and the sale are attacked on the ground of fraud (not covered by Rule 90)<sup>4</sup> or where the sale is attacked on the ground of want of jurisdiction,<sup>5</sup> a suit to set aside such a sale on those grounds is not barred by this rule. Where in execution of a mortgage decree a property not included in the mortgage was sold, a suit by the mortgagor to recover possession of the property from the mortgagee-purchaser was held not to be barred by this rule.<sup>6</sup> insolvency proceedings: therefore, a suit, questioning an order dismissing an application to set aside a sale held by the Insolvency Court is not barred by this rule.<sup>7</sup>

It has been held that the auction-purchaser can sue for damages for loss suffered by him on account of the fraud practised by the decree-holder in regard to the sale.<sup>8</sup> See also Note 4 to O. 21 R. 93, infra.

An application to set aside a sale was withdrawn on a compromise between the parties and the sale was confirmed. Afterwards, the compromise was declared by a decree to be void. It was held that the effect of this was that the order confirming the sale also became void and the application to set aside the sale should be heard on the merits.<sup>9</sup>

6. Plea of irregularity or fraud in defence.— Where a party applies under Rule 90 to set aside the sale and the application is dismissed, he will, in answer to a suit by the purchaser for possession, be barred by res judicata from impeaching the sale on the same grounds.<sup>1</sup> Even if no such application is made, such a plea in defence cannot be raised after confirmation of the sale.<sup>2</sup> The reason is that the sale becomes absolute and the order confirming the sale amounts to a judicial determination that none of the objections exists upon which the validity of the sale could have been questioned. Nor can a third person impeach the title of the auction-purchaser on the ground of any alleged irregularities in the execution sale.<sup>3</sup>

It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> that the fact that an application under R. 89 or R. 90 has been dismissed will not preclude the mortgagor-judgment-debtor from pleading by way of defence in a suit by the auction-purchaser for possession, that the properties sold were not included either in the mortgage or in the decree thereon.

7. Suits to set aside sales under other Acts. —

(1) Public Demands Recovery Act (Bengal Act III of 1913). — It was held under the repealed Act I of 1895 that this rule did not apply to sales held in enforcement of a certificate under that Act and that a suit to set aside such a sale was maintainable.<sup>1</sup> See Section 25 of Act III of 1913.

(2) Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885). — It has been held that this rule does not apply to sales held under the Bengal Tenancy Act, inasmuch as S. 174 thereof contains a complete rule on the subject.<sup>2</sup> There is a conflict of opinion as to whether a suit is maintainable to set aside or to confirm such a sale. See the cases cited below.<sup>3</sup>

(3) Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908). — A suit will lie to set aside a sale held under the Madras Estates Land Act.<sup>5</sup>

8. Limitation for suits to set aside sales. — In cases not covered by this rule and to which the bar under sub-rule (3) does not apply, a suit to set aside an execution sale should be brought within one year from the date of confirmation of sale under Article 12 of the Limitation Act of 1908.<sup>1</sup> That Article, however, does not apply where the sale is a nullity.<sup>2</sup> Such a sale does not require to be set aside, but may be declared to be void. A third person whose property has been sold is not bound by the sale and a suit by him for setting aside the sale is not governed by Article 12 of the Limitation Act.<sup>3</sup>

9. Court-fee on a plaint in suit to set aside sale. — A suit to set aside an auction sale for arrears of revenue is in no sense a suit for a mere declaration without consequential relief.<sup>1</sup> The plaint in such a suit should be stamped as if it were a suit for recovery of the property sold.<sup>2</sup>

10. Sale by receiver. — A sale by a receiver appointed by a Court is not one in execution of a decree and need not be confirmed under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

11. Sale held by Collector — Confirmation. — The Collector to whom a decree has been transferred for execution is not a Court executing the decree.<sup>1</sup> The Civil Court is the proper Court to confirm a sale held by the Collector.<sup>2</sup> See Notes 2, 4, 5 and 6 to Section 70.

12. Confirmation before thirty days. — No sale can be confirmed or can become absolute under this rule before the expiry of the period of thirty days from the date of the sale.<sup>1</sup> A sale becomes complete only where the bid is accepted and declaration is made of such bidder being the purchaser.<sup>3</sup>

12a. Compromise after sale but before confirmation. — After a sale and before its confirmation the decree-holder and judgment-debtor came to an arrangement that the judgment-debtor should pay the decree amount by 29th December 1930, that the confirmation of the sale should be held over till that date and that if the amount was not paid as agreed the sale should be confirmed without delay. Both parties applied to the Court to pass orders accordingly. The Court passed orders accordingly and stated "the darkhast is allowed to be withdrawn for the present." It was held that these words must be taken as amounting only to an order staying the execution till 29th December 1930, and that on the failure of the judgment-debtor to pay the amount as agreed the sale should be confirmed.<sup>1</sup>

13. Appeal. — An order under this rule setting aside or refusing to set aside an execution sale is appealable under Order 43 Rule 1 (j) of the Code.<sup>1</sup> An order merely confirming the sale in the absence of an application to set it aside,<sup>2</sup> or an order refusing to confirm a sale on the ground that the decree had been satisfied,<sup>3</sup> is not an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale and is, therefore, not appealable. Similarly, an order setting aside a sale suo motu under the Court's inherent powers is not one under this rule and is not appealable.<sup>4</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> it was held that an order directing the re-sale of the property on the failure of the auction-purchaser to deposit 25 per cent. of the purchase money as required by Rule 84 was covered by this rule and that it was appealable. As to whether an appeal lies from an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale under the Madras Estates Land Act or the Bengal Tenancy Act or the Agra Tenancy Act, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>6</sup>

No second appeal will lie from an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale under this rule.<sup>7</sup> See Section 104, sub-section (2). As to whether an appeal lies under the Letters Patent against an order under this rule, see Note 50 to Order 21, Rule 90 and the undermentioned cases.<sup>8</sup>

In an appeal from an order rejecting an application under this rule to set aside an execution sale, the auction-purchaser is a necessary party. If he is not made a party, the appeal must be dismissed.<sup>9</sup> As to whether the auction-purchaser is a necessary party to an appeal against an order setting aside a sale, see the undermentioned decision.<sup>10</sup>

Where there is an appeal filed against an order refusing to set aside the sale under this rule, the sale does not become absolute within the meaning of Article 180 of the Limitation Act until the disposal of the appeal, even though the Court has confirmed the sale.<sup>11</sup>

An auction-purchaser is a "party" to a proceeding for setting aside a sale and hence, he can appeal from an order passed in such proceeding.<sup>12</sup> See also the under-mentioned case.<sup>13</sup>

15. Step-in-aid of execution.— An application or an objection preferred by the decree-holder praying that an application to set aside a sale should not be granted is a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of Article 182 of the Limitation Act.<sup>1</sup> But an application merely asking for a confirmation of sale where no application under Rules 89, 90 or 91 is preferred is not a step-in-aid of execution, inasmuch as it is the duty of the Court to confirm the sale even in the absence of any application for that purpose.<sup>2</sup> Nor will the mere act of confirmation by the Court amount to a step-in-aid

"Where a sale of immoveable property is set aside under Sections 310A, 312 or 313, or when it is found that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property which was purported to be sold, and the purchaser is for that reason deprived of it, the purchaser shall be entitled to receive back his purchase-money (with or without interest as the Court may direct) from any person to whom the purchase-money has been paid.

The repayment of the said purchase-money and of the interest (if any) allowed by the Court may be enforced against such person under the rules provided for by this Code for the execution of a decree for money."

As to the effect of the changes introduced into this rule, see Notes 3 and 4 below.

2. "Where a sale of immoveable property is set aside under Rule 92." — This rule applies only where the sale is set aside under Rule 92. Where a sale is not so set aside, the mere fact that the auction-purchaser finds that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold will not entitle him to a refund under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Where a sale of immovable property is set aside under Rule 92, supra, the auction-purchaser is entitled to an order under this rule for repayment of the purchase-money.<sup>2</sup> The decree-holder is also entitled to apply for a fresh sale but limitation therefor under Article 181 of the Limitation Act does not begin to run until he is compelled to refund the purchase-money.<sup>3</sup> Although this rule only applies to cases where the sale is set aside under Rule 92, yet, even where the sale is set aside under Section 47, the Court has inherent power to order a refund of the purchase-money by the decree-holder.<sup>4</sup> See also Note 4 below.

This rule is applicable to sales for arrears of rent under the Orissa Tenancy Act, II of 1913, Section 228 sub-section (2), as well as to sales of immovables under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. See Rule 95 infra.

2a. Right of decree-holder to withdraw purchase-money before confirmation of sale.—This rule implies that the decree-holder may be allowed to withdraw the purchase-money even before the confirmation of the sale. But he cannot claim to do so as of right. The matter is in the discretion of the Court.<sup>1</sup> At the same time, he is not bound to withdraw the money before the confirmation of the sale and where he is entitled under the decree to interest up to the date of realization of the decretal amount, he is entitled to interest up to the date of confirmation.<sup>2</sup>

3. Sale set aside for want of saleable interest.—It has been already mentioned in Notes 1 and 8 to Rule 91 supra, that there is no warranty of title in court-sales. The purchaser must be taken to buy the property with all risks and all defects in the judgment-debtor's title, except as provided by Rule 91 and this rule.<sup>1</sup> But this rule as well as Rule 91 will apply only to cases of entire absence of interest in the judgment-debtor and not to cases where the judgment-debtor has some interest in the property, however small that may be.<sup>2</sup>

Under Section 315 of the old Code the purchaser could apply for refund of the purchase-money even where it was found in a separate suit that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold.<sup>3</sup> The omission of the words "where it is found that the judgment-debtor has no saleable interest . . . ." in the present rule, now makes it clear that the purchaser is not entitled to apply for refund of purchase-money unless the sale is set aside under Rule 92.<sup>4</sup>

Where a court-sale is set aside on an application under Rule 91, ante and the auction-purchaser thereupon withdraws the money but the sale is subsequently confirmed by the Appellate Court, the Court can, under its inherent powers, compel the auction-purchaser to refund the money so withdrawn.<sup>5</sup>

4. Suit for purchase-money in such cases. — Where it is found that the judgment-debtor has no saleable interest in the properties sold, can the purchaser institute a suit for refund of purchase-money?

Under the Code of 1859 there was no provision for the return of the purchase-money in cases where the judgment-debtor was found to have no saleable interest. It was, therefore, held applying the general principle of caveat emptor that a purchaser could not claim to recover the purchase-money on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest.<sup>1</sup> Section 315 of the Code of 1882 gave the purchaser the right to set aside the sale and recover the purchase-money where the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold. That Section also provided that such right "may be enforced" under the rules provided by this Code for the execution of a decree for money. It was held, however, that the purchaser's remedy was not limited to the procedure prescribed in the execution department but that he could file a separate suit for the purchase-money.<sup>3</sup>

Material alterations have been made in this rule and there is a conflict of opinion under this Code as to whether a separate suit will lie. The words "may be enforced," etc. have now been omitted and the words "the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for repayment of his purchase-money" have been substituted. It has been held in several decisions that the auction-purchaser's right of suit has been taken away under this Code and that his only remedy is the one prescribed in Rule 91 ante, and in this rule.<sup>3</sup> The result, according to this view, is that where a purchaser finds, after the expiry of thirty days from the date of the sale, that the judgment-debtor has no saleable interest in the property sold, he has no remedy whatever. Where, however, the purchaser is induced to buy the property on account of fraud or misrepresentation or gross neglect of duty on the part of the decree-holder, he can maintain a suit for the recovery of purchase-money.<sup>4</sup> The High Court of Lahore and the Chief Court of Oudh have taken the view that Rule 92, ante, and this rule have no application to a case where the auction-purchaser has been deprived of the property purchased by him after the confirmation of the sale owing to the action of a person having paramount title to it and on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in it, and that in such cases he obtains a right under the substantive law for refund of the purchase-money, and not under this rule.<sup>5</sup> A Full Bench of the Madras High Court has also held that where a sale turns out to be futile by a finding in another suit, the auction-purchaser can sue the decree-holder for refund of the purchase-money but that his remedy is not by application. The decision proceeds on the ground that there is an implied warranty in court-sales to the extent that there is some title in the judgment-debtor, though there is no warranty as to the extent of the title of the judgment-debtor.<sup>6</sup>

The right of the auction-purchaser to maintain a suit for refund of purchase-money in cases where the sale took place while the old Code was in force, must be determined with reference to the provisions of that Code.<sup>8</sup>

Where certain properties are sold in execution of a mortgage decree and, in a separate suit by a defendant, it is declared that the decree and the sale in execution are not binding on him and the auction-purchaser is deprived of the property, he is entitled to apply for refund of the purchase-money under Section 47.<sup>9</sup>

5. Sale set aside for irregularity. — Where a sale is set aside on account of material irregularity, the auction-purchaser is entitled to sue and recover from the decree-holder the amount of poundage which was deducted from the purchase-money deposited by him, as well as interest on such deposit.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the right of suit in such a case exists independently of the Code and the words "shall be entitled to an order for repayment" do not take away the right of suit to enforce the same.

6. What the purchaser is entitled to under this Rule. — See Notes 7 to 10 below.

7. Interest. — When a sale is set aside and a refund of purchase-money is ordered under this rule, the Court has got power to award interest on the amount of the purchase-money.<sup>1</sup>

8. Value of improvements effected by him. — Where the auction-purchaser gets into possession of the properties sold to him and effects improvements thereon, he is entitled to compensation for such improvements, upon the sale being set aside.<sup>1</sup>

9. Poundage fee. — Where a sale is set aside under Rule 92, the purchaser is entitled to a refund of the poundage fee paid by him, but is not entitled to recover it from the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> The High Court of Madras<sup>2</sup> has held that there is no means of obtaining a refund of the poundage fee and that the most that could be done would be to give a certificate to the party that the case is a fit one for refund and leave it to the revenue authorities to comply with it.

As to a suit for recovery of poundage fee, see Note 5 above.

10. Liability for mesne profits. — When an order for refund of purchase-money is made under this rule, the purchaser must account to the judgment-debtor for the rents and profits realized by him, if he has been in possession of the properties purchased.<sup>1</sup>

Absence of certificate—Title. See Note 3.

Legal representative entitled to certificate. See Note 4.

1. Legislative changes. — This rule corresponds with the first part of Section 316 of the old Code. The latter part of that Section has been re-enacted under the present Code in Section 65.

The only important alteration under the present rule is the addition of the words "such certificate shall bear date the day on which the sale became absolute."

2. "The Court shall grant a certificate." — The provisions of this rule are mandatory and impose a positive and imperative duty on the Court to grant a sale certificate.<sup>1</sup> In granting such certificate it is the duty of the Court, not to determine what property is to pass by the sale but merely to record the already accomplished fact of a transaction that has taken place and to state what has been sold. Its action in granting the certificate is ministerial and not judicial.<sup>2</sup>

The provisions of this Order do not apply to sales by receivers and the Court neither confirms nor grants certificates in the case of such sales.<sup>3</sup>

This provision applies to sales under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, VI of 1920. See Section 50 of the Act.

3. Certificate if transfers title. — The title of the court auction-purchaser becomes complete on the confirmation of the sale under Rule 92,<sup>1</sup> and under Section 65 the property vests in the purchaser from the date of sale.<sup>2</sup> The certificate of sale does not, by itself, create title but is merely evidence of title.<sup>3</sup> As already observed in the previous Note, the certificate simply records an accomplished fact and states what has been sold.<sup>4</sup> Hence a mere omission to obtain the certificate does not destroy or take away the title of the purchaser.<sup>5</sup> He can prove his title and purchase by evidence

Notes 3-6

4. To whom certificate should be granted. — The person who is declared to be the purchaser after the bids are concluded, is the person in whose name the certificate should be granted.<sup>1</sup> If there are joint purchasers the certificate should be issued in the names of all of them.<sup>2</sup> If the purchaser is dead, his legal representative is entitled to the certificate.<sup>3</sup> But the Court cannot issue the certificate in favour of an undisclosed principal.<sup>4</sup>

It has been held by the Bombay High Court<sup>5</sup> that a sale certificate can be granted to an assignee from the auction-purchaser. But the contrary view has been held by the Allahabad High Court.<sup>6</sup>

5. Contents of certificate of sale. — What is sold at a judicial sale is nothing but the property attached, and that property is conclusively described in, and by, the schedule to the order of attachment. The certificate should be granted only in respect of the property attached and proclaimed for sale, and not in respect of some other property treating the case as one of misdescription. It was so laid down in Raja Thakur Barmha v. Jiban Ram Marwari.<sup>1</sup> In that case, A mortgaged a ten annas share of a mouza belonging to him. B, in execution of a simple money decree against A, attached a six annas share which was described in the sale proclamation as being subject to a mortgage and got the same sold in court-auction. The auction-purchaser, in applying for the sale certificate contended that the property sold to him was the unencumbered six annas share and the word 'not' was omitted in the sale proclamation. It was held by the Judicial Committee that the Court had no jurisdiction to issue the certificate describing the property as unencumbered. If in the above illustration no mention is made of the existence of any encumbrance in the sale proclamation, the prima facie presumption would be that it is the unencumbered six annas share that is sought to be attached and sold, and the purchaser would be entitled to the share purchased free from encumbrance.<sup>2</sup>

The encumbrances existing on the property subject to which the property is sold should be entered in the sale certificate.<sup>3</sup> It is incumbent on the Court to see that the certificate is clear and does not furnish materials for fresh litigation.<sup>4</sup>

The sale certificate should bear the date of the confirmation of the sale.<sup>5</sup>

6. Construction of sale certificate. — Certificates of sale are documents of title which ought not to be lightly regarded or loosely construed. Where there is no ambiguity in the words of the certificate, the object of the certificate would be defeated if it were possible to change its plain meaning by reference to other documents.<sup>1</sup> The

Notes 6-8

Court ought not to embark upon an enquiry as to what was intended to be sold and must be deemed to have been sold, by reference to surrounding circumstances and other documents.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where, in execution of a mortgage decree, the sale certificate was issued in respect of "the whole of the pannai lands belonging to and enjoyed by the sons of the first defendant," the certificate cannot by reference back to the mortgage deed be construed as limiting, in any way, the extent of the pannai lands to which it referred or to exclude any portion of the pannai.<sup>3</sup> Where, however, the terms of the certificate are ambiguous and stand in need of explanation, evidence may be adduced to clear the ambiguity.<sup>4</sup> Evidence may also be let in to identify the property described in the sale certificate.<sup>5</sup> The Court can thus for this purpose look into the decree<sup>6</sup> and even into the suit document.<sup>7</sup>

The boundaries of the property sold as given in the certificate prevail over the areas mentioned therein.<sup>8</sup> But where the certificate contains only a general description of the boundaries of the whole area sold without specifying the boundaries of the plots sold, the paimash and survey numbers should be taken as far more correct description of what is sold than the boundaries.<sup>9</sup>

7. Amendment of certificate. — The Court has inherent jurisdiction to amend a sale certificate incorrectly describing the property actually sold.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the Court can rectify a mistake in the description of the boundaries<sup>2</sup> or correct an apparent error therein as, for instance, where the certificate includes properties which were not sold but advertised for sale.<sup>3</sup> But the Court has no jurisdiction to amend the certificate so as to show the purchase of a larger share of the property than what is stated in the proclamation of sale.<sup>4</sup>

A sale certificate should not be amended without notice to the judgment-debtor.<sup>5</sup>

Where the same error has crept into the decree as well as the sale certificate, both should be amended and it would not be proper to amend the sale certificate alone.<sup>6</sup>

8. What passes at a court-sale. — The general rule in the case of all private sales is that there is an implied warranty of title, in the absence of a contract to the contrary.<sup>1</sup> This rule, however, does not apply to sales in invitum. The principle applicable to such sales is caveat emptor.<sup>2</sup> What is sold in such sales is nothing but the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor; all that is guaranteed is that the purchaser shall have the right and interest whatever they may be of the judgment-debtor, and that the judgment-debtor shall not recover back the properties sold.<sup>3</sup> The purchaser gets the property with all the risks and defects in the judgment-debtor's title.<sup>4</sup> In the absence of fraud, he has no remedy of suit against the judgment-debtor or the decree-holder for any defect in the property sold. It is only in cases where the judgment-debtor is proved to have no saleable interest at all that the purchaser has got the remedy provided for in Rule 91, viz., to apply to set aside the sale.<sup>5</sup> If the sale is set aside he would be entitled to a refund of the purchase-money under Rule 93. The purchaser gets the property subject to the same restrictions and equities to which the judgment-debtor himself was subject.<sup>6</sup> Thus, if the property is subject to any valid encumbrance, the purchaser gets it subject to the same,<sup>7</sup> although, if the encumbrance turns out to be invalid, the benefit of it goes exclusively to the purchaser.<sup>8</sup> Similarly, if the property is subject to a lease or liable for arrears of revenue, the purchaser is also bound by the same.<sup>9</sup> So also where any plea of limitation could have been successfully urged against the judgment-debtor, it can also be availed of against the purchaser.<sup>10</sup> If the judgment-debtor had sold the property benami in the name of his wife and she as ostensible owner mortgaged it to a third person, the subsequent purchaser in court-sale cannot acquire any superior right to that of the mortgagee.<sup>11</sup> But a mere omission on the part of the judgment-debtor to take an objection as to want of jurisdiction to execute the decree in another execution proceeding against him will not operate as an estoppel so as to defeat the rights of the purchaser.<sup>12</sup> The court-sale would also be affected by lis pendens if the sale is held during the pendency of a suit relating to the same property.<sup>13</sup>

The words "right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor" are ambiguous words and, in order to determine what passes to the purchaser at a court-sale, regard must be had to the circumstances under which the suit was brought and the true meaning of the decree under which the sale took place.<sup>14</sup> In the absence of any limitation, they mean all the interest which the judgment-debtor could have honestly disposed of in the property.<sup>15</sup> The question to be decided in each case is, as pointed out

it at any moment after the purchase, by partition into definite property.<sup>21</sup> If the purchaser buys certain specific properties as belonging to the share of the judgment-debtor, and in a subsequent partition between the members of the family some of the items purchased are allotted to the share of the other members, the purchaser cannot compel the judgment-debtor to give him other properties which the judgment-debtor got in substitution. The reason is that in sale in invitum there is no privity of contract between the judgment-debtor and the purchaser; there being no act or representation on the part of the former, he is not bound by any rule of estoppel.<sup>22</sup> If the judgment-debtor is the manager of the undivided family and if he is sued substantially in his capacity as manager, the sale of the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor will pass the entire interest of all the members of the family, provided the debt in respect of which the decree is obtained was incurred for a legal necessity or for the benefit of the family.<sup>23</sup> In a joint Hindu family, the father has a disposing power over the ancestral family property to pay off his antecedent debts not tainted with illegality or immorality. If, therefore, a decree is obtained against a Hindu father in respect of a debt which is neither illegal nor immoral, and his right, title and interest is sold in execution without any limitation, the sale has the same effect as a private conveyance by the father and the purchaser gets the entire interest in the family property including that of the sons.<sup>24</sup> "All the sons can claim is that, not

O. 21 R. 94 — inheritance and binds the reversionary heirs, the purchaser of her right, title and interest takes the estate absolutely. No inference can be drawn from the circumstance that the certificate describes the property sold as the right, title and interest of the widow.<sup>29</sup> The matters for consideration in such cases are, as pointed out by Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C. J. :

(1) What property could have been brought to sale in properly constituted suit.

(2) What property was actually intended to be sold and bought.

(3) Has there been such an error in the constitution of the suit or the conduct of the proceedings, that effect cannot be properly given to the intention, or to state it conversely, has there been a substantial representation of those interested in the property intended to be sold and bought.<sup>30</sup>

Where there is record available other than the judgment and the sale certificate to show whether the limited owner represented the inheritance or not, the nature of the debt will determine what passed at the sale.<sup>31</sup>

9. Variance between proclamation of sale and sale certificate. — When there is a variance between the description of the property as given in the proclamation of sale and as given in the sale certificate, the description in the former should be taken as conclusive and correct.<sup>1</sup> The description in the sale proclamation follows the description of the property attached and, as pointed out by the Judicial Committee, "what is sold in a judicial sale is the property described in the schedule to the order of attachment."<sup>2</sup>

A obtains a decree against five brothers and takes out execution against them all. The proclamation of sale describes that the interests of all the brothers are to be sold. B purchases in court auction. But the order of confirmation of sale as well as the sale certificate by mistake mentioned only the share of the eldest brother as being purchased. In such a case, it has been held that the entire interest of all the brothers as described in the sale proclamation nevertheless passes to B.<sup>3</sup>

O. 21 R. 94
Notes 9-14

10. Effect of new interpretation of law on sale. — The rights of the parties in an execution sale are fixed with reference to the state of the law at the time of sale and any subsequent interpretation of the law will not operate so as to affect the result of that sale.<sup>1</sup> In Abdul Aziz v. Appayasami,<sup>2</sup> a purchase was made in court-auction, of the right, title and interest of a zamindar in an impartible zamindari. By the law as it stood at the time of the sale, the zamindar took only a life estate. But subsequent to the sale, the law was changed by the Judicial Committee holding that the zamindar took an absolute estate. Taking advantage of the subsequent change in the interpretation of the law the purchaser contended that the entire absolute estate passed to him under the court-sale. The Judicial Committee negatived this contention holding that : "The reversal of the previously accepted interpretation of the law does not displace its application to the construction of the contracts contained in the certificate of sale under consideration" and that the "parties must be taken to be bound by the law as it was at the time understood."

11. Effect of certificate of sale. — The irregularities if any in the execution proceedings are cured by the certificate of sale.<sup>1</sup> The purchaser's title becomes complete on the issue of the certificate and he is entitled to apply for possession of the property.<sup>2</sup>

12. Certificate if operates as res judicata. — A sale certificate does not operate as res judicata inasmuch as there cannot be said to have been any litigation as to the title of the property purchased. But persons who are parties to the suit under which the sale took place or their representatives-in-interest cannot, by virtue of Section 47, question the title of the purchaser.<sup>1</sup> The rights of third parties are, however, not affected by the court-sale.<sup>2</sup>

13. Limitation. — The provisions of the Limitation Act do not apply to an application for the issue of a sale certificate. The reason is that there is no duty imposed on the purchaser to apply for the certificate. The Court is bound as a matter of course to grant the certificate on the sale becoming absolute, and its function in granting the certificate is ministerial and not judicial.<sup>1</sup>

"Nature of possession." See Note 1.

1. Delivery of possession to purchaser. — See Note 8, infra.

The holder of a decree for possession of immovable property may obtain possession of the property under Rules 35 and 36. An auction-purchaser to whom a sale certificate has been granted under Rule 94 has to apply under this rule or under Rule 96 to obtain delivery of possession.<sup>1</sup>

If the property is in the possession of the judgment-debtor, or of some person on his behalf, the purchaser is entitled to actual possession under this rule.<sup>2</sup> If it is in the possession of tenants or other persons entitled to occupy the same, the purchaser is only entitled to symbolical possession under Rule 96. The Code thus prescribes two modes of delivery of possession based upon the nature of the property concerned. In respect of the same property there cannot be two modes of giving possession, one symbolical and the other actual.<sup>3</sup>

Unless the delivery of possession through Court to the auction-purchaser is effected in one of the modes prescribed under Rules 95 and 96, no possession can be deemed to be given.<sup>4</sup> Therefore if a person is dispossessed otherwise than in due course of law as provided by these rules, he may institute a summary suit under Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act to recover possession.<sup>5</sup>

But when once the amin puts the auction-purchaser in possession and the formalities of law are complied with, the delivery is complete,<sup>6</sup> and thereafter the possession of the judgment-debtor or any person becomes that of a trespasser.<sup>7</sup> Therefore if the auction-purchaser is subsequently dispossessed, it will be a cause of action for a regular suit, but no application under these rules is thereafter maintainable.<sup>8</sup> When a purchaser is put in possession of a field with crops on it, he is entitled to such crops.<sup>9</sup>

As to whether the judgment-debtor can file a suit where a wrong property is delivered to the auction-purchaser or should only apply under Section 47, see Section 47 Note 19. Rules 95 to 103 are applicable to proceedings under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, VI of 1920. See Section 50.

As to whether a question relating to the delivery of possession to the auction-purchaser or decree-holder falls under Section 47 of the Code, see Note 19 to Section 47, ante.

2. Purchase of undivided share. — See Note 4 to Rule 96, infra.

3. Effect of formal possession on limitation. — See Note 4 to Rule 35, ante.

3a. "Immoveable property." — It is only upon a sale of immovable property that delivery of possession of that property can be ordered under this rule. A usufructuary mortgage is not immovable property and a purchaser cannot proceed under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

4. Successive applications for delivery of possession. — See Note 4 to Rule 97, infra.

5. Limitation for application. — The period of limitation for an application for delivery of possession by a purchaser of immovable property at a sale in execution of a decree is three years from the date when the sale becomes absolute: see Article 180 of the Limitation Act.<sup>1</sup> As to when the sale becomes absolute, see O. 21 R. 92, ante. Where the purchaser is a stranger, he is not bound to apply under this rule, and may institute a separate suit for possession of the property within twelve years from the date when the sale becomes absolute: see Article 138 of the Limitation Act, and the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup> As to whether a decree-holder purchaser can also file a separate suit for possession, see Note 19 to Section 47, ante.

An order for delivery of possession is not a decree for possession and therefore cannot be kept alive by periodical applications.<sup>3</sup> Where an application for delivery was made within three years of the date when the sale became absolute, but delivery was not effected by reason of laches on the part of the purchaser, a second application under this rule more than three years after confirmation of sale will be barred; Article 181 does not apply to such a case.<sup>4</sup> But if the delivery could not be effected owing to causes beyond the control of the purchaser and the application had been "closed," it has been held that the second application should be considered to be a revival of the first and consequently is not barred under Article 180.<sup>5</sup>

6. Application, if a step-in-aid of execution. — Where the decree-holder himself purchases the property in execution, and applies under this rule for delivery of possession of the property, the question arises whether such an application is a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of Article 182, clause (5) of the Limitation Act. That question depends again upon another question, viz., whether the purchase by the decree-holder is pro tanto satisfaction of the decree. For, unless the decree is satisfied, a fresh application for execution will lie. It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad and Patna that there is no difference between an application by decree-holder purchaser and by a third party purchaser, to obtain delivery of possession of the property purchased by him, and therefore such an application is not a step-in-aid of execution,<sup>1</sup> the ground of the decisions being that execution comes to an end as soon as the property is sold, and the failure to obtain possession does not affect the satisfaction of the decree. But it has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta,<sup>2</sup> Bombay<sup>3</sup> and Madras<sup>4</sup> that an application by a decree-holder purchaser under this rule is still an application in execution and therefore a step-in-aid of execution of the decree within the meaning of Article 182, the ground of those decisions being that until possession is secured to the decree-holder purchaser, the decree cannot be said to be satisfied. The same view has been taken in the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur.<sup>5</sup>

7. Separate suit for possession. — See Note 8 below and Note 19 to Section 47, ante.

8. Procedure under this Rule. — It is not obligatory on the purchaser to apply for delivery of possession under this rule; it is open to him to obtain possession out of Court.<sup>1</sup> If he is a stranger purchaser, the remedies by way of an application under this rule, and by way of suit are concurrent.<sup>2</sup> He may bring a suit for possession in the first instance,<sup>3</sup> or may apply under this rule, and if unsuccessful<sup>4</sup> or if the summary remedy is barred<sup>5</sup> he may institute a regular suit for possession. If, however, the decree-holder himself is the purchaser, there is a conflict of decisions as to whether a suit for possession will lie: see Note 19 to Section 47 ante, and the undermentioned case.<sup>6</sup> See also Note 5 to Rule 97, infra.

The jurisdiction of the Court to order delivery under this rule exists only if the property is in the occupancy of judgment-debtor, or of some person on his behalf or of some person claiming under a title created subsequent to the attachment of such property.<sup>7</sup> Therefore, if the Court is satisfied on prima facie evidence that the person in possession of the property is holding it on his own account, it has no option but to dismiss the application under this rule.<sup>8</sup> Thus, a prior mortgagee who purchased property in execution of his own mortgage decree and who is in possession, is not a judgment-debtor and cannot be dispossessed by the auction-purchaser under this rule.<sup>9</sup>

In the undermentioned case<sup>10</sup> it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that where possession was ordered to be delivered under this rule, the decree-holder was entitled to get possession without the property being burdened with huts, etc., erected on the property by the judgment-debtor and that it was not necessary that the order should specifically mention the removal of such burden. A contrary view has, however, been taken in a later case by the same High Court.<sup>11</sup>

Where possession is delivered under this rule, no proclamation by beat of drum is necessary.<sup>12</sup> Where a house sold in auction is ordered to be delivered to the purchaser under this rule but is found locked, the Court can direct the breaking open of the lock in order to put the purchaser in possession.<sup>13</sup>

It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>14</sup> that when an application is made under this rule for actual delivery, the Court cannot order symbolical delivery.

As regards the extent of the inquiry to be made in proceedings for delivery of possession under this and the succeeding rules, the same considerations apply to such an inquiry as are applicable to proceedings under O. 21 R. 58 and a thorough inquiry into questions of title is not contemplated.<sup>15</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — The words “on the application of the purchaser” are new. See Note 6 infra.

2. Scope of the Rule.—This rule provides for cases where the judgment-debtor himself is not entitled to actual possession of the property as where the property is in the occupancy of tenants or other persons entitled to occupy the same.<sup>1</sup> The delivery of possession in such cases has to be made in the manner provided by this rule. See Rule 35 ante, and Note 3 below. When once the Court passes an order for delivery of possession under this rule, it has thereafter no jurisdiction to stop the issue of the warrant for delivery and to order an enquiry into any objections subsequently raised in the matter.<sup>2</sup>

3. Delivery of property in the occupancy of a tenant.—If the property is in the occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same, the auction-purchaser is only entitled to symbolical delivery of possession under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Therefore, where the auction-purchaser dispossessed a tenant under a warrant for delivery of possession under Rule 95 ante, the tenant will be entitled to bring a suit for possession under Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, as the dispossession could not be said to be in due course of law.<sup>2</sup>

4. Purchase of undivided share.—The holder of a decree for possession of an undivided share in a property may obtain joint possession in the manner provided in Rule 35, ante. There is no corresponding provision for delivery of joint possession to the purchaser of an undivided share in a property. But in such cases possession should be delivered under the provisions of O. 21 R. 95, read with Rule 35 sub-rule (2) : this rule does not apply to such a case.<sup>1</sup> Where the purchase is of an undivided share in a joint Hindu family, the remedy of the purchaser is only to institute a suit for partition and for possession of the share of the judgment-debtor.<sup>2</sup> Where the judgment-debtor is a cosharer and is himself in exclusive possession,<sup>3</sup> or where the entire rights of the joint family are sold in auction,<sup>4</sup> the purchaser is entitled to actual possession of the property under Rule 95, ante.

5. Symbolical delivery.—See Rule 35, ante. Symbolical possession is different from “paper possession” that is, the possession obtained by a party who being entitled to actual possession, only obtains delivery of possession on paper, without getting actual possession.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 3 above.

Delivery of symbolical possession is effective only as against the judgment-debtor

6. Limitation. — See Note 5 to Rule 95, ante.

Under Section 319 of the Code of 1882, it was held that it was the duty of the Court to order symbolical delivery of possession and that there was no period of limitation for delivery of possession under that Section.<sup>1</sup> The insertion of the words "on the application of the purchaser" in this rule as well as in Rule 95, and the insertion of a new Article, viz., Article 180 in the Limitation Act, 1908, has made it clear that such applications should be made within three years from the date when the sale becomes absolute.

holder or the auction-purchaser has applied for delivery of possession or at least, he made an attempt to obtain possession out of Court and has been obstructed or resisted in obtaining it. The High Court of Calcutta has dissented from the view that this rule has any application to resistance to obtain possession out of Court, and has held that in the absence of an attempt on the part of the Court to give delivery in execution, this rule has no application.<sup>2</sup> There must be some overt act of opposition to delivery of possession,<sup>3</sup> though it is not necessary that the person resisting should be actually present at the obstruction.<sup>4</sup> Thus, the locking of the house by the judgment-debtor amounts to resistance within the meaning of this rule.<sup>5</sup>

It is necessary, before an investigation is made under this rule, that an application should be made to the Court by the decree-holder or auction-purchaser.<sup>6</sup> The Court cannot order investigation suo motu,<sup>7</sup> or on the Amin's or Nazir's report,<sup>8</sup> or on the application of the judgment-debtor,<sup>9</sup> or of third parties.<sup>10</sup> It has, however, been held that the Court may direct investigation under this rule on an oral application by the person obstructed.<sup>11</sup> It has also been held that where the decree-holder was present when the report of the bailiff was placed before the Court, it is reasonable to hold that the further proceeding was taken at the instance of the decree-holder.<sup>12</sup> The Court has to see prima facie whether there is any just cause for resistance and obstruction and need not investigate the question of title thoroughly,<sup>13</sup> though it may adjudicate upon questions of title between the contending parties in regard to their right to possession and pass orders under Rule 98, or Rule 99.<sup>14</sup> Where the auction-purchaser is present but does not adduce evidence with regard to one lot and one witness is examined by the opposite party and regarding another plot there is no opposition and the Court passes an order, it has been held that there is sufficient investigation so as to bring it within Article 11A of the Limitation Act.<sup>15</sup> The order passed on such investigation is final subject to the result of the suit under Rule 103, infra.

The procedure under this rule is permissive and not mandatory.<sup>16</sup> See Notes 3, 4 and 5 below.

This rule applies also to decrees for possession under Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act,<sup>17</sup> and to proceedings under Section 78 of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act, II of 1927,<sup>18</sup> but does not apply to proceedings for delivery of possession under the Provincial Insolvency Act<sup>19</sup> or the Mamlatdars Act<sup>20</sup> (Bombay Act III of 1876).

2. "Decree for possession" — Partition decree. — A decree for partition of immovable property is a decree for possession within the meaning of this rule.<sup>1</sup> The rule applies also to an order for delivery of possession.<sup>2</sup>

2a. "Court." — It has been held that a Court to which a decree is sent for execution can entertain an application under this rule although the decree has not been passed by it or the property has not been sold by it.<sup>1</sup>

3. Limitation. — The period of limitation for an application under this rule is thirty days from the date of the resistance or obstruction (Limitation Act, Article 167). The resistance or obstruction is not necessarily the first resistance or obstruction, and every time the decree-holder or auction-purchaser is obstructed, he obtains a fresh cause of action and he may apply within thirty days of such obstruction.<sup>1</sup> See Notes 4 and 5 below.

An application under this rule may be treated as an application in an execution proceeding but cannot be treated as an application for execution within the meaning of Section 15 of the Limitation Act.<sup>2</sup>

For fuller discussion, see Notes to Article 167 in the Authors' Commentaries on the Limitation Act.

4. Fresh application for delivery, if can be made. — If the holder of a decree for possession applies for delivery of possession, but is resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession, it is not obligatory on him to proceed under this rule; he may either apply again for execution of the decree under Rules 35 and 36 ante,<sup>1</sup> or he may institute a regular suit for possession against the persons obstructing if they are third parties.<sup>2</sup>

But if an auction-purchaser is resisted or obstructed in the delivery of possession and he does not apply for an investigation under this rule within the period prescribed (thirty days), is it open to him to apply again under Rules 95 or 96, and if again resisted, to apply under this rule? If the first resistance was by the judgment-debtor or by any person on his behalf, there is nothing to prevent the purchaser from applying again for delivery of possession under Rule 95, within the period of limitation prescribed and the resistance offered afresh will furnish a fresh cause of action for proceeding under this rule.<sup>3</sup> But if the original obstruction was by third parties and not by the judgment-debtor or any person claiming through him, it has been held that a second application for delivery of possession under Rule 95 is not maintainable.<sup>4</sup> Where once possession has been effectively delivered to the purchaser, a subsequent obstruction by the judgment-debtor will not entitle the purchaser to apply under this Rule.<sup>5</sup> See Note 5 below.

After a final decree for foreclosure, the decree-holder obtained delivery of possession as against the judgment-debtor but was unable to get it against a transferee pendente lite from the judgment-debtor. The decree-holder then put in a second application for delivery of possession as against the transferee. It was held that the second application must be treated as one under O. 21 R. 11 and not under this rule.<sup>6</sup>

5. Remedies of a person obstructed. — See Notes 3 and 4 above.

It is not obligatory on the decree-holder or auction-purchaser to resort to the summary remedy provided under this rule.<sup>1</sup> But if he applies under this rule and an order is made on investigation against him, i. e., under Rule 99, his remedy is only to file a suit under Rule 103 within one year from the date of the order to establish his right to the property. The following tabular statement will illustrate the various remedies open to the person obstructed —

Remedies of a person obstructed

Person obstructed.	Obstruction by whom.	Remedy.
I. Holder of a decree for possession.	a. On obstruction by judgment-debtor or by person claiming under him.	i. May proceed under Rule 97. ii. May apply again in execution of the decree under Rules 85 and 86, and if obstructed again, may apply under Rule 97. <sup>2</sup>
	b. On obstruction by third parties .	i. May proceed under Rule 97. ii. May apply again in execution of the decree under Rules 85 and 86. (Note 4). iii. May institute a regular suit for possession. (Note 4).
II. Purchaser in sale in execution.	a. On obstruction by judgment-debtor or any person claiming under him.	i. May proceed under Rule 97. ii. May apply again for delivery under Rules 95 and 96. (See Note 4). iii. May file a suit for possession. But if the decree-holder is the purchaser, see Note 19 to Section 47.
	b. On obstruction by third parties .	i. May proceed under Rule 97. ii. May file a suit for possession. (Note 3). Note. — There is a conflict of decisions as to whether a second application for delivery of possession will lie.

1. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — In order that this rule might apply, the resistance or obstruction must be without just cause and must be by either the judgment-debtor or by some other person at his instigation. No order under this rule can therefore be passed against a person, not the judgment-debtor, unless his resistance was at the instigation of the judgment-debtor,<sup>1</sup> or against a person who was in possession on his own account though his resistance was at the instigation of the judgment-debtor<sup>3</sup> inasmuch as, in such case, his obstruction cannot be said to be without just cause.

(Note: The trend of this decision shows that in the view of the learned Judge, the mere fact that a decree would operate as res judicata against a person not actually a party to it, will not make him a judgment-debtor within the meaning of this rule—But this seems to conflict with AIR 1989

By virtue of Section 146 ante, an application under this rule can be maintained against any person claiming under the judgment-debtor and bound by the decree, such as a tenant,<sup>3</sup> or a transferee pendente lite,<sup>4</sup> or a subsequent purchaser from the judgment-debtor in execution of a money decree against him.<sup>5</sup> The Court can pass an order under this rule only on an application made to it under Rule 97 and cannot therefore pass an order under this rule on an application for possession under Rule 95.<sup>6</sup>

2. Presidency Small Cause Court. — Under Section 48 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure are made applicable to proceedings under Chapter VII of the Act, and, therefore, the Small Cause Court has power to direct removal of improper obstruction on the part of the judgment-debtor under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

3. Alienee from judgment-debtor pending attachment. — Under Rule 95, the Court may order delivery of possession against a person "claiming under a title created by the judgment-debtor subsequently to the attachment of such property." It has been held by the High Court of Madras<sup>1</sup> that this rule should be read along with Rule 95, and an order can be made under this rule against such a person, and further that such person is a representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of Section 146. See Note 1 and also Note 2 to Rule 102.

4. "Just cause." — This rule applies only to cases where the judgment-debtor or any person at his instigation resists delivery of possession without any just cause,<sup>1</sup> and therefore if the auction-purchaser sells the property to one of the judgment-debtors and he resists delivery of possession, the Court cannot order delivery of possession under this rule.<sup>2</sup> But the Court ought to decide the question of the existence or otherwise of just cause, on the evidence before it and not on a consideration that has no basis at all.<sup>3</sup>

5. "Is still resisted or obstructed." — If the judgment-debtor or any person acting at his instigation, again resists delivery of possession after an order for delivery is passed under this rule, the Court has the power to commit such person to prison, on an application by the person obstructed.

O. 21 R. 99

1. Procedure under the old Code. — This rule corresponds to Sections 331 and 335 of the Code of 1882. Section 331 related to the procedure to be adopted in the case of obstruction to delivery of possession to the holder of a decree for possession, and Section 335 related to the case of obstruction to auction-purchaser.

Under Section 331, however, the Court had to register the application as a suit between the decree-holder as plaintiff, and the claimant as defendant, and to investigate into the claim as if a suit for the property had been instituted by the decree-holder against the claimant. The undermentioned cases<sup>1</sup> which were decided under the old Code are no longer of any importance.

2. Scope of the Rule. — When delivery of property in execution of a decree is resisted, the Court can only deal with the matter on application to remove the obstruction, and only in the manner provided by law. It cannot direct that unless the obstructor filed a suit within a certain time to establish his right, his title to the property should cease.<sup>1</sup> The order passed under this rule is final subject to the result of the suit, if any, under Rule 103.<sup>2</sup>

3. "Person other than the judgment-debtor." — See Note 2 to Order 21, Rule 100.

4. "Claiming in good faith to be in possession." — The word 'possession' in this rule is not restricted to actual possession; it includes also constructive possession.<sup>1</sup> See Note 6 to Rule 98.

The party resisting delivery of possession should satisfy the Court that he is, in good faith, in possession of the property on his own account or on account of a person not the judgment-debtor.<sup>2</sup> If the obstructor has a good and legal right to obstruct, the fact that he acts at the instigation of the judgment-debtor will not prevent an order being made under this rule in his favour.<sup>3</sup> It has also been held in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> that the words "claiming in good faith to be in possession" do not mean "claiming in good faith to have a right to be in possession" but mean only that the claimant claims to be in possession as a matter of fact. See Rule 101, infra.

5. "On his own account." — The person in possession, resisting delivery of possession, may claim to be in possession on his own account, or as tenant of, or on

1. Scope of the Rule. — Where, in obtaining possession of property the holder of a decree for possession or the auction-purchaser, as the case may be, dispossesses any person other than the judgment-debtor, such person may apply to the Court for a summary investigation of the matter under this rule.<sup>1</sup> It is, however, not obligatory on such person to apply under this rule; he may bring a separate suit against the person who dispossessed him for possession of the property.<sup>2</sup> The Court cannot, however, act under this rule unless there is an application of the party dispossessed.<sup>3</sup>

Where an application is made under this rule, the Court should register the application,<sup>4</sup> make an investigation therein and should either dismiss the application or pass an order under Rule 101, infra.<sup>5</sup> It has no jurisdiction to pass a declaratory order under this rule.<sup>6</sup> The fact that the applicant's suit for declaration of title to the property has been dismissed is no bar to his application under this rule, the question involved in such application being only one of possession.<sup>7</sup> As to the scope of the investigation under this rule, see Rule 101, infra.

The remedy of the party against whom an order is made under Rule 101 is to file a suit under Rule 103 to establish his right to the possession of the property.

A third person dispossessed in execution of a decree under Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act can also apply under this rule.<sup>8</sup>

This rule applies to cases of exclusive as well as of joint possession.<sup>9</sup>

Where after an application was filed under this rule, the opposite party filed a suit for an injunction restraining the applicant from proceeding with his application, it was held that under Section 56 (a) of the Specific Relief Act the injunction could not be granted as the prosecution of the application could not be said to amount to a multiplicity of proceedings.<sup>10</sup>

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>11</sup>

2. "Any person other than the judgment-debtor." — This rule has to be read along with Rule 101, infra. A judgment-debtor or his representative cannot apply under this rule.<sup>1</sup> As to who are "representatives," see the undermentioned cases<sup>2</sup> and Section 47 Notes 17 and 21, ante. The Calcutta High Court<sup>3</sup> has, however, held that the word "judgment-debtor" in this rule does not include any person other than the actual judgment-debtor; the question according to that Court is not whether the applicant is a representative of the judgment-debtor but if he is in possession on his own account, and this should be investigated under Rule 101. See Rule 101, infra.

A person who is a party to the suit, but against whom no decree has been passed, is not a judgment-debtor and, therefore, can apply under this rule.<sup>4</sup> If, however, the decree is binding on him, his remedy is to apply under Section 47.<sup>5</sup>

Rules 100 and 101 are not exhaustive and do not include a case where the judgment-debtor himself is in possession on account of some third person and not on his own account. It has been held, however, that in such a case the third person is entitled to apply under this rule if the judgment-debtor is dispossessed by the decree-holder or auction-purchaser.<sup>6</sup>

Where the judgment-debtor or his representative is dispossessed of property not included in the decree, his remedy is to apply under Section 47.<sup>7</sup>

3. "Is dispossessed." — Unless the applicant is dispossessed of the property, he has no cause of action to apply under this rule.<sup>1</sup> The dispossession should be in the course of the delivery of possession<sup>2</sup> and should be proved as a fact.<sup>3</sup> Thus, mere delivery of symbolical possession to the decree-holder or auction-purchaser will not amount to dispossession of the party in possession; it must be shown that the applicant was actually dispossessed of the property.<sup>4</sup>

Where dispossession does not take place in the course of the delivery of possession in execution but subsequent thereto, this rule has no application, and the remedy of the party aggrieved is to file a regular suit for possession.<sup>5</sup>

Where a person is in possession of the property by receipt of rent or otherwise, and the tenant in actual possession is dispossessed of the property by the decree-holder or auction-purchaser, the landlord is a person who is dispossessed of the property

The Court which passed the decree is for the time being functus officio, and has no jurisdiction to enquire into a complaint of dispossession under this rule;<sup>1</sup> but as soon as the Collector has exhausted all the powers conferred upon him, the Civil Court has jurisdiction to inquire into any matters requiring to be done in execution such as those provided in Rules 97 to 103 of the Code.<sup>2</sup>

But under Section 332, the Court had to examine the applicant, and on being satisfied that there was probable cause for making the application, had to ascertain on investigation if the following grounds existed, viz. —

O. 21 R. 101
Notes 1-2

- (i) Whether the property was bona fide in the possession of the applicant on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor.
- (ii) Whether the property was not comprised in the decree, and
- (iii) If the property was comprised in the decree, whether the applicant was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed.

If the Court was satisfied that these grounds existed, it had to order re-delivery of the property to the applicant—otherwise it had to dismiss the application.

As to the nature of the investigation under this rule, see Note 5 below.

1a. Applicability of Rule to proceedings under the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908. — By virtue of Section 192 of the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, this rule is applicable to proceedings under that Act.<sup>1</sup>

2. "On his own account." — Rules 100 and 101 are not confined, in their application, to cases of exclusive possession, but are applicable also to cases where the person dispossessed was in joint possession.<sup>1</sup> Therefore, if a co-owner or a member of an undivided family is dispossessed in execution of a decree against another co-owner or coparcener, he may apply under Rule 100 to be put in joint possession with the decree-holder or the auction-purchaser;<sup>2</sup> but he cannot claim to be put in possession of specific portions of the property, as the Court cannot adjudicate on such questions of title under this rule.<sup>3</sup>

A mortgagee in possession of the property<sup>4</sup> or an occupancy tenant,<sup>5</sup> if dispossessed, can get back the possession under this rule as he is in possession on his own account, but not a mortgagee or transferee pendente lite. See Rule 102, infra. It has been held by the High Court of Patna that a usufructuary mortgagee is not entitled to object under O. 21 R. 58 to the attachment of the property of his mortgagor, and that if such an objection is made and disallowed, Rule 63 will not operate to debar him from making an application under this rule when he is dispossessed by the purchaser in execution of a decree.<sup>6</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta<sup>7</sup> that if the claimant was in possession on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor, he is entitled to succeed under this rule, though he is a trespasser or has no title to the property.

O. 21 R. 101
Notes 2-6

The Court is not entitled, on an application under this rule, to investigate into the question of benami in order to determine whether the applicant was in possession of the property on his own account.<sup>8</sup>

3. Transferee pendente lite. — See Order 21 Rule 102.

4. Transfer of decrees to Collector. — See Order 21 Rule 100 Note 4.

5. Nature of the investigation under this Rule. — Where a third party applies for re-delivery of property under this rule, the question which the Court has to decide is whether the applicant was in possession on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> It cannot reject the application on the ground that originally the applicant had not obtained possession in a lawful manner.<sup>2</sup> The applicant has to prove that he was in possession and was dispossessed in the course of the delivery of possession to the decree-holder or purchaser<sup>3</sup> (see Notes 2 and 3 to Rule 100, ante). The onus lies upon him to prove his right to possession,<sup>4</sup> and it is a serious irregularity to ask the decree-holder or auction-purchaser to begin.<sup>5</sup> The Court should dispose of the application only after allowing the parties to produce whatever evidence they desire, oral or documentary.<sup>6</sup> The investigation under this rule being a summary one, the Court should confine itself to the question of possession and should not decide questions of title<sup>7</sup> or questions regarding the construction of the decree<sup>8</sup> or the equities of the parties.<sup>9</sup> An unsuccessful applicant under O. 21 R. 58 is not competent to apply under O. 21 R. 100 inasmuch as the order against him will be conclusive against him subject to the result of a suit instituted under O. 21 R. 63 to set aside the order.<sup>10</sup>

Where subsequent to the dispossession events have happened which disentitle the applicant to retain possession, the Court cannot refuse to take notice of such events in passing an order under this rule.<sup>11</sup>

6. Applicability of the provisions of Order 9 to proceedings under this Rule. — See Section 141, Note 2 ante and Note 1 to Order 9, General. If the application under Rule 100 is dismissed for default or ordered ex parte, it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta<sup>1</sup> that the Court may restore the application or set aside the ex parte order, as the case may be, under its inherent powers.

7. Appeal. — If the proceedings relating to delivery of possession under Rules 97 to 102 are "between the parties or their representatives," an order passed in such proceedings will fall under Section 47 according to the view of the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras and of the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind. See Note 19 to Section 47, ante. An order under Rule 98 against a stranger will not fall under Section 47 even according to this view and no appeal will, therefore, lie in such a case.<sup>1</sup> But if the proceedings under this rule are between parties to the suit, and an order is passed under this rule, the High Court of Madras<sup>2</sup> has held that the aggrieved party will have only a right of appeal under Section 47, ante. In the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> Mr. Justice Odgers observed as follows:

O. 21 R. 101
Notes 7-8

"It was not open to the plaintiffs to proceed at their option, either by a suit or by way of appeal. It is also to be observed that Section 47 expressly bars a suit in contradistinction to Rule 108, which says that the order on obstruction proceedings shall be conclusive subject to the result of the suit if any. It has, as far as I know, never been suggested in any case that the procedure under Section 47 and under Rule 108 is cumulative."

See also Note 84 to Section 47.

8. Revision. — As the remedy of the party against whom an order under Rules 98, 99 or 101 has been passed is to file a suit under Rule 103 infra, ordinarily orders passed under these rules are not open to revision.<sup>1</sup> But if the lower Court refuses to order investigation,<sup>2</sup> or rejects the application on a misconstruction of the law,<sup>3</sup> or the lower Appellate Court erroneously entertains appeals from orders under those rules,<sup>4</sup> or if there are illegalities or material errors in the proceedings in the lower Court,<sup>5</sup> the High Court may interfere in revision.

apply to resistance or obstruction in execution of a decree for the possession of immoveable property by a person to whom the judgment-debtor has transferred the property after the institution of the suit in which the decree was passed or to the dispossession of any such person.

1. Scope of the Rule. | 2. Transferee pendente lite.

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule enacts that a transferee pendente lite cannot get the benefit of the procedure under Rules 99 and 101.<sup>1</sup> But such a person can raise all the objections that the judgment-debtor could have raised in execution.<sup>2</sup> A transferee pendente lite who pays off a prior usufructuary mortgagee and enters into possession of the property must, however, be considered as standing in the shoes of the usufructuary mortgagee himself and not as being a transferee pendente lite under this rule.<sup>3</sup>

It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that this rule applies also to involuntary sales of the judgment-debtor's property.<sup>4</sup> But the contrary view has been held by the Patna High Court.<sup>5</sup>

2. Transferee pendente lite. — This rule specifically deals with cases of a "decree for possession of immovable property." It does not deal with decrees for money in which property has been attached in execution and the judgment-debtor has, during such attachment, transferred his properties. It has been held in the cases cited below<sup>1</sup> that the principle of this rule will apply to such cases also.

The right of suit under this rule is a statutory one, and the mere fact that a party has failed to prefer a claim under Rule 58 ante, will not debar him from maintaining a suit under this rule.<sup>3</sup> On the other hand, the failure to file a suit under this rule by a party against whom an order is made under the previous rules will render the order under those rules conclusive against him and his representatives.<sup>4</sup> However, where subsequent to the adverse order against a person his right to the possession of the property is established in another suit between the parties, it is not necessary to sue again under this rule to establish the right.<sup>5</sup> It will be useful here to compare Rule 63, ante, with this rule. A suit under the former is instituted for the purpose of establishing the right which the plaintiff claims to the property in dispute, while a suit under this rule is for the purpose of establishing the right which he claims to the present possession of the property.<sup>6</sup> Such right to possession may be based on title even without showing that the plaintiff was in actual possession at the date of the order against him.<sup>7</sup> Another point of distinction between Rule 63 and this rule is that while under the former even an order without investigation will be conclusive, such an order will not be conclusive under this rule.<sup>8</sup> The reason is that under Rule 63 the party against whom any order is made should institute a suit under that rule, whereas under this rule only a party against whom an order is made under Rules 98, 99 or 101 need institute a suit under this rule, and an order under Rules 98, 99 or 101 can only be made "where the Court is satisfied," etc., which can only be on an investigation of the question.<sup>9</sup>

The scope of a suit filed under this rule is not the mere determination of the question of possession of the parties concerned, but the establishment of the right or title by which the plaintiff claims the present possession of the property.<sup>10</sup> It has been held that a suit under this rule is by way of defence of one's rights, and pleas available only by way of defence can be urged by the plaintiff in such suit. Thus, the plaintiff can rely on Section 53A of the Transfer of Property Act (doctrine of part performance) in such suit although that Section is available only by way of defence.<sup>11</sup> A suit under this rule is not one under Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, inasmuch as the dispossession on which it is based is not one "otherwise than in due course of law."<sup>12</sup> It is not open to a defendant in a suit by the decree-holder under this rule to question the validity of the decree.<sup>13</sup>

Where an order becomes conclusive under this rule, it will bar a suit as well as a defence by the party against whom the order is passed or his representative.<sup>14</sup> Where, however, the order also falls under Section 47 of the Code, this rule does not, according to the High Court of Allahabad, operate as a bar to an appeal under that Section.<sup>15</sup>

The provisions of Rules 97 to 103 are of a restrictive nature and strict compliance with them is necessary. If, in a particular case, it is shown that the provisions of any of these rules have not been strictly complied with, the penal consequence of barring the right of suit cannot legally flow therefrom.<sup>16</sup>

A suit instituted under this rule is not a continuation of the summary application, but an independent proceeding governed by the relevant provisions of the Code; it would lie in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property in dispute is situate.<sup>17</sup> The onus of proving subsisting title is prima facie on the party who was out of possession,<sup>18</sup> and it has been held that the mere fact that the other party has been driven to institute a suit under this rule cannot shift that burden on to that party.<sup>19</sup>

Where the plaintiff in a suit under this rule succeeds, the order complained of must be set aside and the parties must be restored to the status quo ante and where the plaintiff has been removed from possession of the property, he must be put back in possession.<sup>20</sup>

Where an auction-purchaser of an undivided share of a co-owner gets delivery of possession in execution but, on objection by a party to the suit, re-delivery is ordered in his favour, and the auction-purchaser thereupon sues for partition of the share purchased by him, such a suit is not governed by either this rule or by Article 11A of the Limitation Act, inasmuch as the re-delivery proceedings fall within Section 47.<sup>31</sup>

1a. Applicability of Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act to suit under this Rule. — In a suit under this rule to establish the plaintiff's right to the present possession of the property, it is not necessary to ask for the further relief of possession : the proviso to Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, does not take away the special right conferred by this rule of merely asking for a declaration of the plaintiff's right.<sup>1</sup> But the plaintiff is not precluded from claiming consequential relief in such a suit.<sup>2</sup>

2. Suit by decree-holder or auction-purchaser under a different right. — The cause of action for a suit under this rule is the adverse order passed under Rules 98, 99 or 101, ante. This rule does not therefore apply where the auction-purchaser or the claimant institutes a suit relating to the property in any other capacity or based on a cause of action different from the adverse order under Rules 98, 99 or 101, ante.<sup>1</sup>

Illustrations

1. A purchased certain property in execution of a decree and took delivery of possession of the property through Court. B filed an application under Rule 100, but the Court dismissed it on the ground that B was not dispossessed and had, therefore, no cause of action under Rule 100. B was subsequently dispossessed, and he brought a suit for possession, alleging as the cause of action the subsequent dispossession, more than one year after the date of the order under Rule 100. It was held that the suit was not barred.<sup>2</sup>

2. In execution of a decree for possession A was obstructed by B, and an order under Rule 98 was passed against B. B filed a suit to set aside the decree on the ground of fraud and for delivery of possession as a consequential relief. It was held that since the basis of the claim was distinct and different, and the possession claimed was not present possession but only by way of consequential relief, the suit was not barred.<sup>3</sup>

3. A dispossessed B in execution of a decree. B filed an application under Rule 100 and the same was granted. Subsequently A became aware of the fact that the judgment-debtor, a tenant, of a non-transferable holding had transferred the holding to the defendants. He thereupon filed a suit in ejectment against the defendant in the capacity of a landlord. It was held that the suit was not barred and that the cause of action was not the loss of possession but the fact that the tenant had unlawfully transferred a non-transferable holding to the defendants.<sup>4</sup>

Inasmuch as an order under Rules 98, 99 or 101 is conclusive under this rule only so far as the present right to possession is concerned, this rule will not operate so as to bar a party against whom an order has been passed under those rules, from maintaining a suit for redemption of property<sup>5</sup> or for enforcing a mortgage lien over the property.<sup>6</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>7</sup>

the meaning of this rule, unless it was made after investigation into the matter.<sup>1</sup> It is also necessary that the Court should have come to a definite conclusion on the matter under enquiry; if it declines to give any decision at all on the matter, it will not be conclusive so as to bar a suit instituted more than one year from the date of the order.<sup>2</sup> The mere fact, however, that the investigation is not a complete one will not detract from the conclusiveness of the order.<sup>3</sup> Nor, where an application has been rejected after investigation, will the mere fact that the Court refers the parties to a regular suit, detract from the conclusive character of the order.<sup>4</sup> It has been held in the following cases that there is no order against a party within the meaning of this rule —

(1) Where the applicant withdraws his application and the Court makes an endorsement on the application that no investigation was made by reason of the withdrawal.<sup>5</sup>

(2) Where the application is dismissed for default of appearance<sup>6</sup> or for non-prosecution<sup>7</sup> without inquiry. But where the Court fixes a day for the enquiry and, on the plaintiff's failure to produce evidence in support of the case, dismisses the application in the presence of the parties, it cannot be said to be a dismissal for default without inquiry.<sup>8</sup>

(3) Where the application of the claimant is allowed for default of appearance of the decree-holder.<sup>9</sup>

(4) Where the application is simply dismissed without investigation.<sup>10</sup>

(5) Where the application is rejected on the ground that it has been filed beyond time.<sup>11</sup>

(6) Where the party was a minor and was not properly represented in the proceedings.<sup>12</sup>

Where A files an application and the same is decided against him, he cannot be said not to be a party "against whom an order has been passed" merely because he is a benamidar for another person.<sup>13</sup>

Although Rule 101 speaks of an order directing the applicant to be put in possession of property, it has been held that an order dismissing an application under Rule 100 to be put in possession is nevertheless an order against the applicant under Rule 101 for the purposes of this rule, and that the applicant would be bound to file a suit under this rule within one year from the date of the order.<sup>14</sup>

4. Order dismissing application under Rule 95. — An order on an application under Order 21 Rule 95 dismissing it on the ground that the person in possession was so on his own account and not on account of the judgment-debtor, is not an order under Rule 99 dismissing an application complaining of resistance or dispossession, and this rule will not apply to such orders.<sup>1</sup> Nor will this rule apply where the decree-holder applying under Rule 95 gets possession without any resistance on the part of any one; and the party dispossessed is not bound to sue the auction-purchaser within one year under this rule.<sup>2</sup>

5. Limitation. — A suit under this rule is governed by Article 11A of the Limitation Act and should be brought within one year of the date of the order against the plaintiff.<sup>1</sup> It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>2</sup> that where an order against a person in possession has remained unexecuted, he is, in a suit against him for possession, not estopped from pleading that plaintiff has no title to the properties. As has been seen in Note 3 above, where an order is passed without investigation, or where a suit is filed on a cause of action other than that of dispossession or of resistance or obstruction to delivery of possession, this rule does not apply and consequently Article 11A of the Limitation Act also does not apply.<sup>3</sup>

In computing the period of one year prescribed by Article 11A, the time taken in revision proceedings cannot be excluded under Section 14 of the Limitation Act.<sup>4</sup>

6. Court-fee. — A plaint in a suit under this rule is chargeable with a fixed fee under Article 17 of Schedule II of the Court-fees Act, 1870.<sup>1</sup>

107. Where an application is made for the sale of land or of any interest in land, the Court shall, before ordering sale thereof, call upon the parties to state whether such land is or is not ancestral land within the meaning of Notification No. 1887-I—238-10, dated 7th October, 1911, of the Local Government, and shall fix a date for determining the said question.

On the day so fixed, or on any date to which the enquiry may have been adjourned, the Court may take such evidence, by affidavit or otherwise, as it may deem necessary; and may also call for a report from the Collector of the district as to whether such land or any portion thereof is ancestral land.

After considering the evidence and the report, if any, the Court shall determine whether such land, or any, and what part of it, is ancestral land.

The result of the enquiry shall be noted in an order made for the purpose by the presiding Judge in his own handwriting.

115. When an application is made for the attachment of live-stock or other moveable property, the decree-holder shall pay into Court in cash such sum as will cover the costs of the maintenance and custody of the property for fifteen days. If within three clear days before the expiry of any such period of fifteen days the amount of such costs for such further period as the Court may direct be not paid into Court, the Court, on receiving a report thereof from the proper officer, may issue an order for the withdrawal of the attachment and direct by whom the costs of the attachment are to be paid. O. 21 R. 115 (Allahabad)

The pound-keeper shall take charge of, feed and water, animals attached and committed as aforesaid until they are withdrawn from his custody as hereinafter provided and he shall be entitled to be paid for their maintenance at such rates as may be, from time to time prescribed under proper authority. Such rates shall, for animals specified in the Section mentioned in the last preceding rule, not exceed the rates for the time being fixed under Section 5 of the same Act. In any case, for special reasons to be recorded in writing, the Court may require payment to be made for maintenance at higher rates than those prescribed.

O. 21 R. 120 (Allahabad) 120. The charges herein authorized for the maintenance of live-stock shall be paid to the pound-keeper by the attaching officer for the first fifteen days at the time the animals are committed to his custody, and thereafter for such further period as the Court may direct, at the commencement of such period. Payments for such maintenance so made in excess of the sum due for the number of days during which the animals may be in the custody of the pound-keeper shall be refunded by him to the attaching officer.

O. 21 R. 121 (Allahabad) 121. Animals attached and committed as aforesaid shall not be released from custody by the pound-keeper except on the written order of the Court or of the attaching officer, or of the officer appointed to conduct the sale; the person receiving the animals, on their being so released, shall sign a receipt for them in the register mentioned in Rule 118.

O. 21 R. 122 (Allahabad) 122. For the safe custody of moveable property other than live-stock while under attachment, the attaching officer shall, subject to approval by the Court, make such arrangements as may be most convenient and economical.

The action of the attaching officer in handing over the property to a surety is within his lawful powers under Rule 122, and upon his action being approved either expressly or impliedly by the Court, the surety becomes the officer of the Court and therefore is liable as a surety for the purposes of Section 145, ante.<sup>1</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>2</sup> it has been held that the sapurdar does not become a public officer within the meaning of O. 21 R. 52 of the Code, and therefore a fresh order of attachment need not be communicated to him instead of to the Amin. #### GARNISHEE ORDERS

131. The Court may, in the case of any debt due to the judgment-debtor (other than a debt secured by a mortgage or a charge or a negotiable instrument, or a debt recoverable only in a Revenue Court), or any moveable property not in the possession of the judgment-debtor, issue a notice to any person (hereinafter called the garnishee) liable to pay such debt, or to deliver or account for such moveable property, calling upon him to appear before the Court and show cause why he should not pay or deliver into Court the debt due from or the property deliverable by him to such judgment-debtor, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree and the cost of execution.

(Allahabad)

Notes. — Where an objection is raised to a notice issued under this rule, and the objections are disallowed, the Court should pass an order under Order 21 Rule 133.<sup>1</sup>

Money left with the mortgagee for payment to the creditors is not a debt within the meaning of this rule and cannot be attached.<sup>2</sup>

132. If the garnishee does not forthwith or within such time as the Court may allow, pay or deliver into Court the amount due from or the property deliverable by him to the judgment-debtor, or so much as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree and the cost of execution, and does not dispute his liability to pay such debt or deliver such moveable property, or if he does not appear in answer to the notice, then the Court may order the garnishee to comply with the terms of such notice, and on such order execution may issue as though such order were a decree against him.

(Allahabad)

133. If the garnishee disputes his liability the Court, instead of making such order, may order that any issue or question necessary for determining his liability be (Allahabad) the Court to be probable that the debt or property attached or sought to be attached belongs to some third person, or that any third person has a lien or charge upon, or an interest in it, the Court may order such third person to appear and state the nature of his claim, if any, upon such debt or property and prove the same, if necessary.

O. 21 R. 135 135. After hearing such third person, and any other person who may subse-(Allahabad) quently be ordered to appear, or in the case of such third or other person not appearing when ordered, the Court may pass such order as is hereinbefore provided or make such other order as it shall think fit, upon such terms in all cases with respect to the lien, charge or interest, if any, of such third or other person as to such Court shall seem just and reasonable.

O. 21 R. 136 136. Payment or delivery made by the garnishee whether in execution of an (Allahabad) order under these rules or otherwise shall be a valid discharge to him as against the judgment-debtor, or any other person ordered to appear as aforesaid, for the amount paid, delivered or realised although such order or the judgment may be set aside or reversed.

O. 21 R. 137 137. Debts owing from a firm carrying on business within the jurisdiction of (Allahabad) the Court may be attached under these rules, although one or more members of such firm may be resident out of the jurisdiction: Provided that any person having the control or management of the partnership business or any member of the firm within the jurisdiction is served with the garnishee order. An appearance by any member pursuant to an order shall be a sufficient appearance by the firm.

O. 21 R. 138 138. The costs of any application under these rules and of any proceedings

ORDER XXIA.

1. Every person applying to a Civil Court to attach moveable property shall, in addition to the process-fee, deposit such reasonable sum as the Court may direct, if it think necessary for the cost of its removal to the court-house, for its custody, and if such property is live-stock, for its maintenance according to the rates prescribed in Rule 2 of this Order. If the deposit, when ordered be not made, the attachment shall not issue. The Court may, from time to time, order the deposit of such further fees as may be necessary. In default of due payment the property shall be released from attachment.

2. The following daily rates shall be chargeable for the custody and maintenance of live-stock under attachment :

Goat and pig	...	Annas 2 to annas 4.
Sheep	...	Annas 2 to annas 8.
Cow and bullock	...	Annas 6 to annas 10.
Calf	...	Annas 8 to annas 6.
Buffalo	...	Annas 8 to annas 12.
Horse	...	Annas 8 to annas 12.
Ass	...	Annas 8 to annas 5.
Poultry	...	Annas 2 to annas 3 pies 6.

Explanation. — Although the rates indicated above are regarded as reasonable, the Courts should consider individual circumstances and the local conditions and permit deposit at reduced rates where the actual expenses are likely to fall short of the minima or maxima. If any specimen of special value in any of the above classes is seized a special rate may be fixed by the Court. If any animal not specified is attached, the Court may fix the cost as a special case.

3. Where the property attached consists of agricultural implements or other articles which cannot conveniently be removed and the attaching officer does not act under the proviso to Rule 43 Order 21, he may, unless the Court has otherwise directed, leave it in the village or place where it has been attached —

(a) in the charge of the judgment-debtor or decree-holder or of some other person, provided that the judgment-debtor, decree-holder, or other person enters into a bond in Form No. 15-A of Appendix E to this Schedule with one or more sureties for the production of the property when called for, or,

(b) in the charge of an officer of the Court if a suitable place for its safe custody be provided and the remuneration of the officer for a period of fifteen days paid in advance.

4. If attached property (other than live-stock) is not sold under the proviso to Rule 43 Order 21, or retained in the village or place where it is attached, it shall be brought to the court-house at the decree-holder's expense and delivered to the proper officer of the Court. In the event of the decree-holder failing to make his own arrangement for the removal of the property with safety, or paying the cost thereof in advance to the attaching officer, then unless such payment has previously been

5. When live-stock is attached it shall not, without the special order of the Court, be brought to the Court or its compound or vicinity, but shall be left at the village or place where it was attached in the manner and on the conditions set forth in Rule 3 of this Order :

Provided that live-stock shall not be left in the charge of any person under clause (a) of the said rule unless he enters into a bond for the proper care and maintenance thereof as well as for its production when called for, and that it shall not be left in charge of an officer of the Court under clause (b) of the said rule unless in addition to the requirements of the said clause provision be made for its care and maintenance.

(Calcutta)

6. When for any reason, the attaching officer shall find it impossible to obtain compliance with the requirements of the preceding rule so as to entitle him to leave the attached live-stock in the village or place where it was attached and no order has been made by the Court for its removal to the Court, the attaching officer shall not proceed with the attachment and no attachment shall be deemed to have been effected.

(Calcutta)

7. Whenever it shall appear to the Court that live-stock under attachment are not being properly tended or maintained, the Court shall make such orders as are necessary for their care and maintenance and may, if necessary, direct the attachment to cease and the live-stock to be returned to the person in whose possession they were when attached. The Court may order the decree-holder to pay any expenses so incurred in providing for the care and maintenance of the live-stock and may direct that any sum so paid, shall be refunded to the decree-holder by any other party to the proceedings.

O. 21A R. 8
(Calcutta)

8. If under a special order of the Court live-stock is to be conveyed to the Court, the decree-holder shall make his own arrangement for such removal and if he fails to do so, the attachment shall be withdrawn and the property made over to the person in whose possession it was before attachment.

O. 21A R. 9
(Calcutta)

9. Nothing in these rules shall prevent the judgment-debtor or any person claiming to be interested in attached live-stock from making such arrangements for feeding, watering and tending the same as may not be inconsistent with its safe custody, or contrary to any order of the Court.

(Calcutta)

10. The Court may direct that any sums which have been legitimately expended by the attaching officer or are payable to him, if not duly deposited or paid, be recovered from the sale proceeds of the attached property, if sold, or be paid by the person declared entitled to delivery before he receives the same. The Court may also order that any sums deposited or paid under these rules be recovered as costs of the attachment from any party to the proceedings.

(Calcutta)

11. In the event of the custodian of attached property failing, after due notice, to produce such property at the place named to the officer deputed for the purpose, or to restore it to its owner if so ordered or failing in the case of live-stock to maintain and take proper care thereof, he shall be liable to be proceeded against for the enforcement of his bond in the execution proceedings.

(Calcutta)

12. When property other than live-stock is brought to the Court, it shall immediately be made over to the nazir, who shall keep it on his sole responsibility in such place as may be approved by the Court. If the property cannot from its nature or bulk be conveniently stored, or kept on the court premises or in the personal custody of the nazir, he may, subject to the approval of the Court, make such arrangements for its safe custody under his own supervision as may be most convenient and economical. If any premises are to be hired and persons are to be engaged for watching the property the Court shall fix the charges for the premises and the remuneration to be allowed to the persons (not being officers of the Court) in whose custody the property is kept. All such costs shall be paid into Court by the decree-holder in advance for such period as the Court may from time to time direct. O. 21A R. 12 (Calcutta)

13. When attached live-stock is brought to Court under special order as aforesaid it shall be immediately made over to the nazir, who shall be responsible for its due preservation and safe custody until he delivers it up under the orders of the Court. O. 21A R. 13 (Calcutta)

14. If there be a pound maintained by Government or local authority in or near the place where the Court is held, the nazir shall, subject to the approval of the Court, be at liberty to place in it such live-stock as can be properly kept there, in which case the pound keeper will be responsible for the property to the nazir and shall receive from the nazir the same rates for accommodation and maintenance thereof as are paid in respect of impounded cattle of the same description. O. 21A R. 14 (Calcutta)

15. If there be no good pound available, or, if in the opinion of the Court, it be inconvenient to lodge the attached live-stock in the pound, the nazir may keep them in his own premises or he may entrust them to any person selected by himself and approved by the Court. O. 21A R. 15 (Calcutta)

16. All costs for the keeping and maintenance of the live-stock shall be paid into Court by the decree-holder in advance for not less than fifteen days at a time as often as the Court may from time to time direct. In the event of failure to pay the costs within the time fixed by the Court, the attachment shall be withdrawn and the live-stock shall be at the disposal of the person in whose possession it was at the time of attachment. O. 21A R. 16 (Calcutta)

17. So much of any sum deposited or paid into Court under these rules as may not be expended shall be refunded to the depositor. O. 21A R. 17 (Calcutta)

ORDER XXII.

DEATH, MARRIAGE AND INSOLVENCY OF PARTIES

General. — Synopsis

1. Survey of the Order.
2. Scope and applicability of the Order.

1. Survey of the Order. — This Order deals with the creation, assignment or devolution of interest during the pendency of suits. Such creation, assignment or devolution may be brought about by:

- (i) the death of a party (Rules 1 to 6);
- (ii) his marriage (Rule 7);
- (iii) his insolvency (Rule 8); or
- (iv) other circumstances, such as transfer inter vivos, etc. (Rule 10).

Order 22
General

Order 22

Death of a party. — If the suit is one in which the "right to sue" does not survive, the death puts an end to the suit. If, on the other hand, it is a suit in which the 'right to sue' survives, the death will not put an end to the suit (Rule 1). In the latter class of suits, that is, suits which are not put an end to on the death of a party, the following questions arise for consideration, viz.: What is the procedure to be followed in such suits? And what are the consequences of not following that procedure? The answer to the questions will depend upon (i) who is the party that died; and (ii) to whom or against whom does the right survive? From these standpoints the following six alternative cases are possible:

- (1) One of two or more plaintiffs may die and the right to sue may survive to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone.
- (2) One of two or more defendants may die and the right to sue may survive against the surviving defendant or defendants alone.
- (3) One of two or more plaintiffs may die and the right to sue may survive either to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs along with third persons or exclusively to third persons.
- (4) A sole plaintiff or sole surviving plaintiff may die in which case the right to sue must, if at all, survive to persons who are not plaintiffs.
- (5) One of two or more defendants may die and the right to sue may survive either against the surviving defendant or defendants along with third persons or exclusively against third persons.
- (6) A sole defendant or sole surviving defendant may die in which case the right to sue must, if at all, survive against persons who are not defendants.

Rule 2 provides for the first two of the above alternatives. Rule 3 applies to the third and fourth; and Rule 4 to the fifth and sixth alternatives. Rule 5 provides for determining the question as to who is the person to whom or against whom the right to sue survives, in case there should be a dispute about it. The provisions of Rules 3 and 4 do not apply when the death occurs between the conclusion of the hearing of the suit and pronouncement of judgment in it (Rule 6).

Marriage. — See Rule 7.

Insolvency. — Rule 8 deals with the insolvency of a plaintiff. The insolvency of a defendant does not fall within Rule 8, but comes under Rule 10.

The effect of an abatement under the provisions of any of the previous rules is dealt with by Rule 9; and sub-rule (2) thereof provides the remedy by the person aggrieved by the abatement. Other cases of creation, assignment and devolution are dealt with by Rule 10. It will be noted that under this rule there is no abatement and even a substitution is within the discretion of the Court.

2. Scope and applicability of the Order. — The provisions of this Order apply only to cases of creation, transfer or devolution of interest during the pendency of suit. Thus, there can be no substitution of legal representatives under this Order if the party is dead before the institution of the suit.<sup>1</sup> Nor can the provisions of the Order apply if the death occurs after the suit has been disposed of.<sup>2</sup> Rule 6 itself is an illustration of this principle.

1. ('20) AIR 1920 Sind 82 (88).
- ('82) AIR 1982 Sind 220 (220): 26 Sind L R 362.
2. ('89) AIR 1989 Lah 84 (84). (If a plaintiff sues and dies after his suit has been dismissed, his legal representatives may appeal from the decree without making any application to be brought on the record in his place.)

Applicability to appeals. — By virtue of Rule 11 the provisions of this Order apply to appeals. But in so applying them the following points should be noted :

- (i) Since an appeal is but a continuation of the suit, the provisions of the Order will apply even though the death may have occurred between the date of the lower Court's decree and that of the filing of the appeal (vide Notes under the several rules).
- (ii) Though a suit on a personal action will abate on the death of a party during its pendency, yet if the suit is decreed, and, pending an appeal from the decree the death occurs, the appeal will not abate.<sup>3</sup> The reasons for this distinction have been discussed under Rr. 1, 3, 4 and 11.

The word "appeal" in Rule 11 does not include appeals before the Privy Council; and the provisions of this Order do not apply to such appeals. The reason is that judgments and orders of the Privy Council are, in effect, orders of the Sovereign and are of full force and effect despite the death of parties<sup>4</sup> and Courts in India have no power to treat an order of the Sovereign as a nullity.<sup>5</sup> However, if a party dies after the grant of leave to appeal to the Privy Council and before the transmission of papers to England, the High Court can order substitution of legal representatives to avoid technical objections. But this power exists not by virtue of this Order and there is no limitation of time for such substitution.<sup>6</sup>

Applicability to execution proceedings. — By virtue of Rule 12, the provisions in Rules 3, 4 and 8 of this Order do not apply to execution proceedings.<sup>7</sup> As to whether an appeal against an order made in execution proceedings is itself a proceeding in execution of a decree or order within the meaning of Rule 12, see Note 1 to that rule.

Applicability to miscellaneous proceedings. — By virtue of Section 141 of the Code, the provisions of this Order may be made applicable, whenever possible, to proceedings other than a suit or an appeal. For proceedings arising out of a reference to arbitration, see Schedule II, Para. 1, Note 17, infra. A conciliation proceeding under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879) pending before a Sub-Judge has been held to be a proceeding in a Civil Court to which the provisions of this Order are applicable.<sup>8</sup> But they have been held to be inapplicable to proceedings in a Mamlatdar's Court under the Mamlatdars Act (Bombay Act III of 1876) on the ground that the said Act provides for a summary procedure in certain matters and that by implication the elaborate procedure contained in the Code was not intended to be applied to such proceedings.<sup>9</sup> The provisions of the Order apply to proceedings under the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act (25 of 1934).<sup>10</sup> This Order is also applicable to proceedings under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, VI of 1908 : see Section 265 (3) of that Act.

Applicability to revision proceedings. — There is a conflict of decisions as to the applicability of this Order to applications for revision. It has been held by the High Courts of Madras and Calcutta that this Order applies to such applications.<sup>11</sup> But

Applicability to applications for leave to appeal. — This Order does not apply to applications for leave to appeal to the Privy Council.<sup>18</sup>

Death of person against whom insolvency petition has been filed—Proceedings, if can be continued against the estate. — It has been held in the undermentioned cases<sup>14</sup> that a person against whom a petition in insolvency has been presented can be declared insolvent in spite of the fact that he dies before the application is decided.

Effect of abatement. — Where an action fails under this Order, all reliefs or claims incidental to the action also fail. Thus, if an appeal abates as regards an injunction sought for, the appellant cannot press the appeal so far as the costs incurred by him in the lower Court are concerned.<sup>15</sup>

2. Scope of the Rule. — Where, during the pendency of a suit, a party dies, the first question to be decided is whether the right to sue survives or not.<sup>1</sup> If it does not, there is an end of the suit. If it does, the suit can be continued, though the trial of the suit cannot be proceeded with immediately and without anything more. The reason is, that on the death of a party, the suit is in a state of suspense<sup>2</sup> and its trial cannot be taken up without following the procedure laid down in Rules 2, 3 or 4, as the case may be.

3. "Right to sue," meaning of. — The words "right to sue" must be interpreted to mean "right to seek relief."<sup>1</sup>

Illustrations

1. A files a suit against B for damages. A dies during the pendency of the suit. Here A's right to sue, as to the survival of which a question might arise, is the right to claim damages from B which A had at the time of his death.

2. In the above suit, suppose A gets a decree for damages and B appeals against the decree and during the pendency of the appeal B dies. Here B's "right to sue," about the survival of which a question might arise, is to have the decree of the lower Court set aside, which is a very different thing from A's right to sue.<sup>3</sup>

3. Suppose in the above case B's appeal is allowed and A prefers a second appeal and during the pendency thereof A dies. Here A's "right to sue," about the survival of which a question might arise, is the right to have restored the benefit of the first Court's decree in his favour, and not his original right to claim damages against B.<sup>3</sup>

4. Suppose A's suit in the first Court is dismissed and A appeals and during the pendency thereof he dies. The right to sue will remain the same as the one on which he instituted the suit.<sup>4</sup>

In each of the above cases a person claiming that the right to sue of the deceased plaintiff or appellant has survived to him must show that he asserts the right to the same relief which the deceased plaintiff or appellant asserted at the time of his death.<sup>5</sup>

4. When right to sue survives. — The general rule is that all rights of action and all demands whatsoever existing in favour of or against a person at the time of his death survive to and against his representatives. For illustrations, see the under-mentioned cases.<sup>1</sup> There are, however, exceptions to this general rule. Rights intimately connected with the individuality of the deceased will not survive.<sup>2</sup> One aspect of this exception is expressed by the maxim actio personalis moritur cum persona — a personal right of action dies with the person.

The general rule and the exception abovementioned have also been recognized by the Legislature in the following enactments dealing with particular classes of cases and they may be usefully referred to as illustrating the principles applicable to the generality of cases.

(1) Section 37 of the Contract Act lays down that "promises bind the legal representatives of the promisor in case of the death of such promisor before performance, unless a contrary intention appears from the contract." Such a contrary intention will be presumed when the contract is of a nature involving special skill or personal confidence, etc.

(2) Section 306 of the Succession Act of 1925 provides that "all demands whatsoever, and all rights, to prosecute or defend any action or special proceeding existing in favour of or against a person at the time of his decease, survive to and against his executors or administrators; except causes of action for defamation, assault, as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or other personal injuries not causing the death of the party; and except also cases where, after the death of the party, the relief sought could not be enjoyed or granting it would be nugatory."

It is the original party's rights and disabilities that have to be considered and the mere fact that the legal representative could not, in his individual capacity, have brought a suit for the relief claimed does not cause abatement of the pending suit.<sup>3</sup>

5. Right to sue in personal actions. — In cases of personal actions, that is, in actions where the relief sought is personal to the deceased, the "right to sue" will not survive to his representatives.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a suit for damages for breach of a contract of betrothal (except to the extent of the actual expenses incurred when the betrothal was in force)<sup>2</sup> and a suit for dissolution of marriage together with the claim for damages against the co-respondent<sup>3</sup> are suits involving claims of a personal nature which will not survive on the death of either party to his representative. A suit by a Hindu widow under the Dayabhaga Law for partition in lieu of her maintenance will not survive on her death,<sup>4</sup> but if, by an award or a compromise, a fixed sum has been awarded to her in lieu of her interest, a suit to recover the sum will be a suit to recover property and will survive to her legal representatives.<sup>5</sup> Similarly, if what was once a personal claim has matured into a decree, the benefit of the decree will survive to the legal representatives.<sup>6</sup>

6. Suit to establish right to personal office. — A right to a personal office does not survive on the death of the claimant and a suit to establish such a right abates on the death of the plaintiff.<sup>1</sup> But if emoluments are attached to the office the right to sue will, on the principles mentioned in Note 4 above, survive and the suit will not abate.<sup>2</sup>

7. Right to sue in respect of torts. — The maxim actio personalis moritur cum persona is, as a general rule, applicable to actions in respect of torts and therefore, on the death of either party to such action, the right to sue will be extinguished.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the maxim will apply to the following cases —

- (1) Suits for damages for injury to reputation such as defamation,<sup>2</sup> malicious prosecution,<sup>3</sup> malicious arrest<sup>4</sup> and malicious search.<sup>5</sup>
- (2) Suits for damages for obstruction to plaintiff's right of way over defendant's land.<sup>6</sup>
- (3) Suits for damages for illegal distraint for cess.<sup>7</sup>
- (4) Suits for damages for refusal to deliver the keys of a temple and to allow worship being performed.<sup>8</sup>
- (5) Suit by A for recovery of custody of his minor daughter left in the defendant's custody.<sup>9</sup>
- (6) Suit for an injunction restraining defendant from preventing the plaintiff's standing at a particular place in a temple.<sup>10</sup>

Where, however, the tort is one relating to or affecting the estate of the deceased, the maxim does not apply and the right to sue will survive to his representatives.<sup>11</sup> Thus, it will survive where the tort committed has injured the estate of the deceased<sup>12</sup> or benefited the estate of the wrongdoer.<sup>13</sup> But the injury or the benefit must be the direct result of the wrong<sup>14</sup> and the damage caused by the injury must be liquidated

and certain.<sup>15</sup>

8. Right to sue on contracts.—A right to sue in respect of a contract will, on the general principles referred to in Note 4, survive to the representatives of the promisee. Thus, in a suit on a bond or to enforce specific performance of a contract to sell or recover property, if the plaintiff dies, the right to sue will survive to his legal representatives.<sup>1</sup> The right to sue will survive against the promisor's representatives unless a contrary intention appears from the contract such as the contract being incapable of being performed by persons other than the deceased. See Section 37 of the Contract Act and the illustrations thereto.

9. Right to sue for pre-emption.—Rights of pre-emption are of two different kinds, viz.—

- (1) those incidental to the ownership of property; and
- (2) those which are purely personal.

Rights of the former kind will survive while those of the latter kind will not. In deciding the question whether the right to sue in pre-emption suits survives or not, it is necessary to see whether the right claimed is one incidental to the ownership of property or only a personal right. The answer to the question will, in turn, depend upon the origin of the right. It may be founded on Mahomedan law or on custom or it may have been given by statute.

Pre-emption under Mahomedan law.—Under the law applicable to the Sunni Mahomedans, the right of pre-emption does not survive on the death of the pre-emptor before decree.<sup>1</sup> Under the law applicable to the Shafis the right would appear to survive to the heirs of the pre-emptor on his death before decree.<sup>2</sup> Under the law applicable to other sects of Mahomedans there is a conflict of authority between the Allahabad and Bombay High Courts. The Allahabad High Court<sup>3</sup> holds that the right in such cases is incidental to and arising out of ownership of land and that it therefore survives to the heirs of the pre-emptor though it cannot be transferred. The same view prevails in the Punjab.<sup>4</sup> But according to the Bombay High Court, the right is a personal one and does not survive to the heirs or other legal representatives of the pre-emptor<sup>5</sup> except in so far as it falls within the provisions of Section 306 of the Indian Succession Act.<sup>6</sup> In Madras where the principle of an absolute transfer of all rights under a sale prevails, a right of pre-emption is not recognized,<sup>7</sup> except as a matter of custom in some places such as Malabar.<sup>8</sup>

Pre-emption under customary law.—Where the right claimed is one based on a custom, the question of its survival will have to be decided on evidence as to the custom.<sup>9</sup> Generally speaking, a right of pre-emption based on wazib-ul-ars is an incident of proprietary possession and will survive unless such survival is expressly excluded by local usage or other specific provisions.<sup>10</sup> In Bombay, however, even a customary right of pre-emption has been held to be a personal one.<sup>11</sup>

Notes 10-15

Pre-emption under statute. — Where the right claimed is one conferred by statute, the question whether it survives or not will be governed by the provisions of the particular statute conferring the right. Thus, under the Oudh Laws Act (XVIII of 1876) the right of pre-emption survives to the pre-emptor's heirs.<sup>12</sup> It can also be devised though not alienated to a stranger.<sup>13</sup>

9a. Right to sue for partition. — In the case of a Hindu Mitakshara joint family, the filing of a suit for partition by one of the coparceners effects a severance of the joint status so far as he is concerned, and if he dies during the pendency of the suit his legal representatives can be brought on the record and can continue the suit.<sup>1</sup>

10. Application for leave to sue in forma pauperis. — The right to apply for leave to sue in forma pauperis is purely a personal one depending upon the pauperism of the petitioner. On his death, therefore, the right does not survive.<sup>1</sup> Further, the legal representative may or may not be a pauper.<sup>2</sup> If he is, he may file a fresh application in his own right.<sup>3</sup> If he is not, he has no right to sue in forma pauperis.<sup>4</sup>

Where the leave is granted, the plaint gets registered as a suit, and if the plaintiff dies thereafter, his legal representative can no doubt continue the suit if the right to sue survives. He can further continue the suit as a pauper if he is himself a pauper.<sup>5</sup> If he is not a pauper, he should pay the court-fee, otherwise the suit will be struck off.<sup>6</sup> This power to enquire into the pauperism of a legal representative is no doubt not contained in Order 22<sup>7</sup> but exists in a Court by virtue of its power to dispauper the original plaintiff himself at any stage of the suit. In making an order for or against the legal representative, however, the Court should first see whether he is a legal representative in the capacity of an heir entitled personally or beneficially to the estate of the deceased or whether he is only coming in in a representative capacity, having no personal or beneficial interest. In the former case, his own property can be taken into account.<sup>8</sup> In the latter case, only the estate of the deceased should be considered and not his individual property.<sup>9</sup>

If a defendant in an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis dies, there being no suit, Order 22 does not apply. Nor can Section 141 or Section 146 of the Code be invoked for imposing the penalties contained in Order 22, without express provision to that effect. Consequently, the legal representatives of the deceased defendant can be brought in at any time.<sup>10</sup> Vide also Notes under Rules 3 and 4, infra.

11. Claim to guardianship. — An application under the Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890) or otherwise for the appointment of a guardian for the person or property or both of a minor, is not a proceeding inter partes. It is the Court's duty to look after the interests of the minor and the parties simply set the Court in motion. The policy of the law therefore is not to allow such applications to lapse by the death of parties.<sup>1</sup>

Where, however, the application is to enforce the applicant's personal right to guardianship, the application will abate on the applicant's death.<sup>2</sup> Thus, an application which was based on the petitioner's appointment in a testamentary disposition by the minor's father, was held to abate on the petitioner's death on the ground that the claim was a matter of personal preference and trust and would not therefore survive to the representatives of the petitioner.<sup>3</sup>

12. Right to letters of administration. — A right to the grant of letters of administration is a personal right and does not survive.<sup>1</sup> The heir can, however, apply afresh.<sup>2</sup> Where pending an application by an executor for the probate of a will, the executor dies, his widow cannot continue the application by asking for letters of administration instead.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that the right asserted by the alleged representative must be the same as that asserted by the deceased at the time of his death.

13. Right to sue in representative actions. — See Order 1 Rule 8, Note 24 for a full discussion. See also Order 30 Rule 4.

14. Suit under Section 92 of the Code. — See Section 92, Note 30.

15. Suit by or against limited owners or reversioners. — Suit by or against limited owners. — A limited owner under the Hindu law is not a mere life-estate holder<sup>1</sup> but represents the entire inheritance in certain circumstances.<sup>2</sup> A suit relating to the estate by or against such limited owner is, therefore, not one on any cause of action personal to herself and if she dies pending such suit, the right to sue will survive to the reversioners.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 63 to Section 11, and also Note 5 above.

Suit by or against reversioners. — A suit by or against a reversioner in respect of the estate of a Hindu widow is one brought or defended in a representative capacity and on behalf of all the reversioners.<sup>4</sup> Consequently, on the death, pending suit, of such reversioner, the next reversioner will be entitled to continue the suit or to defend it and there is no abatement.<sup>5</sup> Where, however, on the death of the reversioner, events happen, such as the death of the limited owner, which change the nature of the relief to be granted, there can be no continuation of the suit.<sup>6</sup>

Under certain statutes or customary law prevailing in certain places, the right to control or question the alienation made by a collateral is given to the person who will become immediately interested on the death of such collateral. A suit based on such a right can, on the death of the plaintiff, be continued by the person who becomes so interested on such death.<sup>7</sup> But, where the right to question an alienation is, by law, given only to the descendants of the alienor, a suit by a descendant cannot be continued by collaterals other than those who can show themselves to be descendants of the person whose acts are questioned.<sup>8</sup>

16. Suit under Sections 14 and 18 of the Religious Endowments Act. —

A suit under Section 14 of the Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863) is a representative suit and on the death of the plaintiff any one of the persons interested may get himself substituted and continue the suit without fresh leave.<sup>1</sup> But a suit under Section 14 of the Act against the defendant who is a sole surviving member of a committee for his removal for neglect of duty is purely a personal claim against the defendant and on the death of the latter the right to sue will not survive against his heir.<sup>2</sup>

17. Partial abatement. — An abatement may be total or partial. It may be partial either as regards the parties to the suit (Rules 3 and 4) or as regards the subject-matter or reliefs.

The latter kind of partial abatement will arise where there are two or more reliefs claimed in the suit and on the death of a party the "right to sue" survives with respect to some of them but does not survive with respect to the others.

Illustrations

18. Death of either party pending appeal. — A "right to sue" which would have survived had the death of a party occurred during the pendency of a suit, will survive on such death taking place during the pendency of an appeal from the decree in the suit. (Vide Notes under Rule 4.)

Notes 18-19

In cases where it would not have so survived had the death occurred pending the suit, the question whether it survives or not if the death occurs pending appeal, will depend upon the result of the suit. If the suit has resulted in a decree in favour of the plaintiff's claim, then the claim will have become perfected by the decree and attached to the estate. Thereafter, it becomes a question of benefit to the estate of the plaintiff which his legal representatives are entitled to uphold, or a detriment to the estate of the defendant which his legal representatives are entitled to try and get rid of; consequently, the "right to sue" survives.<sup>1</sup> In such cases the fact that the lower Court's decree has already been executed will not affect the question, since the legal representative can get restitution if he succeeds.<sup>2</sup>

But if in the first Court the result was a dismissal of the suit, the plaintiff, in appealing against it is only seeking to enforce the very claim which he unsuccessfully sought to enforce in the suit. The appeal, therefore, partakes of the character of the suit and the "right to sue" will not survive on the death of either party.<sup>3</sup> The appeal cannot be continued even in respect of costs or other reliefs which are merely incidental to the main relief.<sup>4</sup> (See also Order 22, General, Note 2.) If the first Court has decreed the suit in part, then an appeal by the plaintiff in respect of the part disallowed will partake of the nature of an appeal from a dismissal of the suit.<sup>5</sup>

If the "right to sue" in an appeal does not survive, then the memorandum of cross-objections filed by the respondent cannot be heard and must also be dismissed.<sup>6</sup>

19. Suit or appeal against a dead person. — It has been seen in Note 2 to Order 22, General, that this Order applies only to cases of death during the pendency of the suit and not to cases of death occurring before the institution of the suit. A suit against a person who is dead at the time of the institution thereof is void and of no legal effect<sup>1</sup> and it is immaterial whether the death was known at the time or not.<sup>2</sup> Such a suit cannot be amended into one against his legal representatives.<sup>3</sup> But an appeal filed against a dead party can, according to the High Courts of Madras and Lahore, be amended by bringing in the legal representatives on the record.<sup>4</sup> According to the Sind and Upper Burma Judicial Commissioner's Courts, however, the Court has no jurisdiction to bring in the legal representative in such a case<sup>5</sup> although, if the legal representative is already on record in another capacity, the memorandum of appeal can be amended so as to describe him as the legal representative of the deceased.<sup>6</sup> O. 22 R. 1 Notes 19-21

The principle of the rule that a suit against a dead person is a nullity does not apply to execution proceedings. Thus, where an execution application is presented against a judgment-debtor who is dead at the time of the presentation of the application, the application can be amended by the substitution of the heirs of the deceased.<sup>7</sup>

Where the legal representative of a party dying subsequent to decree is allowed to file an appeal against the decree without notice to the respondent, the latter can, at the hearing, raise the objection that the appellant is not really the legal representative and the appeal will be dismissed if there is no application to bring the right legal representative on record.<sup>8</sup>

20. No abatement by reason of death after decree.—When a suit is decreed, the decree determines and settles the claims of the parties. The claim is perfected by the judgment<sup>1</sup> and the decree is properly capable of transfer, devolution or inheritance like any other property.<sup>2</sup> Hence, there is no abatement by death subsequent to the decree.<sup>3</sup> But this principle does not apply to the case of death after a decree dismissing a suit on a personal claim: vide Note 17.

21. Appeal and revision.—An order refusing an application to add a person as a legal representative and directing abatement of the suit on the ground that the right to sue does not survive, is appealable as a decree.<sup>1</sup>

An order adding or refusing to add a person as a legal representative of a deceased party may be open to revision under Section 115 of the Code.<sup>2</sup>

Note 1*Synopsis*

1. Scope.
2. Right to sue surviving to surviving plaintiffs.
3. Right to sue surviving against surviving defendants.
4. "Suit" includes appeal.

1. Scope. — In order that this rule may apply, it is necessary that —

- (1) there should be more than one plaintiff or more than one defendant in the suit, and
- (2) on the death of one of the plaintiffs or one of the defendants the right to sue should survive to the surviving plaintiffs alone or against the surviving defendants alone, respectively, even though they might have been on the record in another capacity.<sup>1</sup>

The word "survive" has not been used in any technical sense. It has been used in its ordinary sense of "outlive." This rule, therefore, applies to cases of every kind of devolution on death.<sup>2</sup> It is not necessary that the survival should be by reason of any circumstance antecedent to the suit.<sup>3</sup>

The word "alone" in the rule means "exclusively," i. e., to the exclusion of other persons.<sup>4</sup> It, however, does not mean that no one else should be entitled to sue or be liable to be sued: it only means that the survivor or survivors should be entitled to sue or be liable to be sued independently of others, i. e., without joining others.<sup>5</sup>

No application is necessary for making the necessary entry under this rule. It is the duty of the Court to do so.<sup>6</sup>

The following points of distinction between this rule and Rules 3 and 4 may be noted —

- (i) There can be no abatement if the facts come within the provisions of this rule;<sup>7</sup> whereas if the facts fall within the provisions of Rules 3 or 4 and the procedure laid down therein is not adopted, the suit will abate.
- (ii) If the conditions of this rule are satisfied, the suit can be proceeded with even if it had been filed against a dead person along with others who are his legal representatives;<sup>8</sup> whereas Rules 3 and 4 will not apply if the party was dead at the time of institution of the suit.

- (iii) The application of this rule or of Rules 3 and 4 infra depends on whether the right to sue fully vests in the surviving plaintiffs or is fully available against the surviving defendants. Thus, in all cases where the right to sue is fully represented by the surviving plaintiff or defendant already on record, this rule will apply; and when it would not be fully represented unless some person not already on record is added as a party, Rules 3 or 4 infra will apply.<sup>9</sup>

Suppose, there are several defendants to a suit. One of them dies. His legal representatives are already on the record as defendants in another capacity. Can it be said that in such cases the right to sue survives against the surviving defendants alone within the meaning of this rule, so that it is not necessary to make an application to bring them on the record as legal representatives under Rule 4 infra? It has been held by the Bombay High Court<sup>10</sup> that where the interest of a defendant in the subject-matter of the suit does not cease on his death and his legal representatives as such have an interest in the subject-matter, an application to bring them on the record is necessary. On this question, however, there is a conflict of decisions for which see Note 12 to Rule 4, infra.

2. Right to sue surviving to surviving plaintiffs. — Where joint purchasers of property sue for possession and pending the suit one of them dies, the right to sue will survive to the others if the purchase is joint and indivisible but not if it is of distinct though undivided shares.<sup>1</sup>

As to the survival of the right to sue on the death of a partner in suits by a firm, see O. 30 R. 4; and as to the survival of such right on the death of plaintiff in a suit under Section 92 of the Code, see Section 92, Note 30. See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup>

1. Legislative changes. —

1. Section 363 of the old Code dealing with the case of death of one of several plaintiffs provided that the Court "may cause the legal representative" of the deceased plaintiff to be made a party; Section 365 which dealt with the death of a sole plaintiff provided that the legal representative may apply to be brought on the record and "the Court shall thereupon enter his name." Under the present rule "the Court, in all cases, on an application made in that behalf, shall cause the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff to be made a party." See Note 7, infra.

Notes 1-8

2. The words "the Court may pass an order that the suit shall abate" which occurred in Section 366 of the old Code have been substituted by the words "the suit shall abate."

3. After the words "the suit shall abate" the words "so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned" have been newly added in order to make it clear that the abatement shall, in the first instance, be only so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned and not of the whole suit. See Notes 18 and 23, infra.

2. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — In order that this rule may apply, the following conditions must be satisfied —

1. The death must occur pending the suit. Thus the rule does not apply where a plaintiff dies after decrees.<sup>1</sup>
2. The right to sue must survive to a "legal representative" as defined by Section 2, sub-section (11).<sup>2</sup>
3. The right to sue must survive either to other persons jointly with the surviving plaintiffs or to those other persons exclusively.
4. The deceased plaintiff must have been a necessary party to the suit. Otherwise, or, if he has no interest in the suit, his legal representatives need not be made parties and the rule will not apply.<sup>3</sup>

Where a plaintiff dies, the suit cannot be dismissed for default of appearance under Order 9. The provisions of Order 22 will apply to such cases.<sup>4</sup> See Note 1 to O. 9 R. 8, ante.

The principle of the rule has been held to apply to proceedings in revision<sup>5</sup> and to cases before the Deputy Commissioner under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act.<sup>6</sup> But it does not apply to proceedings in an application for probate.<sup>7</sup> The rule applies to proceedings under the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act of 1934.<sup>8</sup>

As to the applicability of the rule to appeals, see Note 3 below.

3. Rule applies to appeals. — The provisions of this rule apply also to appeals (vide Rule 11, infra). Where an appellant dies during the pendency of the appeal and his right of appeal does not survive to the surviving appellant alone, his legal representatives can and should be brought on record; and if no application therefor is made within the prescribed time, the appeal will abate so far as the deceased appellant is concerned.<sup>1-2</sup>

Notes 3-6

Where two independent appeals were filed against the same decree, one by the plaintiff and the other by one of the defendants, and during the pendency of the appeals the plaintiff died and his legal representatives were impleaded in his appeal but not in the defendant's appeal, it was held by the High Court of Madras<sup>3</sup> that the latter appeal abated and that the impleading of the legal representative in the plaintiff's appeal would not enure for the benefit of the other appeal.

In applying the rule to appeals, the interpretation of the words "right to sue" as given in Note 3 to Rule 1 should be remembered and it will follow that, even in cases where the suit would have abated by reason of the right to sue not surviving on the death of the plaintiff, the right to appeal may survive.<sup>4</sup> See Note 3 to Rule 1.

3a. Applicability of Rule to revision proceedings. — See Order 22, General, Note 2.

4. Rule does not apply to execution proceedings. — See Rule 12, infra and Notes thereto.

5. Where right to sue survives to persons other than the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone. — This rule will apply only where the right to sue does not survive, where there are several plaintiffs, to the surviving plaintiffs alone<sup>1</sup> but survives either to the surviving plaintiffs jointly with others<sup>2</sup> or exclusively to others. If the right to sue survives to the surviving plaintiff alone the case is not within this rule<sup>3</sup> but is governed by the provisions of Rule 2.

Where the right to sue survives to a contesting defendant, the rule cannot apply inasmuch as he cannot continue the suit against himself.<sup>4</sup> The case is, however, different if the defendant on whom the right to sue survives is only a pro forma defendant.<sup>5</sup>

See also Notes to Rule 2 above.

6. Death of a pauper applicant. — As already pointed out in Note 10 to Rule 1, the right to apply for permission to sue in forma pauperis is a purely personal right which does not survive at all. On the death therefore of the petitioner in such an application, this rule will not apply.<sup>1</sup> But, it has been held that the legal representative is entitled to be brought on the record and to continue the suit on payment of court-fee; or he may file a fresh application for leave to sue as a pauper.<sup>2</sup> See also O. 22 R. 1, Note 10.

7. "On an application made in that behalf." — The Court cannot, under this rule, add a legal representative suo motu. An application must be made for the purpose.<sup>1</sup> The application can be made even by a defendant or respondent interested in bringing the legal representative on the record.<sup>2</sup> Where there are several legal representatives it is not necessary that the application need be made by all of them.<sup>3</sup> Further, even an application made by a person who is ultimately found not to be a legal representative has been held to be sufficient compliance with the requirements of the rule, if it has been made bona fide.<sup>4</sup> But where A applies to be made a party as legal representative and the application states that B is not the legal representative, B cannot seek to counteract his own failure to apply in time by relying on A's application.<sup>5</sup>

Where a party dies after decree, his legal representative can file an appeal against the decree without making a separate application for impleading him as a party; the appeal itself may be regarded as an application for the purpose.<sup>6</sup>

8. Limitation for application under this Rule. — The period of limitation for filing an application to bring the legal representatives on record under this rule is ninety days from the date of the death of the plaintiff under Article 176 of the Limitation Act as amended by Act XXVI of 1920 and this is so even if the death had occurred before the amending Act was passed.<sup>1</sup>

The onus is on the applicant to prove that the application is within time.<sup>2</sup>

Where one of the legal representatives has applied in time to be made a party and the application has been granted, the other legal representatives may be brought on the record subsequently.<sup>3</sup>

9. "Shall cause the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff to be made a party." — The Court is bound to implead the legal representatives as parties on an application made in that behalf,<sup>1</sup> unless there is a dispute as to who is the legal representative, in which case, the question should be decided by it under Rule 5.<sup>2</sup>

Where an application to add a person as the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff is filed, but the Court, without expressly adding the petitioner as a party allows him to prosecute the suit or appeal, the petitioner will be deemed to have been brought on the record.<sup>3</sup> But the same result will not follow by the mere fact that a vakalatnama is filed by a pleader on behalf of the legal representative.<sup>4</sup>

It has been held that where on the death of the father who was a co-plaintiff in a suit, his sons refuse to be substituted as his legal representatives and are joined as pro forma defendants, the requirements of law are complied with and the suit does not abate.<sup>5</sup>

A Court to which a case has been sent on remand has jurisdiction to act under this rule.<sup>6</sup>

Where a suit is dismissed for default in ignorance of the plaintiff's death and subsequently an application is filed by his legal representative to be brought on the record, the Court can set aside the order of dismissal and restore the suit to the file under Section 151 and substitute the legal representative's name for that of the deceased plaintiff.<sup>7</sup>

10. Legal representative. — The expression "legal representative" was not defined under the old Code. Under the English law, the primary meaning of the expression is "executor or administrator" though it may, under special circumstances, be controlled by the context.<sup>1</sup> The same strict meaning was given to the expression in some cases under the old Code<sup>2</sup> while in other cases a wider meaning was given so as to cover all persons representing the estate of a deceased person.<sup>3</sup> The present definition in Section 2, clause (11) of the Code is very wide<sup>4</sup> and gives effect to the latter view. Under that definition the following persons are legal representatives —

1. A person who, in law, represents the estate of a deceased person.<sup>5</sup>
2. A person who intermeddles with the estate of a deceased.<sup>6</sup>
3. Where a party sues or is sued in a representative character, the person on whom the estate devolves on the death of the party so suing or sued.<sup>7</sup>

The term "next of kin" is peculiar to the English law of inheritance and does not mean the same thing as the term "legal representative" under the Code.<sup>8</sup>

(1) Person who, in law, represents the estate of a deceased person. — There are certain cases which are governed by the Succession Act, 1925, in which the executor or administrator alone can represent the estate of a deceased person.<sup>9</sup> In such cases they alone are his legal representatives.<sup>10</sup> In cases not governed by the Succession Act there may or may not be an executor or administrator. Where there is an executor or administrator he will be the legal representative of the deceased person; where the will is with regard to part of the property of the testator, the executor cannot be his legal representative with regard to the properties of the deceased not dealt with by the will.<sup>11</sup> Where there are no executors or administrators, the heir or the legatee will be the legal representative of the deceased person in respect of the property respectively got by him.<sup>12</sup> In other words, the term "legal representative," as defined in this Code, only denotes those classes of persons on whom the status of a representative is fastened by reason of the death of a person whose estate they are held to represent.<sup>13</sup> But an assignee from the deceased of a certain property is not his legal representative, for, he does not get any estate of the deceased by reason of his death.<sup>14</sup> Similarly, the Crown getting by escheat the property of a person on his death is not a legal representative, as it does not get the estate as representing the deceased person but in its paramount right;<sup>15</sup> so also a zamindar who, on the death of a tenant, gets under the village custom his interest by escheat, is not his legal representative.<sup>16</sup> Again, the Official Assignee or Receiver of an insolvent's estate is not a "legal representative" of the insolvent.<sup>17</sup>

(2) Intermeddlers. — The term "intermeddle" has been used to mean an intermeddling with the assets of a deceased person in such a way as to denote an assumption of the authority, or an intention to exercise the functions of an executor or administrator.<sup>18</sup> In other words, it has been used to mean what is known as an executor de son tort.<sup>19</sup> It is therefore essential, in order to constitute a person an intermeddler, that there should be an intention on his part to act as a legal representative and to represent the estate of the deceased.<sup>20</sup> A trespasser or a person who claims a title in himself adversely to the estate of the deceased cannot, therefore, be an intermeddler within the meaning of the definition.<sup>21</sup> He will, however, be a legal representative if he intends to act as a legal representative and to represent the estate

as such.<sup>22</sup> It depends, in each case, upon the particular facts of that case whether he intends to do so. An intermeddler is a legal representative only for the purposes of the procedure in instituting and defending suits and only to the extent of the property with which he had intermeddled.<sup>23</sup> It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>24</sup> that an intermeddler cannot sue on behalf of the estate though a suit may be brought against him as representing the estate.

Where it is alleged on behalf of the plaintiff that the defendant is the legal representative of the deceased debtor in that he has intermeddled with the estate of the deceased, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove that the defendant has intermeddled with the property of the debtor at the time of his death.<sup>25</sup>

The definition in Section 2 clause (11) merely means that a person who intermeddles with the estate may be treated as the legal representative. It does not mean that such a person is to be preferred to a person who is found to be the true legal representative of the deceased.<sup>26</sup>

(3) Representative suits. — In representative suits the legal representative must be a person on whom the estate devolves on the death of the party suing or sued.<sup>27</sup> Where, on the death of a trustee, a new trustee is elected or appointed, the latter is not the legal representative of the deceased trustee, inasmuch as the estate did not devolve on him on the death of the former trustee, but by virtue of his appointment or election which has no retrospective operation.<sup>28</sup> In a suit by a Hindu widow for the benefit of the estate, the estate will devolve on the death of the plaintiff on the next reversioner who will therefore be the legal representative of the plaintiff.<sup>29</sup> In a suit by a reversioner in respect of an estate held by a Hindu female, the reversioner plaintiff sues on behalf of the whole reversionary body. In other words, all the reversioners are represented in the suit by the plaintiff reversioner, and on the latter's death, other reversioners may be brought on the record for the purpose of continuing the suit.<sup>30</sup> This, however, is not because the succeeding reversioners are legal representatives of the deceased reversioner (for there was no estate vested in him which devolved on his death to the succeeding reversioners), but under the provisions of O.1 Rules 8 and 10.<sup>31</sup> See Note 24 to O.1 R. 8. It has been held that a benamidar is in some sense a trustee for the real owner and his son who has some interest can succeed to the trusteeship and can be considered to be his legal representative within the meaning of Section 2, clause (11).<sup>32</sup>

When a person's name is entered on the record as representing the estate of a deceased person, there is no determination of any question as to the capacity in which the name is entered. It may be afterwards shown that the person was substituted in a representative character, for instance, as representing the members of a joint Hindu family.<sup>33</sup>

The right to enforce a partnership contract does not vest in the surviving partner alone.<sup>34</sup> But though the rights of a deceased partner may devolve on his representative, the right to sue survives to the surviving partners in the absence of any statutory authority to the contrary; the latter may therefore continue the suit as legal representatives of the deceased partner.<sup>35</sup>

It is not necessary that the legal representative should be in actual possession of the assets of the deceased. It is sufficient if he is entitled to the possession thereof, i.e., if he is a person on whom the estate would devolve.<sup>36</sup>

If A allows his benamidar, B, to sue in his own name, he cannot, on the death of B, claim to come in as B's legal representative.<sup>37</sup> A District Judge taking possession of the assets of a deceased person under Section 64 of the Administrator-General's Act, II of 1874, is not the legal representative of the deceased.<sup>38</sup>

If a legal representative dies, his own legal representatives who have received assets of the previous deceased, will represent him.<sup>39</sup>

and if any of them refuses to join as plaintiff or appellant he must be made a defendant or a respondent.<sup>3</sup> Where, however, some of them are omitted to be brought on the record, there is a conflict of views as to whether the suit or appeal abates. According to the High Court of Allahabad<sup>3</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind,<sup>4</sup> it does. According to the High Court of Calcutta the term "legal representative" means all the representatives of whom the representative applying knew or ought to have known. Where one or more of the legal representatives are unknown or are unwilling to join in the application, a bona fide application by all the representatives who are willing to join will be sufficient compliance with this rule.<sup>5</sup> The High Courts of Bombay,<sup>6</sup> Lahore<sup>7</sup> and Madras,<sup>8</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Courts of Nagpur<sup>9</sup> and Oudh<sup>10</sup> hold that a bona fide application by all those representatives who are willing to join is enough and will save the suit or appeal from abatement. In cases where the legal representatives are added after notice to the defendants or respondents and they do not raise any objection as to there being other legal representatives, even the Allahabad High Court agrees that it is not open to the defendants or respondents to subsequently contend that the suit or appeal has abated by reason of the fact that all the representatives were not brought on record.<sup>11</sup> Further, where the legal representatives of a deceased person constitute a joint Hindu family and the manager of the family is brought on the record as representing the family, it is not necessary to bring on record the other members of the family.<sup>12</sup>

Joint Hindu family and legal representatives. — It has been held by the High Courts of Lahore<sup>1</sup> and Bombay<sup>2</sup> and the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>3</sup> that where a coparcener in a joint Hindu family dies, the survivors are not his legal representatives, inasmuch as they take the estate by survivorship and not by succession. The High Court of Patna has, on the other hand, held that they are his legal representatives within the meaning of Section 2 (11) of the Code.<sup>4</sup> It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that the last portion of the definition of a "legal representative" in Section 2 (11) is wide enough to cover the case of a coparcener who gets property by survivorship on the death of a coparcener who sues or is sued in a representative character.<sup>5</sup> But it has been held that by force of Section 53, where a son or other descendant of a Hindu has joint family property in his hands which is liable for the debts of the ancestor, such son or other descendant is a "legal representative" of the ancestor.<sup>6</sup>

Where, however, the deceased coparcener was the managing member of the family representing the family, the succeeding managing member is, according to the High Courts of Bombay<sup>7</sup> and Madras,<sup>8</sup> a "person who, in law, represents the estate of a deceased person" and is therefore his legal representative. The Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court also has held that where a suit is brought by the manager of a joint Hindu family and the plaintiff dies pending the suit, the substitution of the persons who become the managing members of the family after him is sufficient to save the suit from abatement and it is not necessary to bring on record all the members of the family.<sup>9</sup> representatives.<sup>11</sup> The institution of a suit for partition by an adult coparcener effects a division in status. In the case of a minor's suit for partition, the division in status would be effected from the date of the suit conditional on the Court being able to find that the suit when filed was for the benefit of the minor. Where the minor plaintiff dies after the institution of the suit for partition and before the Court has found that the partition is for his benefit, according to the High Court of Madras, the suit does not abate, but it is open to his legal representative to proceed with the trial and obtain a decree on his showing that the suit, when instituted, was for the benefit of the minor.<sup>12</sup> But the High Court of Bombay has taken a contrary view that the heirs of the minor are not entitled to continue the suit.<sup>13</sup> After a preliminary decree for partition even the minor plaintiff becomes a divided member, and, on his death, his heirs will be his legal representatives.<sup>14</sup>

14. Legal representatives of deceased plaintiff or appellant already on record in another capacity. — Where the legal representatives of a deceased plaintiff or appellant are already on the record, though in another capacity, an application to bring them in as legal representatives is unnecessary.<sup>1</sup> As to whether such an application is necessary in the case of the death of a defendant or respondent, see Note 12 to Rule 4, infra.

15. Determination of the question as to who is the legal representative. — Where a dispute arises as to who is the legal representative, the Court should, under Rule 5, determine the question.<sup>1</sup> The effect of such a determination is, however, only limited for the purposes of the suit and is not to be conclusive of his rights.<sup>2</sup>

16. What pleas may be taken by a legal representative. — When a party dies his legal representative is appointed merely in order that the suit might proceed and a decision arrived at. It is the rights and disabilities of the original parties that have to be considered and not those of the legal representatives themselves.<sup>1</sup> All that the representative can therefore do is to take up the suit at the stage at which it was left when the original plaintiff died, and to continue it.<sup>2</sup> He must rely on the same cause of action and on the same title as the deceased plaintiff.<sup>3</sup> It is not open to him to assert his own individual or hostile title in the suit.<sup>4</sup> Likewise, the defendant is not entitled to raise against the legal representative any defence other than those which he could have raised against the deceased plaintiff.<sup>5</sup>

18. "The suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned."
 — If on the death of a plaintiff or appellant, no application to implead his legal representatives is filed within the prescribed time, the suit or appeal will abate.<sup>1</sup> But if such application has been made but rejected, the suit or appeal will not abate.<sup>3</sup> It is immaterial that the application was made by a wrong person, if it was made bona fide.<sup>3</sup>

The impleading of the legal representative in an interlocutory matter in the suit will be enough to save the suit from abatement.<sup>4</sup> But the impleading of a legal representative in a cross-appeal will not save the appeal from abatement.<sup>5</sup>

Under the old Section the Court had to pass an order that the suit or appeal abated. Under the present rule, however, the abatement takes place automatically and no separate order to that effect is necessary,<sup>6</sup> so that, any decree passed in the suit in disregard or in ignorance of an abatement will, to that extent, be set aside on appeal.<sup>7</sup>

An abatement under this rule will be only so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned. If it is a case of death of a sole plaintiff the abatement will be of the entire suit.<sup>8</sup> If, on the other hand, it is a case of death of one of two or more plaintiffs the abatement will, in the first instance, be only so far as he is concerned.<sup>9</sup> The effect of such abatement on the whole suit or on the rights of the other parties will depend upon the nature of the suit and of the reliefs claimed (vide Note 23, infra). O. 22 R. 3

19. Death after preliminary and before final decree. — In suits requiring a preliminary and a final decree, can there be an abatement on the ground that no application was filed in time to implead legal representatives on the death of a plaintiff or of a defendant after the preliminary, but before a final decree? It was held in the undermentioned cases<sup>1</sup> by the High Court of Allahabad, that the suit would abate, the reason being that a suit is "pending" till a final decree is passed. The said Court did not accept the position that the principle laid down by the Privy Council in Lachmi Narain v. Balmakund, A. I. R. 1924 Privy Council 198 was applicable to such cases. In order to avoid this difficulty, O. 22 R. 12 has now been amended by that Court so as to make Rules 3, 4 and 8 inapplicable to proceedings after the preliminary decree.<sup>3</sup>

The view of the other High Courts is that the rule does not apply to such cases and that there can be no abatement of a suit on account of the death of a party after a preliminary and before a final decree.<sup>3</sup>

But, as no decree can be passed against a dead person, where after a preliminary decree, the defendant dies and the Court passes a final decree against him without bringing his legal representatives on the record, the final decree is a

If such right or relief is an indivisible one existing in all the plaintiffs jointly or in or against all the appellants jointly, the whole suit or appeal, as the case may be, will fail by reason of an abatement with respect to one of them.<sup>2</sup> But if such right or relief is divisible or exists individually in each, an abatement with respect to one or some alone will not cause the entire suit or appeal to fail.<sup>3</sup> will not cause the appeal to fail.<sup>4</sup> But if the nature of the appeal is such that it cannot be heard in the absence of any of the appellants, the provisions of Order 41, Rule 4 cannot be invoked and the whole appeal will fail.<sup>5</sup> One test of determining whether the failure to bring in the legal representative of a deceased appellant will cause the entire appeal to fail is : can the appeal be decided, without bringing the legal representatives of the deceased party on the record, without bringing into existence two decrees contrary to each other?<sup>6</sup>

Where an appeal has abated, the respondent cannot claim its being heard even though he might have filed a memorandum of cross-objections. He must file a separate appeal.<sup>7</sup>

As pointed in Note 18 supra, a judgment given in ignorance of an abatement is null and void.<sup>8</sup> The remedy of the legal representative in such cases is not to sue again on the same cause of action but to have the suit revived.<sup>9</sup>

24. Award of costs. — The provision for the award of costs contained in this rule should not be taken in a restricted sense. The power to award costs in proper cases exists in Courts and this power is not restricted by this rule.<sup>1</sup> The rule only extends or recognizes the power in cases of abatement under the rule.

The power can also be exercised by an Appellate Court.<sup>2</sup> See also Note 16 to Section 35 ante.

It was held that the order was liable to revision.<sup>1</sup>

A applied to be added as the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff. He was directed to file a separate suit to establish his claim as such. Such a suit was not filed. Note 26

26. Appeal. — An order on an application under this rule allowing<sup>1</sup> or refusing to allow<sup>2</sup> a person to be brought on the record as the legal representative of a deceased party is not appealable. The reason is that such an order does not adjudicate upon the rights of parties on any point or points in controversy in the suit and is therefore not a decree,<sup>3</sup> nor is such an order an appealable one under the provisions of Section 104 and O. 43 R. 1. Under the old Code, an order under this rule whether a person should be brought on record as a legal representative of the deceased party was sometimes held to be one under Section 367 of the old Code (corresponding to Rule 5 of this Order) and was therefore held to be appealable under Section 588, clause 18 of that Code.<sup>4</sup> Under the present Code there is no appeal from an order under Rule 5 and the said cases would, therefore, be no longer law. An order bringing on record the legal representative of a deceased appellant is not a "judgment" within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent.<sup>5</sup>

In Niranjana Nath v. Afzal Hussain,<sup>6</sup> a Full Bench of the Lahore High Court observed as follows: "When the order of the Court merely recognizes an abatement, which has already taken place on account of the death of a plaintiff not followed by an application within six months [the period of limitation now is ninety days under Article 176 of the Limitation Act] to implead his legal representative, and does not determine any matter in controversy between the parties, it cannot be regarded as a decree. If, on the other hand, the order of abatement is the result of an adjudication upon the rights of the parties with respect to a matter in controversy, and is not passed upon an application for the revival of the suit made under O. 22 R. 9 [an order under O. 22 R. 9 refusing to set aside the abatement of a suit is an appealable order under O. 43 R. 1 clause (k) and hence cannot be a decree: vide Section 2, clause 2], it amounts to a decree and is appealable as such." As an instance of the latter type of orders was mentioned the case in which the suit abates not automatically on the failure of the legal representative to apply for substitution of his name within the period of limitation but as the result of an adjudication by the Court that the right to sue did not survive after the death of the plaintiff. It was also pointed out that where the Court holds that the result of the abatement of a suit with regard to one of the plaintiffs owing to his legal representatives not having applied within the period of limitation to be brought on the record is to cause an abatement of the suit with regard to the other plaintiffs also, there would be an adjudication on the rights of the parties and the order would amount to a decree whether it is called a dismissal of the suit or an abatement.

An order directing an abatement is not appealable by a person who is not a party to the suit.<sup>7</sup> Nor is an order rejecting an application that the suit might be

1. Legislative changes. —

1. Under Section 368 of the old Code, the plaintiff had to make an application specifying the person whom he alleges to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant. It was, however, open to the person to object that he was not the legal representative. The real legal representative could also make the application to have himself impleaded. The present provision is more general in the matter of the application and lays down that "the Court shall, on an application made in that behalf, cause the legal representative of the deceased defendant to be made a party." See Note 16 infra.

2. The words "as against the deceased defendant" in sub-rule (3) are new.

2. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — This rule deals with the death of a defendant in a pending suit. It will be interesting to note the position of this rule in relation to Rule 2 on the one hand, and in relation to Rule 10 on the other. If a case falls within Rule 2, this rule is excluded;<sup>1</sup> and if a case falls within this rule, Rule 10 will be excluded.<sup>2</sup>

For the application of this rule the following conditions are necessary, viz. —

(1) There must be a suit (or an appeal). Thus, the rule has been held to be inapplicable to an investigation into an application for permission to sue in forma pauperis,<sup>3</sup> and to proceedings by contributories under Section 214 of the Companies Act, 1882.<sup>4</sup> But it has been held to apply to proceedings under Section 21A of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act.<sup>5</sup>

(2) The death of the defendant must be pending the suit. Thus, the rule will not apply if such death was either before the institution of the suit<sup>6</sup> or after decree in suit.<sup>7</sup> In the former case, if the deceased was the sole defendant, the suit will have to be dismissed as being against law.<sup>8</sup> If he was one of two or more defendants, his name will have to be removed from the record and the suit proceeded with against the other defendants, if need be, after an order under O. 1 R. 10.<sup>9</sup> The suit or appeal must be pending in a Court having jurisdiction to entertain it. Otherwise, there can be no question of abatement of the suit or appeal.<sup>10</sup>

(3) The right to sue should survive but not against the surviving defendants alone. Thus, if the right to sue does not survive at all the rule will not apply.<sup>11</sup> And if it survives against the surviving defendants alone, Rule 2, and not this rule, will apply.<sup>12</sup>

3. Rule applies to appeals. — This rule applies also to the case of the death of a respondent in a pending appeal.<sup>1</sup> The words "right to sue" in this rule should be taken to mean "right to appeal" in cases where a party dies after decree in the suit, but pending appeal.<sup>2</sup> But where the appeal has been filed in a Court not having jurisdiction to entertain it, there can be no abatement.<sup>3</sup>

Under the old Code it was held by the Allahabad High Court in a number of cases that the provisions of Section 368 were limited to the case of the death of a respondent, who was a defendant in the lower Court,<sup>4</sup> and held that a defendant-appellant need not apply under the Section for impleading the legal representatives of a deceased plaintiff-respondent.<sup>5</sup> It is now, however, well settled that the rule applies to the case of the death of a respondent whether he was a plaintiff or a defendant in the original suit.<sup>6</sup> The question whether the abatement is partial or total will, in the case of a suit, depend on the nature of the right claimed; but in an appeal it will have to be decided with reference to the nature of the decree appealed against.<sup>7</sup> As to this, see Notes 22 and 23, infra.

The provisions of sub-rule (4), framed by the High Court of Madras, are applicable to appeals also. Thus, where on the death of one of the respondents, the appellant fails to bring on record his legal representative, the Appellate Court has jurisdiction to exempt his being brought on record and the appellate decree has the same force and effect as if it had been passed before he died.<sup>8</sup>

4. Rule does not apply to execution proceedings. — This rule does not apply to execution proceedings.<sup>1</sup> Rule 12 contains a specific declaration to this effect. For fuller discussion, see Notes to O. 22 R. 12.

4a. Suit against municipality. — A certain Municipality was superseded by the Government and a Special Officer was appointed. A suit was brought against the Municipality represented by the Special Officer and was decreed. The defendant appealed against the decree making the Special Officer as representing the Municipality respondent to the appeal. The administration of the Municipality was then restored to the Commissioners. It was held by the Patna High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that it was not necessary to bring the Commissioners on the record as the legal representatives of the Special Officer, as the appeal was against the Municipality which was a Corporation and the Commissioners were not the representatives of the Special Officer. The decision proceeds on the ground that the Municipality continues to be a Corporation notwithstanding the appointment of a Special Officer. But this decision is inconsistent with the decision in the undermentioned case of the Lahore High Court.<sup>2</sup> In that case, a suit was filed against a Municipality and then the Municipality was superseded and an Administrator was appointed. It was held that a decree passed against the Municipality in such a suit without bringing on record the Administrator or other person as the legal representative of the Municipality was a nullity.

5. Where right to sue survives against persons other than the surviving defendant or defendants. — The rule does not apply if the right to sue survives against the surviving defendants alone. In other words, it is necessary that the right to sue should either survive to other persons alone or to other persons along with the surviving defendants. For some illustrative cases, see the cases cited below.<sup>1</sup> See also Notes to Rule 2 and Note 5 to Rule 3, ante.

6. "On an application made in that behalf." — Under the old Code it was for the plaintiff to bring the proper legal representatives of a deceased defendant on record and he was to choose the representative at his own risk.<sup>1</sup> Even the last paragraph in Section 368 was only subsequently added to the Section. Before that addition, it was held that the Court could not, except on the application of the plaintiff or the appellant, place on record the representative of a deceased sole defendant or respondent and that the representative of the deceased defendant or respondent could not apply under that Section.<sup>2</sup> Under the present rule it is open to any person interested to apply for the addition of the proper representative.<sup>3</sup> But even under the present rule, in the absence of a proper application by anybody else, the duty of applying for bringing in the proper legal representatives on record ultimately rests on the plaintiff<sup>4</sup> as the consequence of not applying in time will be the abatement of the suit. Such an application is not obviated by the mere fact that a legal representative has been impleaded in another independent proceeding.<sup>5</sup>

Even under the old Code where the Court was to simply enter the name of the person nominated by the plaintiff, it was held that it had, in some cases, power to add other persons jointly with those nominated by the plaintiff.<sup>6</sup> Under the present Code the Court has power to determine who is the legal representative.

7. Limitation to implead legal representative. — Under the Limitation Act of 1877 there was a sharp conflict of opinion on the question as to the period within which an application to implead the legal representatives of a deceased respondent in an appeal had to be filed.<sup>1</sup> Under the present Code such applications, whether in a suit or in an appeal, to implead legal representatives are governed by Article 177 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908).<sup>3</sup>

Has the Court power to excuse delay and accept an application made after the period of limitation? It has been held that Section 5 of the Limitation Act does not apply to an application under this rule.<sup>3</sup> But an abatement can be set aside for sufficient cause under Rule 9, infra, so that in such cases the strict procedure would be to declare the suit or appeal to have abated and to allow the plaintiff or appellant, as the case may be, to apply under Rule 9.<sup>4</sup> As to what is sufficient cause, See Rule 9.

8. "Shall cause the legal representative of the deceased defendant to be made a party." — On the death of a defendant in a suit the Court should bring the legal representative on the record before proceeding further with it. The suit may be described to be in a state of suspension till then, and no orders excepting formal, or processual can be passed.<sup>1</sup> If the suit is disposed of without impleading the legal representatives of a deceased party, retrial will be ordered.<sup>2</sup>

Where the Court makes an order for the substitution of the names of the heirs of a deceased defendant or respondent, it is no part of the duty of the plaintiff or appellant to see that the record of the Court is corrected in terms of the order. This is a ministerial function which the Court's establishment is charged to perform.<sup>3</sup>

If it is necessary in any case that some person who is not an heir ex concessis of a deceased defendant should be substituted instead, it is not enough that the name of the person is substituted or added in the cause title. But it is necessary that the plaint should also be amended making the necessary allegations on which the liability of the added person is based.<sup>4</sup> leaving two or more legal representatives, the question arises whether all of them should be impleaded and what is the effect of a failure to do so. On this question the Allahabad,<sup>1</sup> Bombay,<sup>2</sup> Madras,<sup>3</sup> Patna,<sup>4</sup> Lahore<sup>5</sup> and Peshawar<sup>6</sup> Courts have held that even if one of them alone is impleaded, he sufficiently represents the estate and the suit does not abate. Further, according to the Lahore High Court,<sup>7</sup> a bona fide application to bring in all those representatives who can be ascertained by the exercise of due care and industry will save abatement. According to the Rangoon High Court<sup>8</sup> if the person impleaded as a matter of fact represented the estate and no objection as to the want of proper representation is taken at the time, there will be no abatement and the decree will bind the estate. According to the Nagpur view the plaintiff can get relief against the legal representative impleaded, though it will not bind the other representatives.<sup>9</sup> The Sind Court<sup>10</sup> has held that all the legal representatives should be brought on record in time; otherwise the suit will abate. But even in that Court an objection that all the representatives have not been brought on record should be taken at the proper time; otherwise the defendants will be estopped from taking it at any subsequent stage.<sup>11</sup> In any event, if some of the legal representatives are specifically dispensed with, the suit cannot proceed as against them; and if the suit cannot proceed in their absence, the whole suit will abate.<sup>12</sup>

It has been held by the Madras High Court<sup>13</sup> that where all the legal representatives are brought on the record but, subsequently, one of them dies and his legal representatives are not brought on the record, the proceedings are not vitiated.

10. Wrong person as legal representative. — An application to implead somebody other than the proper legal representative of a deceased defendant is not valid and a decree obtained against such person will ordinarily be not binding on the true representative or on the estate of the deceased defendant.<sup>1</sup> But such a decree will be binding in the following circumstances, viz. —

- (ii) where the decree obtained is free from fraud or collusion ;
- (iii) where the person wrongly impleaded was so impleaded in a representative capacity and the decree was passed against him as representing the estate of the deceased ;
- (iv) where the plaintiff was not aware of any fact which displaced the apparent title of the person ; and
- (v) where the real legal representative had not intervened during the pendency of the suit.<sup>2</sup>

Thus, a decree obtained after impleading a person having a prima facie claim to be considered the legal representative of a deceased defendant<sup>3</sup> or after impleading a person who, but for some other facts of which the plaintiff is not aware, would be such legal representative,<sup>4</sup> will be binding on the estate. In such cases, however, conditions (iv) and (v) must be satisfied, that is, the true representatives must not have intervened or applied to be made parties pending the suit<sup>5</sup> and the plaintiff must not, during such pendency, have been otherwise made aware that the person whom he has impleaded is not the true legal representative. Where the plaintiff was in a position to know who the real heirs were on making inquiries which he failed to make, it has been held that his application to substitute a wrong person as the heir of the deceased cannot save the suit from abatement.<sup>6</sup> Where a wrong person has been impleaded as the legal representative the Court can, on being apprised of the fact of the existence of the legal representative, strike out the former's name and substitute the latter's name on the record.<sup>7</sup> defendant are already on the record in the suit, though in another capacity, no application is necessary under this rule to implead them as legal representatives, and the suit will not abate by reason of the absence of such an application.<sup>1</sup> It is enough if the plaintiff, at some time or other during the hearing of the suit, states the fact and gets it noted on the record.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, only some of the legal representatives are on the record but not all, it has been held by the Patna and Lahore High Courts that an application is necessary under this rule and that in its absence the suit will abate.<sup>3</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> it was held by the Bombay High Court that even where the only heir of a deceased defendant is already on the record in another capacity, an application under this rule is necessary. According to the High Court of Madras, where the legal representative already on the record sufficiently represents the estate, the suit will not abate by reason of the absence of an application under this rule and the decree passed in the suit will bind the estate.<sup>5</sup>

See also Note 14 to Rule 3.

13. Succession Act and legal representative. — Where the deceased is governed by the Succession Act, his legal representatives are his executors or administrators and not his heirs.<sup>1</sup> Even though no representation is taken out for his estate, the plaintiff cannot, on that ground, add his heirs as legal representatives.<sup>2</sup> The only course open to the plaintiff will be to move the Court to have an administrator appointed.<sup>3</sup> On the death of an executor, the estate of the testator devolves on the residuary legatee and hence a suit or appeal filed against the executor will abate if upon his death, an application for bringing on record the residuary legatee is not made within the period of limitation.<sup>4</sup> See also Note 10 to Rule 3.

14. Pro forma defendant or respondent. — Where the deceased defendant or respondent had no interest in the litigation, the rule does not apply and the failure to bring his legal representatives on the record within time will not cause the suit or appeal to abate.<sup>1</sup> Thus, there will be no abatement for failure to bring in the legal of joint family, if father is not the manager, his impleadment is not sufficient.)

17. "The suit shall abate as against the deceased defendant." — If a sole defendant dies and no application is made within the period of limitation, for bringing on record his legal representatives, the suit abates.<sup>1</sup> But if one of several defendants or respondents dies and no application is made within the period of limitation for bringing on record his legal representatives, the suit or appeal will, in the first instance, abate not in its entirety but only so far as the deceased defendant or respondent is concerned.<sup>2</sup> But such abatement may under certain circumstances result in the whole suit or appeal failing.<sup>3</sup> On this subject, see Note 22 below. 19. Decree against a dead person. — See also Note 8 to Section 52. A decree passed against a dead person without impleading his legal representatives is a nullity.<sup>1</sup> This does not mean that a party who was heard and against whom a decree has been passed on the merits can take advantage of the death of another party and claim a re-hearing on the merits.<sup>2</sup> In an Allahabad case<sup>3</sup> the plaintiff obtained an ex parte decree against a defendant who had been dead before the decree, but of whose death plaintiff had no knowledge. It was held that on the decree being held inexecutable the plaintiff might apply to have the case re-opened after impleading the legal representatives.

Where a suit is filed against several defendants one of whom is dead, it cannot be said in such a case that there is no valid plaint and the Court has power, under O. 1 R. 10 ante, to implead, if necessary, the legal representatives of the deceased person.<sup>4</sup> Where some of several defendants had been dead when the decree was passed, the others may object to the execution on the ground that the decree is a nullity.<sup>5</sup>

A decree passed by the Privy Council is an order of the Sovereign, and even if passed against a deceased respondent without impleading his legal representatives, it is not a nullity.<sup>6</sup>

21. Order 1 Rule 8 and abatement. — See Note 24 to Order 1 Rule 8.

22. Where suit or appeal abates against deceased defendant or respondent only. — As under Rule 3, an abatement under this rule will in the first instance be only so far as the deceased defendant or respondent is concerned.<sup>1</sup> If the deceased was the sole defendant or respondent the abatement puts an end to the suit or appeal. But if he is one of many defendants or respondents the effect of the partial abatement on the whole suit or appeal will depend upon the nature of the suit or appeal. If, on account of the partial abatement, it becomes, for any reason, impossible to proceed with the suit or appeal to its final conclusion the entire suit or appeal will fail.<sup>2</sup> But if the suit or appeal can proceed to a final adjudication in the absence of the legal representatives of the deceased defendant or respondent, the partial abatement will not affect the rest of the suit or appeal.<sup>3</sup> Such a final adjudication is possible in cases where the interest of the deceased defendant or respondent can be separated from those of the others. In such cases a decree can be given against the latter without affecting the rights of the legal representatives of the former.<sup>4</sup> The abatement, therefore, will not result in a total failure of the suit or appeal. Thus, in the following cases,

O. 22 R. 4 abatement as regards the deceased was held not to affect the rest of the suit or
Notes 22-23 appeal —

(1) Where the suit is for the recovery of a specific sum of money from the deceased defendant and for a specific sum from each of the other defendants.<sup>5</sup>

(2) Where the suit relates to distinct plots of land in the hands of the several defendants including the deceased defendant,<sup>6</sup> or where it relates to specified shares<sup>7</sup> or to shares which are ascertained or ascertainable.<sup>8</sup>

(3) Where the liability sought to be enforced against the defendants is joint and several.<sup>9</sup> Thus, the liability of co-promisors is joint and several<sup>10</sup> as also the liability of a surety.<sup>11</sup> In the case of suits to enforce such liability the suit does not abate in toto on the death of one of the promisors or the surety as the case may be. The liability of joint wrongdoers or tort-feasors is joint and several and the suit or appeal will abate only so far as the deceased defendant is concerned.<sup>12</sup> On the same principle, a suit for ejectment of trespassers will abate only so far as the deceased defendant is concerned and may be proceeded with against the rest.<sup>13</sup> The same principle applies to suits for rent against fixed-rate tenants<sup>14</sup> or joint holders of a holding,<sup>15</sup> as their liability is likewise joint and several.

In short, therefore, the test to see whether the suit or appeal abates as a whole or only in part is to find out if the suit could, in the first instance, have been instituted and prosecuted with the deceased defendant left out.<sup>16</sup> In other words, if separate suits are maintainable against the defendants severally, then the abatement will be only in part in spite of the other defendants having been impleaded in the same suit.<sup>17</sup>

On the above principles the non-impleading of the legal representatives of a deceased defendant will result in total failure of the suit or appeal in the following cases:

(1) Where the interests of the defendants in the suit are joint and indivisible so that the interest of the deceased defendant cannot be separated from those of the rest,<sup>5</sup> such as the interests in a pre-emption suit<sup>6</sup> but not the rights arising from a sale in distinct shares.<sup>7</sup>

(2) Where a decree appealed from is joint and indivisible.<sup>8</sup> But a decree cannot be said to be joint and indivisible merely because it is on one sheet of paper.<sup>9</sup> The interest awarded in the decree must in substance be joint and indivisible.<sup>10</sup>

In this connexion the following distinction between a suit and an appeal should be noted. In a suit the nature of the abatement will depend upon the relief involved.<sup>11</sup> If the plaintiff sets up a joint and indivisible right and the defendants set up a separate or separable right, the point should be decided before deciding the nature of the abatement.<sup>13</sup> In an appeal, however, the nature of the abatement will have to be decided not upon the nature of the relief involved in the suit but upon the nature of the relief awarded by the decree appealed against.<sup>13</sup> Thus, if the decree awarded joint possession the abatement will affect the whole appeal even though the plaintiff had asked for separate possession in the plaint.<sup>14</sup> Even in cases where the plaintiff could have asked for a joint and several relief, if he chooses to ask for a joint relief and on dismissal of the suit he files an appeal, the appeal will abate in toto on the death of one of the defendants-respondents, if his legal representatives are not brought on the record in time.<sup>15</sup>

24. Inherent power to add legal representative after abatement. — Even after a suit or appeal has abated, the Court has inherent power to add the legal representatives of the deceased defendant or appellant in proper cases.<sup>1</sup> The proper procedure in such cases would be to just declare that the suit had abated, then to set the abatement aside for valid reasons and then add the legal representatives and proceed with the suit or appeal.<sup>2</sup> It should, however, be noted that such a course will not be adopted unless very strong grounds are made therefor.<sup>3</sup>

25. Appellate Court and abatement. — The Court to appoint the legal representative of a deceased defendant or respondent will be the Court in which the suit or appeal was pending when the death took place.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, the Court to declare an abatement will be the Court in which the suit or appeal was pending when the abatement took place.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, such Court proceeds to a decision on the merits in spite of an abatement that has taken place, the Appellate or second Appellate Court, as the case may be, may set aside the decision and either declare the abatement<sup>3</sup> or remand the matter for disposal according to law.<sup>4</sup>

26. Award of costs. — If a suit abates on the ground that the legal representatives of a deceased defendant are not impleaded within time, there is no

27. Re-hearing of suit or appeal. — Where a decree is passed against a deceased respondent without impleading his legal representatives, it is competent for the Court to entertain an application for impleading the legal representatives and to re-open and re-hear the suit or appeal.<sup>1</sup>

28. Revision. — No revision lies from an order that a deceased plaintiff's legal representatives are not necessary parties to an application to set aside an ex parte decree.<sup>1</sup>

29. Appeal. — Under the old Code an order of abatement was appealable, not as a decree but as an order under Section 588 (18).<sup>1</sup> Under the present Code, where the facts fall within the four corners of the rule, an order of abatement thereunder is not open to appeal. The only remedy is that provided by Rule 9. But when the suit is dismissed as having abated and the propriety of the dismissal on that ground is questioned, an appeal will lie as if from a decree.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where on abatement of a suit so far as the deceased is concerned, the Court dismissed the whole suit an appeal would lie.<sup>3</sup> No appeal lies from an order bringing in certain persons as legal representatives of a deceased defendant.<sup>4</sup> Such an order is also not a 'judgment' within the meaning of the Letters Patent (Clause 10 of the Letters Patent of the Allahabad High Court) and no appeal lies from it under the Letters Patent.<sup>5</sup>

Determination obligatory. See Notes 1, 4 and 6.

Wrong order — Remedies against. See Notes 6, 8 and 9.

1. Legislative changes. —

1. Under Section 367 of the old Code the Court had the option of either determining who is the legal representative of a deceased party or of staying the suit until the question has been determined in a separate suit.<sup>1</sup> Under the present rule the Court shall determine the question and has no option in the matter.

2. The words "at or before the hearing" which occurred in the old Section have been omitted.

3. The provisions of the old Section, in terms, applied only to the case of the death of a plaintiff.<sup>2</sup> But the present rule will apply to the case of the death of a plaintiff as well as to the case of the death of a defendant.

2. Scope of the Rule. — As has been observed in Note 1 above, where a dispute as to who is the legal representative arises, it is the duty of the Court under this rule to decide it.<sup>1</sup> The decision, however, should be limited for the purpose of carrying on the suit and cannot have the effect of conferring any right to heirship or to property.<sup>2</sup>

The rule applies to appeals<sup>3</sup> but not to execution proceedings.<sup>4</sup> Nor does it apply to a case where a party dies after the preliminary decree but before the final decree in the suit.<sup>5</sup> See also Note 19 to Rule 3 ante.

3. Legal representative. — See Note 10 to Rule 3.

4. "Shall be determined." — See Notes 1 and 2 above. For the purpose of determining as to who is the legal representative, the Court must, when necessary, hold an enquiry in which evidence may be adduced<sup>1</sup> and must come to a conclusion as to who is the legal representative according to the rights of the parties.<sup>2</sup> It cannot simply make all the claimants parties without making any such enquiry.<sup>3</sup> A lengthy or elaborate enquiry is, however, unnecessary for the purpose<sup>4</sup> and where there is no dispute as to his being the legal representative, the mere fact that no steps were taken to have him declared as such, does not vitiate the decision in the case.<sup>5</sup>

5. "By the Court." — The "Court" here means the Court before which the question as to who is the legal representative arises. It will be the trial Court, when the question arises in the suit; or the Appellate Court, if the question arises in appeal. An Appellate Court cannot delegate its powers to the trial Court. All that it can do is to direct the trial Court to take evidence on the question and remit the same. The decision must be by the Appellate Court.<sup>1</sup> This principle has, in Madras, been embodied in a rule framed by the High Court as a proviso to this rule.

6. Objection as to the representative character. — The procedure laid down in this rule should be followed not only when two or more persons claim in opposition to each other but also when the representative character of a person who alone claims is denied by the other side.<sup>1</sup>

The objection should, however, be taken at the earliest possible moment.<sup>2</sup> But when the legal representative is appointed without notice to the other side, the latter can at the hearing raise objection to the representative character of the person so appointed.<sup>3</sup>

7. Effect of order under this Rule. — An order under this rule will enable the person to represent the estate in the suit and will make an adjudication therein binding on the estate.<sup>1</sup> To this extent and in this sense it is final.<sup>2</sup> The mere admission of a person as legal representative for the purpose of further prosecution of the suit will not, however, conclusively establish his right to do so if his legal position is one of the main or vital issues in the suit itself.<sup>3</sup> Further, as has been seen in Note 2 above, an order appointing a person as a legal representative for the suit will not have the effect of deciding that he is the heir of the deceased party.<sup>4</sup>

8. Power of Court to correct its own order. — As already pointed out in Note 6 above, where a person has been appointed legal representative without notice to the other side, the latter can afterwards object to the representative character of that person and the Court can after enquiry correct the order already passed.

9. Suit to establish title as legal representative. — As to whether a decision under this rule can be re-adjudicated upon in a separate suit, see Note 13 to Section 11 ante, and the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

10. Appeal. — See also Note 26 to Rule 3 ante. An order under Section 367 of the old Code (corresponding to this rule) was appealable as an order, under Section 588, clause (18) of that Code.<sup>1</sup> Under the present Code no appeal lies from such an order either as a decree or as an appealable order.<sup>2</sup> Nor is such an order a 'judgment' within the meaning of the Letters Patent (Clause 10 of the Letters Patent of the Allahabad High Court).<sup>3</sup>

But as to whether an objection to an order under this rule can, under Section 105 of the Code, be a valid ground of attack in an appeal from the decree, see Note 6 to Section 105.

11. Revision. — A decision under this rule amounts to the decision of a "case" within the meaning of Section 115 and is open to revision.<sup>1</sup> Thus, if a Court simply adds a legal representative without holding an enquiry into the dispute and deciding it, it acts with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction and a revision will lie.<sup>2</sup>

1. Scope and applicability of the Rule.
2. No abatement by reason of death after hearing.

1. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — This rule is new and embodies an exception to the principle that the Court has no jurisdiction to pass a decree for or against a dead man.<sup>1</sup> It is based on the principle that a judgment pronounced at any time after the conclusion of the hearing shall be construed to be operative as if it had been delivered on the day on which the hearing was closed.<sup>2</sup>

Even under the old Code it had been generally held that the death of a party after the hearing but before pronouncement of the judgment will not make the judgment invalid.<sup>3</sup> The Chief Court of the Punjab, however, took a different view.<sup>4</sup> This rule gives effect to the former class of decisions.

For the application of the rule, it is immaterial whether the death is or is not brought to the notice of the Court.<sup>5</sup>

Where, however, the legal representative brought on the record is under a legal disability and no guardian or next friend is appointed to act for him, the decree is a nullity as against him and the rule cannot be invoked to validate the same.<sup>6</sup>

The principle of the rule will apply to proceedings in arbitration.<sup>7</sup>

Where an ex parte decree was passed against two plaintiffs and an order was made for the setting aside of the decree on condition that the defendant deposited a certain sum of money in Court within a stated time, it was held that the fact that one of the plaintiffs died in the interval between the conditional order and the final order setting aside the ex parte decree on the required amount being deposited within the time allowed, did not affect the validity of the latter order and that the principle of this rule applied.<sup>8</sup>

2. No abatement by reason of death after hearing. — The principle of the rule will not apply unless the "hearing" had been concluded before the death.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the rule will not apply where the party died on the day fixed for the hearing but before the hearing.<sup>2</sup>

The "hearing" contemplated by the rule is such a hearing as is provided for by Order 18 and includes arguments; and where anything remains to be done or furnished by either party as a basis of consideration which is to end in the judgment and decree capable of execution, "the hearing" cannot be said to have been concluded under the rule.<sup>3</sup> Thus, the rule will not apply if the party died before the completion of arguments.<sup>4</sup> It has been held that where during the interval between the last hearing of a suit and the date on which the judgment is pronounced, the Court makes a local inspection of the site in suit and makes a reference to it in the judgment, the hearing of the suit cannot be said to have "concluded" on that day of hearing.<sup>5</sup>

Where a defendant dies after the conclusion of the hearing and before delivery of judgment in the suit, and the plaintiff appeals against the decree, there can be no abatement of the appeal and the plaintiff can make the legal representative of the defendant a party to the appeal. It is not necessary that he should make an application for bringing on record the legal representative of the defendant.<sup>6</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — A died pending suit and his wife was brought on the record as his legal representative. The suit was decreed against her. Pending appeal, she married again. The lower Court's decree was confirmed in appeal and the decree was sought to be executed against the second husband. It was held that this was not a case where the husband was liable for the debts of the wife and that the decree could not be executed against the second husband.<sup>1</sup> provisions of Rule 10, infra. There must have been an actual insolvency in which an assignee or receiver is appointed; the rule has no application to a case where there has been merely an application for a declaration of insolvency and a vesting order is made.<sup>3</sup>

Notes 2-4

On the insolvency of the plaintiff the only person entitled to continue the suit is the Official Receiver or Official Assignee. The insolvent has no right to do so.<sup>4</sup> Nor can any person claiming to have derived title under him continue the suit, especially if he had not taken any steps to assert his interests till then.<sup>5</sup>

It is only the individual right of the insolvent in the suit that is affected by his insolvency. Thus, the adjudication of the guardian of a minor party does not debar him from continuing to act as guardian.<sup>6</sup>

On the insolvency of the plaintiff the Court should not straightway dismiss the suit but should give notice to the Official Receiver or the Official Assignee, as the case may be, in whom the property of the insolvent vests, to appear and state whether he wishes to continue the suit.<sup>7</sup> If he expresses his wish to do so, it will be necessary to make an order directing him to give security for costs within a specified time.<sup>8</sup> But the order to give security can only be made after notice to the receiver and after he expresses his willingness to continue the suit. Thus, where on the plaintiff's adjudication the Court straightway passed an order that the Official Assignee should give security for costs within a time and should be made a party within a further time and that in default the suit should be set down for dismissal, it was held that such an order was irregular.<sup>9</sup> A time should be fixed within which to give security.<sup>10</sup>

Where the receiver declines to continue the suit or appeal, or to give security, the suit or appeal will abate, even without an application for dismissal by the other side.<sup>11</sup>

This rule does not apply to suits or proceedings under the Agra Tenancy Act, III of 1926: see Schedule II, list 1.

3. Applicability of the Rule to appeals. — The provisions of the rule apply to appeals.<sup>1</sup>

4. Applicability of the Rule to execution proceedings. — The rule does not apply to execution proceedings. A judgment-debtor cannot object to execution being taken against him on the ground of the decree-holder's insolvency. But the receiver or the Insolvency Court can step in and get the fruits of the execution handed over to him.<sup>1</sup>

An insolvent is entitled to make an application for execution of a decree obtained by him before an order for his adjudication was passed.<sup>2</sup>

See also Notes to Rule 12 infra.

5. "Insolvency" must be existing. — The rule does not, as has been seen in Note 2 above, apply unless an adjudication has actually taken place.<sup>1</sup> Where a suit is instituted or continued by the receiver and pending that suit the adjudication is annulled, the receiver can nevertheless continue the suit unless the property is diverted from him and re-vested in the quondam insolvent.<sup>2</sup>

6. Plaintiff's insolvency. — See Note 2 above.

7. Defendant's insolvency. — See Note 2 above.

8. Insolvency of pauper applicant. — The rule does not apply to the adjudication of a petitioner pending his application for permission to sue in forma pauperis. Such an application cannot be dismissed on the ground of the adjudication.<sup>1</sup> If the petitioner is adjudicated after he obtains leave to sue in forma pauperis, the receiver can come in and continue the suit in the same way as the insolvent could have done.<sup>2</sup>

9. Suit instituted after adjudication. — After adjudication the insolvent has no right over property which has vested in the receiver. In respect of such property, therefore, he has no right to institute a suit and a suit so instituted cannot be continued by the receiver under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Suppose the plaintiff was adjudicated pending a suit, has he got the right to appeal against a decree in the suit? According to the Bombay High Court, he can appeal.<sup>2</sup> The High Court of Madras<sup>3</sup> has, on the other hand, held that he cannot appeal.

9a. "Which the assignee or receiver might maintain for the benefit of his creditors." — In the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> where the trial Court had passed against an insolvent a decree for maintenance, and the insolvent appealed from the decree, it was doubted whether the appeal was one "which the assignee or receiver might maintain for the benefit of the creditors" of the insolvent although the appeal, if successful, might incidentally benefit them.

10. Limitation. — There is no limitation for the receiver to appear and apply on the adjudication of the plaintiff for being allowed to continue the suit.<sup>1</sup>

11. Costs payable by plaintiff prior to insolvency. — If a receiver elects to continue the suit he must give security only for the costs already incurred up to the time of his electing to continue the suit and not for subsequent cost as to which he will be personally liable.<sup>1</sup> The order for furnishing the security must be passed at the time

1. Legislative changes. —

This rule embodies the provisions of Sections 371 and 372A of the old Code — sub-rules (1) and (2) correspond to Section 371 and sub-rule (3) corresponds to Section 372A.

The following changes between the present rule and the above Sections of the old Code may be noted —

1. The words "The plaintiff or person claiming to be the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff or the assignee or receiver in the case of an insolvent plaintiff" have been substituted for the words "but the person claiming to be the legal representative of the deceased or bankrupt or insolvent-plaintiff."

2. The words "applicable to appeals" which occurred in Section 372A have been omitted.

2. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — The rule is a disabling one and should therefore be strictly construed.<sup>1</sup> Its application is limited to abatement or dismissal under one or other of the rules of this Order and does not extend to abatement on account of some other cause.<sup>2</sup> Thus, an application under sub-rule (2) cannot be made when the abatement is by reason of the fact that the right to sue does not survive.<sup>3</sup>

This rule does not apply to proceedings before the High Court on reference under Section 66 (2) of the Income-Tax Act.<sup>4</sup>

3. No fresh suit shall be brought on the same cause of action. — An abatement under Rule 3 or Rule 4 bars a fresh suit on the same cause of action.<sup>1</sup> If the fresh suit is, however, on a different cause of action<sup>2</sup> or if the plaintiff in the latter suit does not claim under a devolution of interest from the plaintiff in the former suit,<sup>3</sup> the suit is not barred by this rule. Where the legal representatives of a deceased plaintiff applied to be brought on record, but on the objection of the defendant the Court disallowed the application and dismissed the suit and the legal representatives thereupon filed a fresh suit on the same cause of action, it was held that it was not

- ('18) AIR 1916 Bom 278 (279): 40 Bom 248. (A, a member of a joint Hindu family, sues B for redemption of a mortgage of ancestral property, but not in a representative capacity—A dies—A's heirs are not brought on the record and the suit open to the defendants to object to the suit on the ground that it was barred under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

O. 22 R. 9
Notes 3-6

The dismissal of a suit for failure to deposit the costs of service of summons on the proposed legal representatives will not bar a fresh suit.<sup>5</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Bombay<sup>6</sup> that the bar under this rule has not got the same effect as res judicata and that it does not extinguish the right. The High Court of Madras<sup>7</sup> has held, distinguishing the Bombay decision, that an order of abatement operates as a judgment in favour of the defendant and that if it is not vacated by an application under this rule, it is conclusive of the defendant's rights to the property. The High Court of Lahore<sup>8</sup> also takes the same view as that of the Madras High Court.

4. Setting aside abatement. — The Court can set aside the abatement of a suit if it is moved by an application under sub-rule (2).<sup>1</sup> The remedy provided for in sub-rule (2) applies where the suit has abated under Rule 3 or Rule 4<sup>2</sup> or where it has been dismissed under Rule 8.<sup>3</sup>

An order setting aside an abatement should be passed only after notice to the other side. If it is passed without notice, the other side can raise their objections to the order at the hearing of the suit or appeal.<sup>4</sup>

5. Who may apply under this Rule. — If the abatement was under Rule 3, the application under this rule may be made by the legal representatives of the plaintiff. But a legal representative cannot apply under this rule if he had already applied to be brought on record within time and his application had been dismissed.<sup>1</sup> If the abatement is under Rule 4, the plaintiff may make the application. If the suit has been dismissed under Rule 8, the receiver or assignee in insolvency may apply.

Where there are more plaintiffs or appellants than one, each one of them can make the application.<sup>2</sup>

The reversioners or any one of them can apply to set aside an abatement caused by the death of the widow-plaintiff.<sup>3</sup>

The legal representative of a respondent wishing to bring himself on the record need not apply to set aside the abatement of the appeal.<sup>4</sup>

6. Minor and abatement. — Where an application made on behalf of A, a minor, to be brought on the record in the place of B, the deceased plaintiff, is abated—Subsequently A's son and grandsons institute another suit for redemption of the same mortgage—The second suit is not barred.)

dismissed and A thereafter makes a second application, it can, in proper cases, be treated as an application under this rule for setting aside the abatement.<sup>1</sup>

7. Limitation. — Under Article 171 of the Limitation Act, 1908, an application to set aside abatement should be filed within sixty days from the date of the abatement.<sup>1</sup> If the petitioner was prevented by any sufficient cause from making the application within the said period the delay in filing the application may be excused under Section 5 of the Limitation Act.<sup>2</sup> If no application is made within sixty days or within the extended time under Section 5 of the Limitation Act, the abatement becomes final and conclusive.<sup>3</sup>

8. "Sufficient cause." — An applicant for setting aside an abatement must show that he had sufficient cause for not taking timely steps to continue the suit.<sup>1</sup> As a matter of practice such cause must be alleged in the petition. It is, however, not legally necessary to do so; all that is necessary is that he should satisfy the Court that there was sufficient cause.<sup>2</sup> The question as to what is sufficient cause depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case.<sup>3</sup> The test to be adopted in determining it is to see whether the mistake or carelessness was real and unintentional and no damage has been done to the other side that cannot be repaired by costs or otherwise, or whether the negligence was culpable or the applicant had acted mala fide or irreparable injury would result to the other side by the granting of the application; in the former case the application must be granted;<sup>4</sup> in the latter case, it must be dismissed.<sup>5</sup>

In the following instances the abatement was set aside under this rule on the ground of sufficient cause —

O. 22 R. 9
Note 8

(1) Where, by virtue of an order of the Court, the petitioner bona fide believed that no separate application was necessary to implead the legal representatives.<sup>6</sup>

(2) Where the legal representatives of a deceased appellant bona fide believed that the co-appellants were prosecuting the appeal and challenging the entire decree.<sup>7</sup>

(3) Where the petitioner was a Government servant and had sent the necessary papers to the vakil but the papers were received by the latter on the last day of limitation after the rising of the Court.<sup>8</sup>

For other instances, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>9</sup>

Can ignorance of law be pleaded as a sufficient cause for the purposes of this rule? On this question it has been held that while mere ignorance of law without anything more, will not constitute "sufficient cause" for the purposes of this rule,<sup>10</sup> it cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule that it can never be a sufficient cause for excusing the delay.<sup>11</sup> Thus, where the original period of limitation prescribed had been shortened by an amending Act and, in ignorance thereof the application was made after the expiry of the shorter period, it was held that there was sufficient cause.<sup>12</sup>

On the question whether the fact that the applicant under this rule was ignorant of the death of the party whose legal representatives had to be brought on the record, would constitute a sufficient cause for setting aside an abatement, it has been held that if the ignorance is due to carelessness or want of diligence on the part of the petitioner it will not constitute a sufficient cause.<sup>13</sup> Where, on the other hand, it is not due to any want of reasonable diligence on his part or it is due to events beyond his control, it will constitute sufficient cause.<sup>14</sup> Thus, where the ignorance was due to the fact that the applicant was herself a pardanashin lady,<sup>15</sup> or that the deceased was a pardanashin lady,<sup>16</sup> or that the applicant lived far away from the place where the deceased lived,<sup>17</sup> the abatement was set aside. It was held in the undermentioned case<sup>18</sup> that ignorance on the part of the appellant of the death of the respondent is "sufficient cause" within the meaning of this rule and that the appellant is not required to inquire from day to day as to whether the respondent is dead or alive.

The negligence or forgetfulness of an agent specially appointed to look after the suit or appeal is not a sufficient cause to set aside an abatement.<sup>19</sup> But the collusion of the agent with the opposite side will be a sufficient ground for setting aside the abatement.<sup>20</sup> Where the applicant gave instructions in time to her vakil to bring on record the legal representatives, but owing to a mistake of the vakil in failing to notice the change effected in the period prescribed for such an application the application was not filed in time, it was held that the delay should be excused.<sup>21</sup>

The fact that succession to the estate of the deceased is in doubt or is in dispute will not be a sufficient cause for not filing an application in time.<sup>22</sup>

Where an application to add legal representatives is filed after the period of limitation has expired, the Court may either first set aside the abatement by getting an application filed for the purpose and then substitute the legal representatives,<sup>23</sup> or in exceptional cases, even treat the application as one to set aside the abatement and pass necessary orders thereon.<sup>24</sup> Where such an application is allowed without objection, the time will be deemed to have been extended and the legal representatives to have been properly brought on the record.<sup>25</sup> Where the lower Court has considered all the circumstances and has decided that there is no sufficient cause<sup>26</sup> or has extended the time for substitution,<sup>27</sup> the Appellate Court will not interfere with the decision.

Where an application has been made under this rule within time, a bona fide mistake therein can be corrected after the limitation period.<sup>28</sup>

9. Formal order of abatement, if necessary before setting aside abatement. — In cases under the old Code it was held that when a formal order of abatement had not been passed, the proper procedure on an application to revive the suit was to pass first an order of abatement and then an order setting aside the abatement.<sup>1</sup>

Under the present Code an abatement takes place automatically without any order and such abatement can be set aside on application under this rule even where no formal order declaring the abatement has been passed.<sup>2</sup> See Note 11.

10. Cause of action in the revived suit. — When a suit is revived under this rule it must be continued on the same cause of action; no new cause of action can be introduced into it.<sup>1</sup>

O. 22 R. 9 held that the decision could not, in an appeal from the final order, be objected to on that ground.

An application for substitution may, in substance, be treated as an application to set aside the abatement.<sup>6</sup> This, however, should not be done when the merits of the case are against the petitioner.<sup>7</sup>

12. Remand. — Where an Appellate Court finds that there was an abatement in the lower Court, it should not proceed to set aside the abatement but should remand the case for disposal under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

Where an Appellate Court finds that the lower Court's refusal to set aside abatement is wrong and remands the application for re-hearing, the remand is not a final order.<sup>2</sup>

13. Appeal. — No appeal lies from an order setting aside an abatement.<sup>1</sup> As to whether an order setting aside abatement affects the decision on the merits within the meaning of Section 105, see Note 6 to Section 105, ante. Under the Code of 1877 no appeal was allowed even from an order refusing to set aside an abatement. But under the Code of 1882 as well as the present Code an appeal is allowed from such an order.<sup>2</sup> But no such appeal will lie when there has been no application to the Court to set aside the abatement.<sup>3</sup> It has been held by the Calcutta High Court<sup>4</sup> that an order refusing to set aside an abatement of an appeal cannot be appealed against. But the contrary view has been held by the Patna High Court.<sup>5</sup> See also Note 14.

14. Letters Patent Appeal. — The Allahabad<sup>1</sup> and Calcutta<sup>2</sup> High Courts have held that an order of a single Judge declining to set aside or setting aside an abatement in an appeal is a "judgment" within the meaning of Clause 10 of the Letters Patent (Allahabad) and Clause 15 of the Letters Patent (Calcutta) and that therefore a Letters Patent appeal is competent from such an order. But the Bombay High Court<sup>3</sup> has held that an order setting aside an abatement under this rule is not a "judgment" within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent and that no appeal lies from such an order.

An order setting aside an abatement passed by a Division Bench of the High Court cannot, according to the Madras High Court, be set aside by another Bench of the High Court. The remedy is by way of review.<sup>4</sup>

devolution of the interest of a party in the subject-matter of the suit : that the person acquiring the interest may continue the suit with the leave of the Court : but that if he does not choose to do so the suit may be continued with the original party and the person acquiring the interest will be bound by, or can have the benefit of, the decree as the case may be.<sup>3</sup>

The rule applies to appeals in cases where the devolution takes place pending appeal.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, the rule also applies to second appeals.<sup>4</sup> It applies equally to cases of devolution of the interest of the plaintiff or of the defendant<sup>5</sup> and to the case of appellants as well as to that of respondents.<sup>6</sup>

In order that this rule may apply :

(1) There must be an assignment, creation or devolution of an interest in the subject-matter of the suit.<sup>7</sup>

(2) Such assignment, creation or devolution of interest must be by, or from, a party to the suit and not a stranger.<sup>8</sup> Thus, an assignee from the heir of a deceased plaintiff who was himself not brought on the record, cannot apply under this rule.<sup>9</sup>

(3) The person to whom the assignment, creation or devolution of interest takes place must be arrayed on the same side in the suit as the person from whom it has passed.<sup>10</sup>

The rule is a residuary one governing cases which are not provided for by the previous rules of the Order,<sup>11</sup> so that if any of these other rules apply to the facts of a particular case, the effect of that rule cannot be got rid of by a resort to this rule.<sup>12</sup> Where, however, there are two devolutions, vis., one by the death of a party (coming under Rules 3 and 4) and the other by a transfer of his interest (prior to his death), the transferee has the right to be impleaded under this rule and the death of the plaintiff cannot take away the right.<sup>13</sup>

3. Other cases of assignment, creation or devolution of interest pending suit. — As has already been seen in Note 2, this rule provides for all cases not falling within the scope of the previous rules of the Order, such as Rules 2, 3, 4, 7 and 8.<sup>1</sup> The words "other cases," etc. mean cases other than those specifically provided for in the preceding rules.<sup>2</sup> Those words were in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> held to indicate that the rule did not apply to a case of death. But such a restricted interpretation does not appear to be warranted by the rule. It would seem to apply even to cases of death if such cases do not fall within the provisions of Rules 3 or 4 ante.<sup>4</sup>

As illustrations of "other cases of assignment, creation or devolution of interest" falling within this rule may be mentioned cases of transfer inter vivos<sup>5</sup> or cases where a mortgagee party in a suit releases the property to the mortgagor.<sup>6</sup> Where a suit is instituted against a widow for recovery of debt due by her husband and, pending the suit she gives birth to a posthumous son, the son can be brought on the record under the principle of this rule.<sup>7</sup> Where a suit was instituted against the G. I. P. Railway and pending the suit the line was taken over by the Government, it was held that the Government should be made a party under this rule.<sup>8</sup> But there is no "assignment, creation or devolution of interest" by a company going into liquidation.<sup>9</sup>

In Manindra Chandra Nandy v. Ram Kumar<sup>10</sup> the defendant in a suit for possession granted a lease of the suit property to another during the pendency of the suit. The suit was decreed and it was sought to make the lessee a party to the proceedings for the ascertainment of mesne profits. The lessee had surrendered the lease and did not claim to remain in occupation of the land. The allegation against the lessee was that he had removed mica from the land and was liable for damages. It was held by the Privy Council in the above circumstances that the lessee could not be proceeded against in the same suit and be made a party to the proceedings for the ascertainment of mesne profits. The reason given was that there was no assignment, creation or devolution of interest within the meaning of this rule. Their Lordships observed as follows in the course of their judgment : "The order (Order 22) contemplates cases of devolution of interest from some original party to the suit, whether plaintiff or defendant, upon some one else. The more ordinary cases are death, marriage, insolvency, and then come the general provisions of Rule 10 for all other cases. But they are all cases of devolution. There is, it should be noted in this rule, a significant change of language from that used in the earlier Code, where it is stated in Section 372 as follows: 'In other cases of assignment, creation or devolution of any interest pending the suit, the suit may, with the leave of the Court, given either with the consent of all parties or after service of notice in writing upon them, and hearing their objections, if any, be continued by or against the person to whom such interest has come, either in addition to or in substitution for the person from whom it has passed, as the case may require.' The words 'in addition to' in the earlier Code have disappeared. But the matter does not rest upon this change. The liability, if any, of the appellant (the lessee) to pay damages for the removal of the mica is not a liability which has devolved to him from the defendant Raja. They were both liable, if liable at all, as trespassers and a case, if any, against the appellant (lessee) must rest upon his action and the direct relation established thereby between him and the plaintiffs."

So, it was held in Rameshwar v. Mt. Ganpati<sup>11</sup> that the "interest" referred to in Rule 10 is the interest of a person who was a party to the suit, and it is the transfer of the interest of such a person to the applicant that entitles him to continue the suit under this rule. Hence, it was held that where a suit had been brought by the next reversioner challenging an alienation by a Hindu widow and the plaintiff died pending the suit, the sister of the last male holder who had been brought into the line of heirs as a result of Act II of 1929 during the pendency of the suit could not claim to continue the suit under this rule because, it could not be said that the interest of the plaintiff had been transferred to her by the above Act.

The words "has come or devolved" connote an interest in presenti. A person who has a merely contingent interest cannot come in under this rule.<sup>12</sup>

See also Note 2 above.

4. Assignment of interest. — As pointed in Note 3 above, a transfer inter vivos, such as a sale,<sup>1</sup> or any other kind of transfer will come within the rule. It is also not necessary that such transfer should be direct.<sup>2</sup>

5. "Interest." — A right to maintain a suit,<sup>1</sup> the right to recover mesne profits given by a decree<sup>2</sup> and the rights and interests of a patnidar<sup>3</sup> are "interests" within the meaning of the rule. But the interest must be an interest in the subject-matter of the suit<sup>4</sup> or one which is vitally affected by the suit.<sup>5</sup> For instances where the rule was

A, the plaintiff in a suit, transferred his rights in the subject-matter of the suit by means of a sale deed in favour of B, whereupon B was added as a co-plaintiff to the suit. Then, B executed a deed in favour of C, his father, alleging that the sale deed by A was executed in his name only benami for his father and that even assuming that he had any rights under it, he relinquished them in favour of his father. It was held that the latter deed did not constitute any assignment, creation or devolution of any interest within the meaning of this rule.<sup>8</sup>

5a. Attachment of decree. — The mere attachment of a decree does not, except as provided for by sub-rule (2), amount to assignment, creation or devolution of any such interest as is mentioned in sub-rule (1) of this rule.<sup>1</sup>

Sub-rule (2) provides that the attachment of a decree pending an appeal therefrom shall be deemed to be an interest entitling the person who procured such attachment to the benefit of sub-rule (1). The benefit indicated in sub-rule (2) is the right to oppose or support the pending appeal.<sup>2</sup>

See also Note 8 below.

6. Trial Court can bring assignee on record pending an appeal. — Where the suit is pending, the mere fact that an appeal is filed from an interlocutory order made in the suit will not deprive the Court of first instance of its jurisdiction to implead parties under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

7. Transfer of decree.—This rule does not apply to the transfer of a decree.<sup>1</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>2</sup>

8. Creation of interest. — Under the old Code an attaching creditor of the decree pending appeal therefrom could not claim to be impleaded in the appeal.<sup>1</sup> But in view of the present sub-rule (2) he can. However, even under the present rule, a person who has attached property has been held not entitled to be impleaded, in a mortgage suit regarding the attached properties.<sup>2</sup>

It has been held that this rule will apply to a person acquiring the rights of a mortgagee on the principle of subrogation.<sup>4</sup>

9. Devolution of interest. — Where a suit is brought by or against a person in a representative character and a devolution of the representative interest takes place, the rule that is applicable is not Rule 3 or Rule 4 but Rule 10, whether such devolution is by virtue of the death of the person or for any other cause.<sup>1</sup> Thus, it will apply to a public trust which is represented at different stages of a suit by different representatives.<sup>2</sup> When a trustee dies or retires<sup>3</sup> or is removed from office<sup>4</sup> and another is appointed in his place, the estate "devolves" on the new trustee within the meaning of this rule. The fact that the original trustee was wrongly appointed as trustee will not make any difference.<sup>5</sup>

The following are illustrations of other cases of such devolution of interest —

1. One of four uralans of a Malabar devaswam sued for redemption of a kanom. The other uralans had been made party defendants. One of three latter died pending suit. It was held it was a case of devolution under this rule.<sup>6</sup>
2. The manager of an undivided Mitakshara family files a suit as manager of the family and dies pending suit. The succeeding manager can come in under this rule.<sup>7</sup>
3. The manager of an encumbered estate under the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876) files a suit on behalf of the estate. Pending the suit the estate is released and restored to the owner. The owner can come in under this rule.<sup>8</sup>
4. A receiver appointed in a suit files a suit on behalf of the estate. Pending suit he is discharged and another receiver is appointed in his place. The latter can come in under this rule.<sup>9</sup>
5. A suit was instituted claiming a right of pre-emption and for possession of property as against the vendor. Pending the suit the vendor's rights devolved on another person under another decree. The latter person can be impleaded as defendant under this rule.<sup>10</sup>
6. When the Court of Wards assumes the management of the estate of a party to a suit during the pendency of the suit, there is a devolution of interest within the meaning of this rule.<sup>11</sup>

In cases of devolution other than by death, it should be noted that if the person on whom the estate devolves does not bring himself on record, the decree passed in the suit will be binding on him.<sup>12</sup>

Where the cause of action is purely a personal one there can be no devolution of interest.<sup>13</sup> An adoption creates no devolution of interest within the meaning of this rule.<sup>14</sup>

O. 22 R. 10
Notes 9-13

10. Insolvency of defendant. — The rule applies also to the devolution of interest by operation of law. The insolvency of a defendant will cause a devolution of his estate on the Official Receiver or the Official Assignee as the case may be. But the question whether, on the adjudication of a defendant pending suit, the receiver in insolvency can come in under this rule will depend upon the "interest" involved in the suit.<sup>1</sup> If it is a suit in personam, such as for instance a mere money suit, no interest devolves on the receiver or assignee and he cannot come in under this rule.<sup>2</sup> But if it is a suit relating to the "estate," such as a suit to enforce a mortgage, the receiver or assignee is entitled to come in and should be impleaded.<sup>3</sup> If in such cases the receiver or assignee refuses to defend the suit, the insolvent cannot on that ground defend it.<sup>4</sup> If, however, the suit is of such a nature that it can go on without the insolvent defendant, the receiver need not be made a party.<sup>5</sup>

A person was adjudicated an insolvent during the pendency of a suit for maintenance against him. A decree was passed in the suit declaring the maintenance as a charge on the property of the defendant. It was held that as this rule was only permissive and did not impose any disability on a person already on the record, the insolvent could file an appeal against the decree.<sup>6</sup>

12. Annulment of order of adjudication.—Where, pending a suit instituted by the Official Assignee, the adjudication is annulled without any condition, the quondam insolvent is entitled to be substituted as plaintiff under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

13. "During the pendency of a suit." — The rule does not apply unless the assignment, creation or devolution of interest takes place during the pendency of the suit. Thus, it does not apply if the assignment, creation or devolution of interest takes place before the suit is instituted.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, the suit has been instituted, it is pending so long as the final decree has not been passed in it; the rule is thus applicable to cases of assignment, creation or devolution of interest, after the preliminary and before final decree.<sup>2</sup> In fact the Courts which hold that Rules 3 and 4 do not apply to cases of death after the preliminary decree, hold that this rule applies to such cases.<sup>3</sup> The assignment of the rights of the plaintiff after a final decree has been passed in a mortgage suit although before sale under the decree is not an assignment during the "pendency of the suit."<sup>4</sup>

This rule does not authorize the addition of a party to the suit after decree<sup>5</sup>: and the rule has been held not to apply to cases of assignment of interest between the date of the decree and the date of the filing of the appeal,<sup>6</sup> though the assignee can be joined in the appeal.<sup>7</sup> Similarly, where a decree has been amended, the question whether the rule is applicable to cases of assignment, etc., of interest during the period between the original and the amended decree has been left undecided.<sup>8</sup>

See also Note 14 below.

14. Application under this Rule, when to be made.—The rule provides for a continuation of the suit by the assignee or other person on whom the interest has devolved. Therefore, on the one hand, an application under the rule can be made at any time when the suit is pending;<sup>1</sup> on the other hand, it cannot be made after a final decree has been passed.<sup>2</sup>

The fact that the assignee made no application when the suit was pending will not, however, debar him from filing an appeal from the decree as a person claiming under the party within the meaning of Section 146.<sup>3</sup> An application under this rule may also be made to the Appellate Court during the pendency of an appeal from the decree.<sup>4</sup> Thus, the assignee of the interest of a party in the subject-matter of a suit during the pendency of the suit can come in at the stage of appeal or second appeal and apply to continue the same.<sup>5</sup> A different view has, however, been held by the Oudh Chief Court.<sup>6</sup>

15. Execution proceedings. — There is a conflict of views on the question whether the rule applies to execution proceedings. On the one hand, the facts that the rule relates to assignment before the final order in the suit, that it relates to assignments pending suit and that it provides for a continuation of the suit, have been relied on for holding that the rule does not apply to execution proceedings. On the other hand, the fact that Rule 12 makes no mention of this rule as one of those not applicable to execution has been relied upon for holding that by implication, this rule applies to execution proceedings also. The former view has been held by the Allahabad High Court,<sup>1</sup> and the latter view by the Calcutta High Court.<sup>2</sup> In Patna the applicability of the rule to execution proceedings has been doubted.<sup>3</sup> A Full Bench of the Madras High Court<sup>4</sup> held by a majority that the present rule was applicable to execution proceedings. But this decision has been explained away in a later case which has held the rule inapplicable to execution proceedings.<sup>5</sup>

15a. Sub-rule (2). — See Note 5a above.

16. Laches. — This rule vests in the Court a discretion in the matter of allowing the suit to be continued by or against the assignee; and the permission may be refused on sufficient grounds. Thus, delay or laches will be a ground for refusing permission under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

17. No new suit. — So long as no final decree has been passed, the assignee can carry on the suit, and cannot in disregard thereof, file a new suit for the same relief.<sup>1</sup> And where an assignee is added in a pending suit the suit merely continues as against him and does not become a new suit.<sup>2</sup>

18. "By leave of the Court." — An assignee under this rule is not entitled to continue the suit as a matter of right. The leave of Court must first be obtained. The granting of the leave is, however, discretionary with the Court.<sup>1</sup> The discretion should be exercised judicially.<sup>2</sup> Unnecessary delay on the part of the applicant will be a good ground for refusing leave under this rule.<sup>3</sup> The assignee has the option of either getting impleaded or keeping quiet if he considers his interests already protected.<sup>4</sup>

Notes 18-20

The leave should not be given without notice to the party concerned.<sup>5</sup> While the admission of assignment by such party is sufficient for giving the leave, it should not be refused merely because the assignment is challenged.<sup>6</sup> In such cases the Court should go into the question of the truth or validity of the assignment.<sup>7</sup> But where, in addition to the assignment being disputed, there has been long delay in making the application, leave may be refused.<sup>8</sup>

19. Effect of adding new parties under this Rule. — As already pointed out (in Note 17 above) the suit only continues against the assignee. He will be entitled to continue the further proceedings from that date but is bound by all orders passed up to that date.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, after the assignee is impleaded, the assignor, though on record, will be concluded by all legal and bona fide proceedings taken by or against the assignee.<sup>2</sup> Where a person is allowed to continue an appeal on an application by him under this rule and the appeal is dismissed with costs, he is liable for the full costs of the respondent in the appeal and not merely for the costs incurred from the date of his application under this rule.<sup>3</sup>

Generally speaking the assignee will not be allowed to set up a case inconsistent with the one set up by his assignor. But, in cases of institutions represented at different stages by different representatives, the Court has a discretion to allow amendments and new pleas in order to avoid multiplicity of suits.<sup>4</sup>

19a. Suit against municipality. — See Note 4a to Rule 4 ante.

20. Appeal. — Under the old Code there was a conflict of opinions regarding the appealability of an order granting or refusing permission under this rule.<sup>1</sup> This is no longer of any interest as the present O. 43 R. 1 (1) gives a right of appeal from an order granting, as well as from an order refusing, such leave.<sup>2</sup> In fact an appeal is the only remedy of a party aggrieved by such order.<sup>3</sup>

Where an order purports to be passed under this rule an appeal will lie, even though, on the facts, the order is improper.<sup>4</sup> But where the order is not one under this rule at all, no appeal will lie.<sup>5</sup> An application to add a party (as distinct from

1. Scope of the Rule.—The effect of this rule is to make the provisions of the previous rules applicable, as far as may be, to appeals.<sup>1</sup> See also Notes under the various rules. A decree passed without impleading the legal representatives of a party who has died pending appeal is a nullity.<sup>2</sup> Further, the result of not impleading in time the legal representative of a party who has died pending appeal will be to cause an abatement of the appeal so far as that party is concerned.<sup>3</sup> The fact that in another independent appeal from the same decree the legal representatives have been impleaded will not be enough.<sup>4</sup> But where the legal representative has, of his own accord, come on record, no further application by the appellant is necessary.<sup>5</sup> There will be no abatement when the deceased is only a pro forma respondent.<sup>6</sup> This rule, and consequently the provisions of the previous rules, do not apply when the devolution of interest takes place before the filing of the appeal, i.e., after the decree in the suit and before the appeal is filed.<sup>7</sup>

The rule has been held to be inapplicable to an application under Section 21A of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act.<sup>8</sup>

The rule has no application to appeals pending in Courts which have no jurisdiction to entertain them.<sup>9</sup>

O. 22 R. 11
Notes 1-6

After abatement of an appeal, the trial Court has no jurisdiction to go on with the proceedings taken in pursuance of an order of the Appellate Court which was intended to operate, only during the pendency of the appeal.<sup>10</sup>

2. Abatement of appeals in personal actions. — As a general rule the right to appeal in a personal action does not survive on the death of either party.<sup>1</sup> But there are certain personal claims like a claim for damages with respect to which a suit and an appeal will stand on different footings. So long as such claims remain unconverted into a decree as, for instance, where the suit to enforce the claim is dismissed and there is an appeal against the dismissal, the appeal will abate on death of the party.<sup>2</sup> But if the suit has been decreed and the appeal is against the decree, the death of either party will not cause abatement of the appeal.<sup>3</sup> The principles underlying the above have been discussed in Rules 1, 3 and 4, supra. If the suit is decreed in the lower Court, but set aside in first appeal and the death takes place pending a second appeal, there will be no abatement.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that the claim having once been converted into a decree, the fact that the decree has been set aside in first appeal will not affect the survival of the right.

3. Appeal by several defendants on grounds common to all. — Where the appeal is by several defendants on a ground common to all of them and one of them dies and his legal representatives are not impleaded within time, the entire appeal can nevertheless proceed as a whole. The reason is that there is an abatement only so far as the deceased is concerned. But from the nature of the appeal any one of the appellants can get a reversal of the whole decree.<sup>1</sup>

4. Death of one of two representatives suing or sued in a representative capacity. — See Note 24 to Order 1 Rule 8.

5. Suit under Section 92. — Appeal by surviving plaintiff. See Note 30 to Section 92.

6. Guardian cases — Abatement of appeal. — Where the right to guardianship is based on a personal preference, the appeal relating to such right will abate on the death of the party;<sup>1</sup> otherwise it will not.<sup>2</sup>

7. Appellate Court's power to declare abatement of suit. — When the sole plaintiff-respondent dies in appeal and the defendant-appellant claims to be his legal representative, it is not the suit but the appeal that abates.<sup>1</sup>

8. Appeal in suit for waqf property. — Certain persons sued in their capacity as followers of a shrine for a declaration that certain property was waqf property. They succeeded in the suit and there was an appeal against the decree. Pending appeal one of the plaintiffs-respondents died. It was held that appeal did not abate.<sup>1</sup>

9. Death during pendency of appeal to the Privy Council. — The judgment of the Privy Council is an order of the Sovereign. Order 22 of the Code has no application to appeals before the Privy Council. Consequently, on the death of a party in an appeal pending before the Privy Council, no question of impleading legal representatives or of limitation therefor arises<sup>1</sup> and the judgment given without impleading legal representatives is not, on that ground, a nullity.<sup>2</sup>

10. Limitation for application for substitution. — Under the old Code and the old Limitation Act there was a good deal of controversy as to the Article of the Limitation Act applicable to applications for substitution under the Section corresponding to this rule.<sup>1</sup> But this is now of no practical importance as the limitation for all applications under this rule is specifically provided for in Articles 176 and 177 of the Limitation Act, 1908, under which the application should be filed within ninety days of the death of the party.

"or to proceedings in the original Court taken after the passing of the preliminary decree where a final decree also requires to be passed having regard to the nature of the suit."

OUDH

Add the following :

"or to proceedings in the original Court taken after the passing of the preliminary decree where a final decree also requires to be passed having regard to the nature of the suit."

Synopsis

1. Execution proceedings. | 2. Allahabad amendment.

1. Execution proceedings. — This rule is new. Under the old Code there was a great difference of opinion as to whether the provisions relating to abatement contained in the previous rules applied to execution proceedings. In several cases it was held that they did not<sup>1</sup> and the present rule affirms the view expressed in those cases.<sup>3</sup>

It should be noted that the only provisions specified as not applicable to execution proceedings are those contained in Rules 3, 4 and 8 and that, even as to these it is only in respect to the abatement of the proceedings that those rules do not apply.<sup>3</sup> In other words, the rule cannot be interpreted to mean that no substitution can be made in execution proceedings<sup>4</sup> and the Judicial Committee have specifically laid down that such substitution can be made.<sup>5</sup> On the death, therefore, of a decree-holder, pending an execution proceeding, can his legal representative get himself substituted and carry on the proceedings, or should he file a separate execution application? The Bombay,<sup>6</sup> Calcutta<sup>7</sup> and Nagpur<sup>8</sup> High Courts have held that he can continue the proceedings and that he need not present a separate execution application.

According to the Madras High Court,<sup>9</sup> the legal representative can be substituted under Section 146 and O. 21 R. 16 and allowed to continue the application. The High Court of Patna<sup>10</sup> has also taken the same view as that of the High Court of Madras. Thus, there is a consensus of judicial opinion that the deceased decree-holder's legal representative can carry on the execution proceeding started by the decree-holder and need not file a fresh execution application. Similarly, where a judgment-debtor dies during the pendency of an application for execution, a fresh application for execution is not necessary for proceeding against the legal representatives of the deceased.<sup>11</sup> Where such substitution is allowed there is no fixed time within which the application should be made.<sup>12</sup> But such an application for substitution will not be a step-in-aid of execution.<sup>13</sup>

There is a conflict of opinion as to the applicability of this rule to appeals against orders in execution. It has been held by the High Courts of Madras,<sup>14</sup> Allahabad,<sup>15</sup> Lahore<sup>16</sup> and Nagpur,<sup>17</sup> by the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>18</sup> and by the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court,<sup>19</sup> that an appeal against an order made in execution proceedings is not itself a proceeding in execution of a decree or order, that this rule does not apply to appeals against orders made in execution proceedings and that such appeals are subject to the same rules in regard to abatement as any other appeals. The Calcutta High Court<sup>20</sup> has also held that where in an appeal relating to the execution of a joint decree one of the decree-holders respondents dies and his legal representatives are not brought on the record within the prescribed period of limitation, the appeal cannot proceed against the surviving respondents alone. The High Court of Patna<sup>21</sup> has, on the other hand, held that this rule applies to such appeals.

Under the old Code, proceedings for the ascertainment of mesne profits were proceedings in execution and therefore this rule applied to such proceedings.<sup>22</sup> Under the present Code, however, the position is different. See also Note 19 to Rule 3 and Note 13 to Rule 10 as to the procedure applicable to cases where a party dies between the preliminary and final decrees in a suit.

An application to set aside a sale is not a proceeding in execution for, after the sale and the subsequent deposit of the sale amount the execution is complete. Consequently, this rule does not apply to such applications.<sup>23</sup>

See also the Notes to the respective rules of the Order as to their applicability to execution proceedings.

WITHDRAWAL AND ADJUSTMENT OF SUITS

R. 1. [S. 373.] (1) At any time after the institution of a suit<sup>10</sup> the plaintiff may, as against all or any of the defendants,<sup>21</sup> withdraw his suit or abandon part of his claim. O. 23 R. 1

Withdrawal of suit or abandonment of part of claim,

(2) Where the Court is satisfied —

(a) that a suit must fail by reason of some formal defect,<sup>25</sup> or

(b) that there are other sufficient grounds<sup>26</sup> for allowing the plaintiff to institute a fresh suit for the subject-matter of a suit or part of a claim, it may, on such terms as it thinks fit,<sup>31</sup> grant the plaintiff permission<sup>27</sup> to withdraw from such suit or abandon such part of a claim with liberty to institute a fresh suit<sup>29</sup> in respect of the subject-matter of such suit or such part of a claim.

(3) Where the plaintiff withdraws from a suit, or abandons part of a claim, without the permission<sup>35</sup> referred to in sub-rule (2), he shall be liable for such costs as the Court may award and shall be precluded from instituting any fresh suit<sup>32</sup> in respect of such subject-matter<sup>33</sup> or such part of the claim.

(4) Nothing in this rule shall be deemed to authorize the Court to permit one of several plaintiffs to withdraw without the consent of the others.

1. Legislative changes.—Under the law before the Code of 1859, the Court's leave was not necessary for bringing a fresh suit where a suit had been withdrawn by the plaintiff.<sup>1</sup> Section 97 of the Code of 1859 gave power to the Court to permit a suit to be withdrawn with liberty to sue afresh, if it was satisfied that there were sufficient grounds for such a course. The words as to the suit failing by reason of some formal defects were first introduced in the Code of 1877.

2. Scope, object and applicability of the Rule.—The law as to the withdrawal of suits as enacted in the present rule is as follows —

(a) A plaintiff can withdraw a suit as a matter of right without the permission of the Court. But in this case he shall be precluded from suing again on the same cause of action. He cannot withdraw a suit reserving to himself a right to bring a fresh suit.<sup>1</sup>

(b) A plaintiff may, in the circumstances mentioned in sub-rule (2), be permitted by the Court to withdraw from a suit with liberty to sue afresh on the same cause of action.<sup>2</sup>

The rule does not apply to alternative claims on the same cause of action.<sup>3</sup> No permission to withdraw a suit can be granted where the deficiency in court-fee has not been paid.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that there is no proper suit till the deficiency in court-fee is made up.

A suit does not cease to exist in the eye of the law merely because an application is made by the plaintiff for the withdrawal of the suit. The suit does not cease to exist till an order is made by the Court on the application.<sup>5</sup> It is, therefore, open to the Court to consider and decide any objections that may be made to the withdrawal of the suit before passing orders on the application to withdraw the suit.<sup>6</sup>

Where, on the death of one of several co-plaintiffs in a case, his sons are sought to be added as legal representatives but on their refusal to be joined as co-plaintiffs, they are joined as pro forma defendants, there is no 'withdrawal of suit' by the legal representatives within the meaning of this rule.<sup>7</sup>

Where the Court dismisses a suit as against certain defendants on the ground of misjoinder of parties and causes of action, there is no 'withdrawal' or 'abandonment' by the plaintiff.<sup>8</sup>

3. Applicability of Rule to appeals. — The present rule applies also to appeals and an Appellate Court can therefore allow the withdrawal of an appeal with liberty to bring a fresh appeal or suit.<sup>1</sup> The High Court may allow a second appeal to be withdrawn.<sup>2</sup> The effect of the withdrawal, without liberty of an appeal, is to make the decree of the lower Court res judicata and the only executable decree in the case.<sup>3</sup>

In the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> it was held by the Bombay High Court that the appellant is entitled as of right to withdraw his appeal, provided that the respondent has not acquired any interest thereunder, but that, if the respondent has obtained any rights under the appeal, it is not open to the appellant to withdraw his appeal without permission.

4. Suits in Rent Courts. — The rule does not apply to suits under the Bengal Tenancy Act, which is a complete Code in itself.<sup>1</sup> Nor will the withdrawal without permission of an application under Section 105 of the Act or of a suit under Section 106 of the Act bar a fresh suit in the Civil Court in respect of its subject-matter. The meaning of sub-rule (2) of O. 23 R. 1 is that the plaintiff shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit in that or in any Court of similar or co-ordinate jurisdiction.<sup>3</sup>

But the rule applies to suits under the North-West Provinces Rent Act, 1851, inasmuch as the Rent Courts under that Act are governed by the Code in those matters on which the Act is silent.<sup>3</sup>

5. Probate proceedings. — The rule does not apply to applications for probate, inasmuch as Section 55 of the Probate and Administration Act (now Section 268 of the Succession Act of 1925) which provides that the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code should apply to proceedings for probate is limited by the words "so far as circumstances of the case permit."<sup>1</sup>

6. Execution proceedings. — The rule does not apply to execution proceedings,<sup>1</sup> including claim proceedings<sup>2</sup> as is made clear by Rule 4, infra. The undermentioned cases<sup>3</sup> holding the contrary view are no longer good law. See also Note 14 infra.

7. Insolvency proceedings. — This rule read with Section 141 applies to proceedings in insolvency.<sup>1</sup>

8. Application for final decree. — Where an application for final decree is withdrawn, it does not preclude a second application for the same purpose.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that O. 23 R. 1 applies only where a suit or part of a suit is withdrawn.

9. Set-off. — It is doubtful whether a defendant claiming a set-off can be allowed to withdraw his claim for set-off with liberty to sue again for the amount which formed the subject-matter of such claim.<sup>1</sup> But it has been held that where a defendant withdraws a plea of set-off he will not be debarred from raising the same plea in a subsequent suit against him by way of defence.<sup>2</sup>

Where the defendant in a suit makes a counter-claim to the suit, but the plaintiff withdraws his suit with liberty to file a fresh suit, the counter-claim can be continued as a plaint and can be proceeded with on the merits.<sup>3</sup>

10. "At any time after the institution of a suit." — Sub-rule (1) provides that at any time after the institution of a suit a plaintiff can withdraw his suit. As a general rule, a plaintiff can do this of his own accord and the order of the Court is not necessary for the purpose.<sup>1</sup> But the withdrawal must be made before judgment is passed in the case.<sup>2</sup> A plaintiff cannot also be allowed to withdraw his suit so as to deprive the defendant of any rights that may have accrued to him. Thus, where, in a partition suit, the defendant has become entitled under Section 3 of the Partition Act to purchase the plaintiff's share at a valuation to be fixed by the Court,<sup>3</sup> or where a preliminary decree has been passed in such a suit,<sup>4</sup> or in a suit for accounts,<sup>5</sup> the plaintiff cannot be permitted to terminate the suit by withdrawing it. Where, in such cases, the plaintiff desires to withdraw the suit, the proper course is to transpose the plaintiff as defendant and the defendant as plaintiff and proceed with the suit.<sup>6</sup>

Where in a scheme suit under Section 92 of the Code the plaintiff applies to withdraw the suit and it appears that his object is to prevent the Court from deciding the suit on the merits, the Court can under O. 1 R. 10 transpose some of the defendants as plaintiffs and proceed with the suit notwithstanding the withdrawal of the suit.<sup>7</sup>

A plaintiff who withdraws a suit under sub-rule (1), must do so unconditionally. He cannot abandon the suit and at the same time ask for a decision on the merits of the case.<sup>8</sup> He is also liable to pay such costs as the Court orders him to pay.<sup>9</sup> But the payment of the costs cannot be made a condition precedent to his withdrawing the suit.<sup>10</sup> As to costs in a wife's suit for dissolution of marriage which is withdrawn by her, see the undermentioned case.<sup>11</sup>

A withdrawal under sub-rule (1) may be in any form. Where the plaintiff enters into a compromise with the defendant but does not communicate the terms of the compromise to the Court, he should be held to have withdrawn his suit under this sub-rule.<sup>12</sup> Similarly, when a suit is dismissed at the request of the parties on a petition of compromise being filed, the dismissal operates as a withdrawal of the suit under this sub-rule.<sup>13</sup>

Notes 10-12

The language of sub-rule (2) implies that the Court can permit the withdrawal of a suit only while the suit is pending before it, i. e., before it passes a decree.<sup>14</sup>

11. Power of Appellate Court to allow withdrawal of suit. — A Court of appeal has power, in a proper case, to grant permission to withdraw a suit with liberty to file a fresh suit,<sup>1</sup> though such power should be used very cautiously.<sup>2</sup> A contrary view, however, has been taken by the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court.<sup>3</sup> But it is submitted that this (the latter) view cannot be supported, seeing that in one case even the Privy Council on an appeal allowed the suit with reference to a portion of the subject-matter to be withdrawn with liberty to sue again.<sup>4</sup> But the Appellate Court has no power to allow a suit to be withdrawn before the appeal has been admitted.<sup>5</sup> So also where a suit is dismissed and the appeal from the decree of dismissal is also dismissed, the Appellate Court cannot, as part of the same order, allow the suit to be withdrawn with liberty to sue again.<sup>6</sup> But, where the trial Court had decreed the suit and the Appellate Court allowed the appeal and set aside the decree of the trial Court but did not expressly dismiss the suit, it was held that the Appellate Court's order passed at the same time, allowing the suit to be withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit was not without jurisdiction. The decision proceeds on the ground that while there is a subsisting decree there can be no power to allow the withdrawal of the suit and the proper course for the Appellate Court in allowing withdrawal of a suit is to first set aside the decree of the lower Court.<sup>7</sup>

12. Withdrawal of suit by plaintiff-appellant. — A plaintiff-appellant is not entitled as a matter of right to withdraw his suit and he will not be permitted to do so if the effect of allowing him to withdraw it would be to deprive the defendant of

13. Withdrawal of suit by plaintiff-respondent. — A plaintiff-respondent is not entitled, as a matter of right, to withdraw his suit pending the appeal but the Court may, in the exercise of its discretion, allow him to do so. A plaintiff sued the Government and some ryots, claiming a certain channel as his private property and praying for an injunction restraining interference with his rights. A decree was passed in the suit in plaintiff's favour. Against this decree the Government did not appeal but the ryots appealed. Then the plaintiff sought to withdraw his suit against the ryots, being satisfied with a decree against the Government. It was held that he could not be allowed to do so as the decree against the Government considerably prejudiced the rights of the other defendants, viz., the ryots and that the proper course was to hear the appeal on the merits.<sup>1</sup>

14. Withdrawal of application for execution. — The provisions of Order 23 do not apply to execution proceedings (see Rule 4, infra). But a party setting the Court in motion has the right to withdraw the proceedings from the Court. Hence, a decree-holder may withdraw his application for execution and if the Court persists in selling the judgment-debtor's property after such withdrawal, it acts without jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> But the procedure as to the Court allowing withdrawal with permission to sue afresh does not apply to execution proceedings.<sup>2</sup> Conversely, the withdrawal of an application for execution does not require the sanction of the Court to enable fresh proceedings to be taken.<sup>3</sup> A decree-holder cannot, of his own volition, withdraw from execution proceedings where a third party has acquired an interest or right in the property which is the subject-matter of the execution proceedings.<sup>4</sup> See also Note 6, ante.

15. Withdrawal of application for entering up satisfaction of decree. — Where a decree-holder applies to enter up satisfaction of a decree but afterwards wants to withdraw his application, it has been held that the Court should not allow him to do so, but should inquire into the matter under O. 21 R. 2. Allowing a withdrawal of the application without any such inquiry will amount to a refusal to exercise jurisdiction under Order 21 Rule 2 such as would justify interference by the High Court in revision.<sup>1</sup>

16. Withdrawal of application for withdrawal of suit. — A plaintiff applying to withdraw his suit unconditionally has a locus penitentiae until his petition has been acted upon by the Court, and he can withdraw his petition at any time before an order is made as prayed for in his petition.<sup>1</sup>

17. Withdrawal of suit on behalf of minor. — Courts should be very jealous of the interests of minors, and should not allow a suit instituted on behalf of a minor to be withdrawn without being satisfied that the withdrawal is for the minor's benefit.<sup>1</sup> Where the next friend of a minor fraudulently withdraws a suit on behalf of the minor, the latter can sue again in respect of the same subject-matter.<sup>2</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Madras<sup>3</sup> that the Court should not allow the unconditional withdrawal of a suit on behalf of a minor, by the minor's next friend, without liberty being reserved to bring a fresh suit. According to the High Court of Calcutta,<sup>4</sup> the withdrawal of a suit by the next friend of a minor has the same effect as the withdrawal by a person of full age.

18. Withdrawal of suit by pauper plaintiff. — The withdrawal of a suit by a pauper plaintiff amounts to failure in the suit within the meaning of O. 33 R. 11, and the plaintiff must pay the court-fees under that rule.<sup>1</sup>

19. Withdrawal of suit by some of several plaintiffs. — Where there are several plaintiffs in a suit the suit cannot be withdrawn without the consent of all the plaintiffs.<sup>1</sup> But one of several co-plaintiffs or co-appellants may withdraw from the suit or appeal so far as his own interest is concerned.<sup>2</sup>

The withdrawal of unnecessary plaintiffs from a suit does not cause the dismissal of the suit.<sup>3</sup>

19a. Withdrawal of representative suits. — It has been already mentioned in Note 10, ante, that ordinarily a party prosecuting an action may at any time withdraw it. But where the plaintiff sues in a representative character, it is not open to him to put an end to the litigation by withdrawing from the suit. He may, no doubt, go out of the suit, but that does not put an end to the litigation where other people are interested in it and have a right to come in and continue the litigation.<sup>1</sup>

20a. Withdrawal of suit by benamidar.—Where a benamidar, in breach of trust, fails to carry on the suit and withdraws it, the real owner will be entitled to have the order of withdrawal vacated and to continue the suit.<sup>1</sup>

21. "As against all or any of the defendants."—Where there are several defendants to a suit, the plaintiff may withdraw his suit as against some of the defendants alone,<sup>1</sup> and if it is so withdrawn without the liberty of suing again being reserved, a subsequent suit against them will be barred.<sup>2</sup> In Mahant Singh v. U Ba Yi,<sup>3</sup> the plaintiff brought a suit against four persons as the trustees of a certain pagoda. Subsequently, these four persons were removed from their office as trustees and eight others were appointed to their place. Upon this, the plaintiff applied to the Court for striking out the names of the four persons whom he had originally impleaded as defendants in the suit and for substitution in their place of the eight new trustees and the Court complied with the plaintiff's request. It was found that the four old trustees were personally liable to the plaintiff and not in their capacity as trustees and that the new trustees were not liable to the plaintiff at all. The question arose as to whether the plaintiff could again sue the four persons whose names had been struck out at his instance. It was held by the Privy Council that the plaintiff was not entitled to sue them again and that a suit would be barred under this rule. In the course of their judgment their Lordships observed as follows :

"The appellant (plaintiff) indeed contended that he had not proceeded under O. 23 R. 1, in applying to substitute the new trustees for the old, but that his application was made under O. 1 R. 10 alone. Their Lordships cannot accept this view. The last named rule no doubt authorizes the Court to order the name of the party improperly joined to be struck out and that the name of any person who ought to have been joined be added. But such an order is expressly directed to be made on such terms as may appear to the Court to be just. If no terms are inserted in the order, then in their Lordships' view the effect of withdrawing the suit against some of the defendants is to be ascertained from O. 23 R. 1. That Order is not very happily worded, but its meaning is reasonably clear. Under its provisions the Court may give liberty to the applicant to institute a fresh suit after a withdrawal, but if it does not do so, the plaintiff is precluded from instituting a fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter."

Notes 21-23

The above view has been followed in the undermentioned decision of the Oudh Chief Court.<sup>4</sup> But, the Madras High Court in an earlier decision<sup>5</sup> had held that where a plaintiff, having regard to the view of the Court that the suit is bad for misjoinder of parties and causes of action, elects to give up some of the defendants, there is no withdrawal or abandonment within the meaning of this rule and that a fresh suit against such defendants is not barred. The decision proceeds on the ground that in such cases, the plaintiff is really acting under compulsion of law and not out of voluntary choice. In view of the above decision of the Privy Council this decision of the Madras High Court cannot be considered to be good law. For the same reason, the undermentioned decisions<sup>6</sup> also in which it was held that the striking off of the name of a defendant from the array of parties at the instance of the plaintiff does not amount to a "withdrawal" of the suit, must be regarded as no longer good law.

22. Effect of permission. — The granting of the permission to withdraw with liberty to bring a fresh suit removes the bar of res judicata which would otherwise apply if a fresh suit on the same cause of action is brought.<sup>1</sup> It places the plaintiff in the same position as he would have been in, had he brought no suit at all.<sup>2</sup> But the granting of the permission to withdraw a suit with liberty does not imply the recognition of the maintainability of the second suit.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where a suit instituted with the leave of the Court under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent is withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit, and an application is again made under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent for leave to institute the fresh suit, there is nothing to prevent the Court from dealing with the application and granting or refusing leave as it deems proper.<sup>4</sup>

A suit against a number of defendants was dismissed and the plaintiff appealed from the decree dismissing his suit. Pending the appeal, one of the defendants died and as no application for bringing on record his legal representatives was made within the period of limitation, the appeal abated as against him. The suit was then withdrawn with leave to bring a fresh suit. It was held that the legal representatives of the deceased defendant who had acquired a valuable right under the decree of the trial Court could not be affected by this order to which they were not parties.<sup>5</sup>

23. Withdrawal from suit pending arbitration. — After a reference to arbitration has been made by order of Court under Schedule II of the Code, the Court has no jurisdiction, whether before or after the award has been passed, to allow the suit to be withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit.<sup>1</sup> And this is so even though the reference is invalid, and the award consequently void.<sup>3</sup> But where the reference to arbitration is private and out of Court and an application is made to the Court under Schedule II, Paragraph 20 of the Code, to file the award, the applicant may be allowed to withdraw the application.<sup>3</sup>

Notes 23-25

24. Withdrawing from suit after suit has abated against some of the defendants. — An order granting permission to withdraw a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit passed after the suit has abated, is without jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> Where a suit abates as against a particular defendant by reason of his legal representatives not having been brought on the record within the period of limitation and the plaintiff thereupon withdraws his suit with permission to bring a fresh suit, the fresh suit can only be brought against defendants who were actually on the record at the time of the permission and not against the legal representatives of the deceased defendant.<sup>3</sup>

25. "Formal defect." — The expression "formal defect" connotes defects of various kinds not affecting the merits of the case.<sup>1</sup> A defect which goes to the root of the plaintiff's claim is not a formal defect.<sup>3</sup> The "formal defect" need not necessarily be in the pleadings.<sup>3</sup>

The rule requires that the Court must be satisfied that the suit must fail by reason of some formal defect. Hence, mere objections by the defendant are not enough.<sup>4</sup>

The following are some examples of "formal defects" within the rule —

- (1) Omission to obtain the permission of the Insolvency Court for filing the suit.<sup>5</sup>
- (2) Misjoinder of parties or causes of action.<sup>6</sup>
- (3) Erroneous valuation of the subject-matter of the suit.<sup>7</sup>
- (4) The institution of a suit in a Court which has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit is a formal defect or at least one analogous to a formal defect so as to come within sub-rule (2) (b). But in such case the Court can only return the

- (1) Where the suit is barred by limitation.<sup>9</sup>
- (2) Non-joinder of parties. The defect in this case can be remedied by the addition of the necessary parties.<sup>10</sup>
- (3) Omission to include all the causes of action which the plaintiff has against the defendant.<sup>11</sup>
- (4) Where a suit for a declaration of a public right of pathway is instituted without taking steps under Section 91 or O. 1 R. 8 or proving special damage.<sup>12</sup>

26. "Other sufficient grounds." — Courts in India have no general power of allowing a suit to be withdrawn with the liberty of suing again, apart from the provisions of the present rule<sup>1</sup> and the Court before granting leave under this rule must satisfy itself that the conditions therein specified exist.<sup>2</sup> In Watson v. Collector of Rajshahi,<sup>3</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows:

"There is a proceeding in those Courts called a non-suit, which operates as a dismissal of the suit without barring the right of the party to litigate the matter in a fresh suit; but that seems to be limited to cases of misjoinder either of parties or of the matters in contest in the suit; to cases in which a material document has been rejected because it has not borne the proper stamp, and to cases in which there has been an erroneous valuation of the subject of the suit. In all those cases the suit fails by reason of some point of form, but their Lordships are aware of no case in which, upon an issue joined, and the party having failed to produce the evidence which he was bound to produce in support of that issue, liberty has been given to him to bring a second suit, except in the particular instance that is now before them."

This passage from the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council conclusively shows that the failure of the plaintiff to prove his case is no ground for allowing him to withdraw his suit with the liberty of suing again for the same subject-matter.<sup>4</sup> The object of the rule is not to enable a plaintiff after he has failed to conduct his suit with proper care and diligence, and after his witnesses have failed to support his case, to obtain an opportunity of commencing the trial afresh in order to avoid the result of his previous bad conduct of the case so as to prejudice the opposite party.<sup>5</sup> The defect in the suit must be one not affecting the merits of the case, but having the effect of shutting out a fair trial on the merits and arising out of some error made in good faith by the plaintiff which can only be effectively set right by a trial de novo.<sup>6</sup> The defect must not be due to the plaintiff's own fault<sup>7</sup> nor one curable by amendment of the pleadings.<sup>8</sup> Further, after a judgment has been passed in the suit, the Court has no jurisdiction to allow the suit to be withdrawn with permission to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit on the same cause of action.<sup>9</sup>

given a wider meaning.<sup>11</sup> Thus, it has been held that clause (b) is not confined to cases in which the Court considers that the suit must necessarily fail.<sup>12</sup>

The following have been held to be "sufficient grounds" for allowing the plaintiff to withdraw his suit with liberty to sue afresh —

- (1) The omission to file a power-of-attorney.<sup>13</sup>
- (2) Evidence being not available, for no fault of the plaintiff.<sup>14</sup>
- (3) The suit being premature and the cause of action accruing pending the suit.<sup>15</sup>
- (4) Where the plaintiff has failed to put in evidence, an important document essential to the success of his case. In this respect there is a distinction between a case where a plaintiff wants to get time in order to produce a large body of fresh evidence to counteract the defendant's evidence and a case where a plaintiff merely wishes to give formal proof of a document.<sup>16</sup>
- (5) Where two suits are brought and both are sought to be withdrawn to be consolidated into one and there is an apprehension that the second of the two suits would be barred under O. 2 R. 2.<sup>17</sup>
- (6) Where the plaintiff had been misled by the absence of a specific denial in the written statement.<sup>18</sup>
- (7) Where a material document has been rejected as not properly stamped.<sup>19</sup>
- (8) Where the plaintiff finds that the defendant is absent and that even if a decree is passed it cannot be executed.<sup>20</sup>

In the following cases it has been held that there are no sufficient grounds for allowing the plaintiff to withdraw his suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit —

O. 23 R. 1
Notes 26-27

- (1) Where the parties are ready for trial, and a withdrawal will prejudice the defendant.<sup>22</sup>
- (2) Where the plaintiffs are not ready to go on with the case.<sup>23</sup>
- (3) Where notices on the heirs of a deceased defendant could not be served.<sup>24</sup>
- (4) Where owing to the mistake of the writer who drew up the plaint, some important items were left out.<sup>25</sup>
- (5) Where the plaintiff deliberately and grossly undervalues his suit and pays insufficient court-fee.<sup>26</sup>

For other instances, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>27</sup>

In the undermentioned case<sup>28</sup> it was held by the Allahabad High Court that where on an application by the plaintiff for permission to withdraw his suit, the Court refers the matter to the other side and on the other side stating that it has no objection provided that its costs are paid, permits the suit to be withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit, the Court does not act without jurisdiction. The decision proceeds on the ground that the Court would be called upon to go into the question whether a formal defect or other sufficient ground existed only if the opposite party denied its existence. But where the opposite party did not deny it, there would really be nothing for the Court to examine.

27. "May grant permission."—The Court can pass an order under the rule suo motu. An application by the plaintiff is not necessary.<sup>1</sup> Although the rule does not specifically mention anything about notice, still "it is an elementary rule of universal application and founded upon the plainest principles of justice that a judicial order which may possibly affect or prejudice any party cannot be made unless he has been afforded an opportunity to be heard." Hence, if the Court allows a plaintiff to withdraw his suit with liberty of bringing a fresh suit on the same cause of action, without giving notice to the defendant, the High Court will interfere in revision.<sup>2</sup> The permission under the rule extends only to one suit. A plaintiff was allowed to withdraw his suit with permission to bring a fresh suit, on condition of his paying defendant's costs. He filed the second suit without paying the costs, but paid them afterwards. The second suit was dismissed on the ground of the plaintiff's failure to comply with the condition as to costs. Thereupon the plaintiff tried to bring a third suit. It was held that he was not entitled to do so.<sup>3</sup>

In the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> it was held that a specific order allowing the withdrawal of the suit and permitting a fresh suit to be brought is not necessary and that a direction in the decree permitting the plaintiff to bring a separate suit in regard to a portion of the claim is enough.

28. Form of permission. — The permission to file a fresh suit need not be express but may be implied from the circumstances under which the order was passed.<sup>1</sup> Where the Court does not wish to grant the application for permission, it can dismiss the application and direct the plaintiff to proceed with the suit and if he fails to do so, it can dismiss the suit for default of prosecution.<sup>2</sup> But the Court cannot refuse liberty to file a fresh suit and at the same time dismiss the suit.<sup>3</sup> Nor can it merely allow the suit to be withdrawn and at the same time refuse liberty to bring a fresh suit.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, an order on such an application granting permission to sue in respect of a portion of the claim only is bad.<sup>5</sup> Directing a new plaint to be filed is also not a legal order to be passed on an application under Rule 1 sub-rule (2).<sup>6</sup> Similarly an order substituting the plaintiff's assignee on the record and permitting him to withdraw the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit is not valid.<sup>7</sup> The dismissal of a suit in the form "in which it is brought" does not amount to a permission to sue again.<sup>8</sup> suit is not barred, whether a date has been fixed for the payment or not, or whether or not such payment has been made a condition precedent to the institution of a fresh suit. These decisions proceed on the view that until the costs are paid the original suit itself cannot be deemed to have been withdrawn but must be taken to be pending till such costs are paid, that inasmuch, therefore, as the second suit must be taken to have been filed at the time when the first suit was pending, it should be stayed under Section 10 of the Code, and that, when the costs are actually paid the first suit will be deemed to be withdrawn on the date of such payment and the second suit can be proceeded with. The High Court of Allahabad<sup>6</sup> has held that where the order of the Court is that the amount should be deposited by a certain date and that date expires, a subsequent deposit would in no way comply with the order granting leave to withdraw. But in regard to cases where no date is fixed, it follows the Calcutta view mentioned above.<sup>7</sup> The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>8</sup> has held that where a suit is allowed to be withdrawn with liberty, on payment of costs before the institution of the fresh suit, the failure to pay such costs is only an irregularity which does not entail ipso facto a dismissal of the suit, and that, if the costs are paid before the hearing, the irregularity is cured. The Calcutta view as to the original suit being pending till the costs are paid was not accepted by this Court. But the second suit must be treated as having been instituted on the day the costs are paid and if the costs are paid after the period of limitation for the suit expires, the suit must be dismissed.<sup>9</sup> According to the High Courts of Bombay,<sup>10</sup> Madras<sup>11</sup> and Rangoon,<sup>12</sup> the costs must, where the time for payment is specified, be paid before the specified date, and, where no time is specified, before the institution of the suit; otherwise, the second suit will be barred. According to this view, the permission means a permission to bring a fresh suit and not a permission to withdraw from the first suit, and that the first suit does not continue pending till the costs are paid, but is withdrawn immediately on the order for withdrawal.

Where it is impossible for the plaintiff to pay the costs within the time fixed, it has been held that the Court can extend the time for such payment.<sup>13</sup>

Where a plaintiff suing for redemption is allowed to withdraw his suit with liberty to sue again within two years from the date of the withdrawal but sues after the expiry of the two years, his suit is not barred, provided it is within limitation. It is not open to the Court in which the first suit is instituted, to curtail the period of limitation which the law allows to the plaintiff within which to bring his second suit for redemption.<sup>14</sup>

32. Fresh suit must be between the same parties. — The bar under this rule applies only if the second suit is between the same parties as the first suit.<sup>1</sup>

33. Same subject-matter. — Sub-rule (3) provides that where a plaintiff withdraws his suit without the permission of the Court under sub-rule (2), he shall be debarred from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter. The term "subject-matter" means the plaintiff's cause of action for his suit<sup>1</sup> and a suit on a different cause of action is therefore not barred under this rule<sup>2</sup> even though the suit may relate to the same property.<sup>3</sup> Conversely, a suit based on the same cause of action as the first one is barred.<sup>4</sup>

(7) On the attachment of a house in execution of a decree, the plaintiff sued to establish her title. Meanwhile the executing Court refused to confirm the sale. Thereupon the plaintiff withdrew her suit. But the sale was afterwards confirmed in appeal. It was held that a fresh suit by the plaintiff was not barred as there was a fresh cause of action.<sup>11</sup>

(8) The withdrawal of a suit for possession is no bar to the institution of a suit for rent.<sup>12</sup>

(9) The withdrawal of a suit for partition is no bar to a fresh suit for partition by the same plaintiff and of the same property, as the cause of action for a suit for partition is a recurring one.<sup>13</sup>

For other instances, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>14</sup>

It has been held by the Madras High Court<sup>15</sup> that the withdrawal of a suit instituted by partners who have not been registered as a firm under the Partnership Act is no bar to a fresh suit filed by them on the same cause of action after they get themselves registered as a firm, because the later suit would be technically by a different plaintiff.

34. Additional relief in fresh suit. — The withdrawal of a suit without the permission of the Court to institute a fresh suit operates as a dismissal thereof. Hence, O. 2 R. 2 will be a bar to the institution of any suit in respect of any portion of the claim which the plaintiff may have omitted in the previous suit in such a case.<sup>1</sup> But where the withdrawal is with the Court's permission to bring a fresh suit, O. 2 R. 2 is no bar to the inclusion in the second suit of any portion of the plaintiff's claim or of any relief which the plaintiff might have included but did not include in his first suit.<sup>2</sup> When a suit is withdrawn with permission to bring a fresh suit on the same cause of action, it is not necessary to allege in the subsequent suit the same title as in the first.<sup>3</sup>

35. Effect of withdrawal without permission.—The effect of the withdrawal of a suit without the Court's permission to bring a fresh suit is to debar the plaintiff from filing such a suit.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where a plaintiff unconditionally withdraws his suit in view of the matter in dispute being referred to arbitration, he cannot subsequently sue again in respect of such matter, although the arbitration may have become infructuous.<sup>2</sup> The fact that the plaintiff states at the time of withdrawal that he reserves to himself the liberty of bringing a fresh suit does not remove the bar under the rule.<sup>3</sup> Even the defendant's consent to the withdrawal of the suit at the time of such withdrawal will not remove the bar under the rule.<sup>4</sup> But an illegal order for withdrawal without liberty being reserved to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit does not bar a fresh suit.<sup>5</sup> Similarly, where the second suit has been already filed at the time of the withdrawal of the first suit, the withdrawal does not bar the trial of the second suit.<sup>6</sup> The rule merely bars a remedy but does not extinguish the right.<sup>7</sup> Where a creditor sues both the principal debtor and the surety in the same suit and later on withdraws the suit as against the former, though he cannot file a fresh suit against the principal debtor, he can continue the suit as against the surety.<sup>8</sup> The bar of a fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter where a former suit has been withdrawn without the permission of the Court is not based on the principle of res judicata (because there is no decision of the Court in such a case) but is due to the express provision contained in sub-rule (3).<sup>9</sup>

Where the suit property is partly within the Court's jurisdiction and partly without, the withdrawal of the suit with reference to the former portion is no bar to the continuance of the suit with reference to the latter.<sup>10</sup>

In the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> the Madras High Court held that it was "very doubtful" whether the prohibition of a fresh suit under this rule where the previous suit was withdrawn without the permission of the Court can apply to cases where the summons had not been served on the defendant at all.

The prohibition enacted by sub-rule (3) applies to suits and not to defences. Thus, where a defendant raises a plea of set-off but withdraws it without the permission of the Court, he will not be precluded from raising the same plea again by way of a defence to a subsequent suit against him.<sup>12</sup>

36. Erroneous order granting permission. — An order for withdrawal of a suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit, contrary to the provisions of this rule, cannot be treated as an order made without jurisdiction; such order is consequently not null and void, and a fresh suit instituted upon leave so granted is not incompetent. Further, the Court trying the subsequent suit is not competent to enter into the question whether the Court which granted the plaintiff permission to withdraw his first suit had properly made such order.<sup>1</sup> The undermentioned cases<sup>2</sup> in which a contrary view was held are not good law. But where there are a number of plaintiffs and the Court allows some of them alone to withdraw the suit without the consent of the others, the Court acts without jurisdiction and there should be deemed to be no withdrawal at all within the meaning of Order 23 Rule 1.<sup>3</sup>

37. Effect of reversal of order granting permission. — Where after a fresh suit is filed, the order permitting the withdrawal of the previous suit with leave to institute a fresh suit is reversed by the High Court in revision, the proper procedure is to declare the fresh suit null and void and to direct the lower Court to go on with the first suit from the stage at which the order set aside was passed.<sup>1</sup>

38. Power of Court of Small Causes to allow withdrawal. — A Presidency Small Cause Court which, after dismissing a suit, has granted a new trial, is seized of the case, not as a Court of revision but as an original Court and can allow the suit to be withdrawn under this rule.<sup>1</sup> But where a decree has been passed in favour of the plaintiff contingent on the opinion of the High Court on a certain question which is referred to it and the High Court decides against the plaintiff, the suit cannot be permitted to be withdrawn with liberty to sue again. The Small Cause Court must, in such a case, pronounce judgment in favour of the defendant.<sup>2</sup>

39. Appeal. — No appeal lies from an order allowing withdrawal of a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit. Such an order is neither a decree nor an appealable order under Section 104 or O. 43 R. 1.<sup>1</sup> Nor does an appeal lie from an order as to costs under this rule.<sup>2</sup> Where the Court refuses to permit a suit to be withdrawn with liberty to sue again, its order is not one affecting the decision of the case within the meaning of Section 105 and is therefore not open to attack in the appeal from the decree in the suit.<sup>3</sup> But where a Court, while dismissing a suit, reserves a right to institute a fresh suit, an appeal lies from the former part of the decree because the appeal in such a case is not from an "order" but from a decree.<sup>4</sup> So also, where the trial Court allows a suit to be withdrawn and, on the defendant appealing, the lower Appellate Court sets aside the order and dismisses the plaintiff's suit, the order of the lower Appellate Court amounts to a decree and is appealable to the High Court.<sup>5</sup>

40. Letters Patent Appeal. — An order of a single Judge of a High Court refusing to set aside in revision an order of the lower Court allowing a plaintiff to withdraw his suit with liberty of bringing a fresh suit is a "judgment" within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent and hence is appealable.<sup>1</sup> So also, an order of a single Judge of a High Court allowing the withdrawal of a suit with leave to sue afresh is a judgment and is appealable as such.<sup>2</sup>

41. Revision. — An order allowing the withdrawal of a suit with liberty to sue afresh is a decision of a case within the meaning of Section 115,<sup>1</sup> and is therefore open to revision if it is made on grounds not covered by O. 23 R. 1.<sup>2</sup> So also, an order permitting a partition suit to be withdrawn after the preliminary decree in the suit has been passed is open to revision.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, if the lower Court has not exercised a judicial discretion or has not applied its mind at all to the question, in ordering a suit to be withdrawn with liberty, the High Court can interfere in revision on the ground that the lower Court's order is vitiated by material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction.<sup>4</sup> Thus, it has been held that if the lower Court orders a suit to be withdrawn with leave to sue afresh, without giving any reasons, it acts with material irregularity and its order is liable to be set aside in revision.<sup>5</sup> But where the lower Court has exercised a judicial discretion and allowed a suit to be withdrawn and the reasons assigned by it are within the scope of the rule, the High Court will not interfere with its discretion merely because the High Court itself might have taken a different view of the matter.<sup>6</sup> An order for withdrawal made ex parte<sup>7</sup> or made without any enquiry as to the circumstances justifying such withdrawal<sup>8</sup> is liable to be set aside in revision. But, where the Court, upon an application being made to it for permission to withdraw the suit, referred the matter to the other side and the other side stated that it had no objection provided that it got its costs and the Court thereupon allowed the application of the plaintiff, it was held that it could not be said that the Court had not applied its mind to the question and that, hence no revision lay.<sup>9</sup> An order refusing permission to withdraw a suit with liberty to bring another suit is interlocutory in nature and is not open to revision.<sup>10</sup>

R. 2. [S. 374.] In any fresh suit instituted on permission granted under the last preceding rule, the plaintiff shall be bound by the law of limitation in the same manner as if the first suit had not been instituted.

O. 23 R. 2

Limitation law not affected by first suit.

[1877, S. 374; 1859, S. 97.]

1. Limitation. — Under the present rule, a plaintiff withdrawing a suit under O. 23 R. 1 with liberty to sue again and instituting a fresh suit is not entitled to deduct from the period of limitation applicable to his second suit the time taken up by the withdrawn suit.<sup>1</sup> Section 14 of the Limitation Act does not apply where a suit is withdrawn by a plaintiff.<sup>2</sup> The rule provides that the law of limitation shall apply in the same manner as if the prior suit had not been brought. Hence a plaintiff is not deprived of the benefit of Section 31 of the Limitation Act merely because he has withdrawn a prior suit relating to the same subject-matter under O. 23 R. 1.<sup>3</sup> This rule applies only to a suit withdrawn under Rule 1 but that rule also does not apply except to cases properly pending in a Court in which the leave is granted. Therefore, where a Court has no jurisdiction to try the suit, its order granting leave to withdraw the suit with liberty to file a fresh suit does not fall within Rule 1. Hence this rule does not apply to such a case and Section 14 of the Limitation Act is applicable.<sup>4</sup>

Further, the present rule applies only where a period is fixed by the law of limitation. Hence, where a plaintiff who is required by the order of a Revenue Court to institute a suit within three months, does so within the three months but withdraws the suit with liberty to sue again, his subsequent suit brought on the basis of such liberty is not barred, though it may be instituted after the expiry of three months from the Revenue Court's order.<sup>5</sup>

Local Amendments

OUDH

Add the following proviso :

"Provided that no agreement, compromise or satisfaction shall be recorded in a suit instituted under Section 92, Code of Civil Procedure, unless previous notice of the same has been given to the Legal Remembrancer to Government, and the Court, after hearing him, if he desires to be heard, decides to accept it."

RANGOON

For Rule 3 the following shall be substituted, namely :

"Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that a suit has been adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise, or where the defendant satisfies the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the suit, the Court shall order such agreement, compromise or satisfaction to be recorded, and shall either pass a decree in accordance therewith or shall decree that all further proceedings in the suit shall be stayed upon the terms of the said agreement, compromise or satisfaction with liberty to the parties to apply for the purpose of carrying the same into effect.

Provided that before recording an agreement, compromise or satisfaction in a suit instituted under the provisions of Section 92, Civil Procedure Code, the Court shall direct notice returnable within a reasonable time to be given to the Advocate-General, Burma, or the officer with whose consent the suit was instituted, of the agreement, compromise or satisfaction proposed to be recorded. The Advocate-General or such officer as aforesaid may thereupon appear before the Court and be heard in the matter of such agreement, compromise or satisfaction."

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that" are new. See Notes 2 and 6 below.

2. The words "the Court shall order such agreement, compromise or satisfaction to be recorded" have been substituted for the words "such agreement, compromise or satisfaction shall be recorded." This makes it clear that in every case of a compromise decree, there should be an order recording the compromise from which an appeal is provided by Order 43 Rule 1 (m).

3. The words at the end of Section 375 "such decree shall be final so far as it relates to so much of the subject-matter of the suit as is dealt with by the agreement, compromise or satisfaction" have been omitted and a new sub-section has been added to Section 96, providing that no appeal lies from a consent decree.

2. Scope of the Rule. — After the institution of a suit it may be adjusted by the parties either wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise. The defendant may also satisfy the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the suit. In such cases, on the application of the parties the Court shall order such agreement, compromise or satisfaction to be recorded, and shall pass a decree in accordance therewith so far as it relates to the suit. Where the agreement or compromise relates to matters entirely extraneous to the suit, no decree can be passed in terms of such agreement or compromise under this rule.

The Court must be satisfied that there has been a lawful agreement or compromise; and when one of the parties disputes the legality of the compromise or agreement, the Court should investigate the matter, and, if it finds that there has been a lawful compromise, should pass a decree in terms thereof so far as such compromise relates to the suit.<sup>1</sup>

The word "compromise" is more comprehensive than the word "agreement." It means an adjustment of claims in dispute by mutual concessions, and also a mutual promise of two or more parties at difference, to refer the ending of their controversy to arbitrators.<sup>2</sup>

as civil proceedings.<sup>1</sup> It does not, however, apply to proceedings for the appointment of common manager under Section 93 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.<sup>2</sup> Nor does it apply to a rent suit under that Act, though a compromise in such suits can be recorded by the Court under Section 147A of that Act which is identical in terms with this rule.<sup>3</sup> The rule does not, likewise, apply to proceedings under some other special Acts.<sup>4</sup>

4. Applicability to mortgage suits. — The rule applies also to suits on mortgages, so that it is open to the Courts to decree such suits on terms settled between the parties, instead of in the form directed by Order 34.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, the proceedings for a final decree, after the preliminary decree has been passed, are proceedings in suit and can be compromised.<sup>2</sup> See Note 14 to O. 34 R. 5 for a full discussion. So also, the rule applies to the adjustment of the claim of a mortgagee for a personal decree against the mortgagor under O. 34 R. 6.<sup>3</sup> But a mere agreement to extend the time given by the preliminary decree for the payment of the mortgage money does not amount to an adjustment of the suit.<sup>4</sup> This rule cannot be extended by analogy to proceedings under Section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act.<sup>5</sup>

5. Applicability to divorce suits. — Where a decree nisi has been passed in a suit for dissolution of marriage it is competent to the Court, where the parties consent, not to make the decree absolute.<sup>1</sup>

was held by the High Courts of Madras,<sup>1</sup> Calcutta<sup>2</sup> and Bombay,<sup>3</sup> the Chief Court of the Punjab<sup>4</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Courts of Nagpur<sup>5</sup> and Oudh<sup>6</sup> that the Court had the power to enquire into the matter, to record it if proved, and to pass a decree thereon; on the other hand, it was held by the High Court of Allahabad<sup>7</sup> that under Section 375, the Court could record a compromise and pass a decree thereon only when at the time of moving the Court the parties were agreed as to the compromise and the decree to be passed on it. The present rule makes it clear that the Legislature has adopted the former view, viz., that the Court has jurisdiction, in the case of a dispute between the parties as to the compromise, to enquire into, and decide whether there has been a lawful compromise in terms of which the suit should be decreed.<sup>8</sup> The provision in this rule for an inquiry about the fact and lawfulness of a compromise of a suit in the suit itself is a speedier alternative to a separate suit for specific performance of the contract to compromise the suit on certain terms.<sup>9</sup> As to whether and when appeal lies from a decree passed under such circumstances, see Note 15 to Section 96 ante.

The onus of establishing that a suit has been adjusted in a lawful manner is on the person who alleges the same.<sup>10</sup> It is open to the Court to decide the matter by taking evidence in the usual way or upon affidavits.<sup>11</sup> The agreement compromising the suit may be written or oral,<sup>12</sup> and may be proved by oral<sup>13</sup> or documentary evidence. The compromise need not be presented by the parties themselves.<sup>14</sup> A compromise otherwise unobjectionable is not vitiated by the want of signature of a party.<sup>15</sup> A compromise disallowed by the Court cannot be again set up in execution of the decree in the suit.<sup>16</sup>

7. "Has been adjusted." — In order that the rule may apply, there must be a completed agreement between the parties<sup>1</sup> and the agreement must amount to an adjustment, in whole or in part, of the suit.<sup>2</sup> The following cases will show when a suit can be said to be adjusted and when not —

- (1) Where a case is adjourned on the ground that the parties contemplated compromising the matter out of Court, there is no adjustment of the suit within this rule.<sup>3</sup>
- (2) Where parties agree that the suit should be disposed of in one way if a certain simple fact was found to exist and in another way if it was found not to exist, it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that it amounts to an adjustment of the suit.<sup>4</sup> The High Court of Allahabad has taken a contrary view.<sup>5</sup> See also the undermentioned decision.<sup>6</sup>
- (3) An agreement between the parties to a suit to abide by the final decision which may be made in another proceeding amounts to an adjustment when that decision is actually passed.<sup>7</sup>
- (4) (a) An agreement between the parties that a dispute is to be settled in one way or the other in accordance with the statement of a third person is an adjustment.<sup>8</sup>
(b) But an agreement between the parties to refer their disputes to a third party's decision and abide by his terms is not an adjustment, till the terms are stated and accepted.<sup>9</sup>

(c) When a dispute is referred by the parties to a third party's decision, there is a locus penitentiae to withdraw from such agreement till the third party functions.<sup>10</sup>

- (5) A compromise which either party has the option of repudiating afterwards is not an adjustment of the suit.<sup>11</sup>
- (6) An agreement to abide by the decision of the Court whether right or wrong amounts to a compromise within this rule.<sup>12</sup>
- (7) An agreement for making the decision of Court depend on contingencies beyond the control of parties is not an adjustment,<sup>13</sup> while it will be an adjustment if the contingency is within the power of the parties themselves.<sup>14</sup>
- (8) The abandonment of an issue does not amount to a compromise.<sup>15</sup>
- (9) It has been held by the Allahabad High Court<sup>16</sup> that an agreement that the suit should be decreed if a certain witness eats food served by the plaintiff is binding on the parties and if the witness eats the food the suit should be decreed as per the agreement. In the above case it was held that the present rule did not apply to it. In an earlier case of the same High Court it was held that such an agreement concluded the matter only with reference to one of the issues in the case, viz., that of legitimacy and that the other issues should be tried on the merits.<sup>17</sup> According to the Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court<sup>18</sup> such an agreement does not constitute an adjustment within this rule but the agreement and its performance would be evidence on the issue of legitimacy. In the undermentioned case<sup>19</sup> it was held by the Madras High Court that an agreement by a party that the suit should be decided in a particular way if a certain event should happen will estop him from resiling from the agreement afterwards apart from the question of adjustment. The Rangoon High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>20</sup> held that an agreement that the suit should be decided according to the decision in another suit then pending is not an "adjustment" but is binding on the parties.

It has been held that a suit may be compromised even after a preliminary decree provided that the final decree has not been passed.<sup>21</sup> Similarly, it has been held that there can be a 'satisfaction' (under this rule) of the plaintiff's claim between the preliminary and final decrees in a suit.<sup>22</sup> For full discussion, see Note 14 to O. 34 R. 5.

Note 8

8. "By any lawful agreement or compromise." — The rule restricts the power of the Court to record agreements or compromises, to such agreements as are lawful and the Court is therefore bound to enquire into the question whether the compromise it is asked to record is a lawful one or not.<sup>1</sup> If a part of the compromise is unlawful and it can be separated from the rest, the Court can record that portion of the compromise which is lawful.<sup>2</sup> Ordinarily, when investigating the fact and lawfulness of a compromise under this rule, it is irrelevant to examine the strength or weakness of the suit itself.<sup>3</sup>

The expression "lawful" refers to the legality of the terms of the agreement and not to its binding character. Therefore, an agreement or compromise may be lawful within this rule although it may not be binding on one of the parties on the ground of its having been brought about by coercion, undue influence or fraud.<sup>4</sup> The word "lawful" means lawful within the meaning of the Contract Act, that is to say, the rule requires an agreement which is legally enforceable; but it is not necessary that in order to enable a Court to record a compromise the terms, which are to be complied with after decree, should be specifically enforceable under the Specific Relief Act.<sup>5</sup>

The following have been held to be agreements which are unlawful within the meaning of this rule —

- (1) Agreements prohibited by law such as an agreement to transfer a property which is inalienable in law.<sup>6</sup>
- (2) Agreements which are opposed to public policy, such as an agreement for the alienation of a religious office,<sup>7</sup> or an agreement relating to a public trust which is detrimental to its interest,<sup>8</sup> or an agreement which amounts to a breach of trust.<sup>9</sup>

(4) According to the High Courts of Allahabad<sup>11</sup> and Madras<sup>12</sup> an agreement amounting to the transfer of a spes successionis which is prohibited by Section 6 of the Transfer of Property Act, is not lawful. According to the High Court of Calcutta<sup>13</sup> an agreement between expectants to divide a particular property in a certain way on the happening of a particular contingency is lawful. Where certain reversioners executed a sale deed of a spes successionis before the death of the limited owners but entered into a compromise as to it after the limited owner's death, it was held by the Chief Court of Oudh that the compromise was not unlawful.<sup>14</sup>

For other instances, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>15</sup>

A compromise containing an agreement for the withdrawal of a prosecution for a compoundable offence,<sup>16</sup> or for allowing a relief which is barred by limitation,<sup>17</sup> is not unlawful. Nor is a compromise unlawful merely because the parties do not get the shares to which they would be legally entitled<sup>18</sup> or because it contains a penal provision.<sup>19</sup> A compromise in which one party transfers his right to another is not bad on the ground of lis pendens.<sup>20</sup>

A promise to do a thing can be a good consideration for the adjustment of a suit; it is not necessary that the promise should have been carried out before the adjustment can be recorded under this rule.<sup>21</sup> The rule contemplates an adjustment by act of parties and not an adjustment which has a statutory operation. Hence, a scheme of arrangement which when sanctioned by the Court acquires a statutory operation under Section 153, sub-section (2) of the Companies Act cannot be said to be a lawful agreement or compromise within the meaning of this rule.<sup>22</sup>

9. Submission to award, if a valid adjustment. — Under the old Code it was held that where the parties to a pending suit referred the matter to arbitration the award could be filed as an adjustment under this rule.<sup>1</sup> The present Code, however, contains a new Section, namely Section 89, which provides as follows :

"Save in so far as is otherwise provided by the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899, or by any other law for the time being in force all references to arbitration whether by an order in a suit or otherwise, and all proceedings thereunder shall be governed by the provisions contained in the Second Schedule."

The question has arisen whether, in view of this Section a submission to arbitration by parties without the intervention of the Court and the award passed by the arbitrators on such submission can be filed as an adjustment by way of compromise under this rule. On this question there is a conflict of opinion. According to the High Courts of Calcutta,<sup>2</sup> Lahore,<sup>3</sup> Nagpur<sup>4</sup> and Rangoon,<sup>5</sup> the words "any other law in force" cannot include the provisions of the Code itself, and therefore cannot include the provisions of this rule. Hence, in view of Section 89 such a matter must be governed only by the provisions of the Second Schedule, and the submission and the award cannot be filed as an adjustment under this rule. On the other hand, the High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>6</sup> Madras<sup>7</sup> and Patna,<sup>8</sup> the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>9</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind<sup>10</sup> are of the opinion that the words "any other law in force" include the provisions of this rule and that therefore such submission and award can be filed as an adjustment by way of a compromise within the meaning of this rule. The High Court of Bombay has reached the same conclusion but on a

somewhat different reasoning. According to it, the words "any other law in force" mean only any other law of arbitration for the time being in force, such as Section 152 of the Companies Act or Sections 43 to 45 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act or the Co-operative Societies Act or the general law of contracts whereby parties may agree to refer their disputes to arbitration, and that they do not include this rule. It is, however, of opinion that the words in Section 89 of the Code "shall be governed by the provisions of the Second Schedule" are totally inapt to convey a prohibition and that they mean no more than that in those arbitrations which are dealt with by the Second Schedule the procedure of that Schedule shall be followed. Where, therefore, a submission and award are not covered by the provisions of the Second Schedule, as where the reference is made in a pending suit without the intervention of the Court, Section 89 has no application at all and the award can therefore be recognized as an adjustment of the suit by way of compromise under this rule.<sup>11</sup> In the undermentioned case of the Bombay High Court,<sup>12</sup> Rangnekar, J., sitting as a single Judge, was inclined to agree with the Calcutta view. The observations were, however, obiter. Where both the parties accept the award of the arbitrators, the award becomes a compromise and can be recorded under this rule.<sup>13</sup>

The Court acting under this rule (in cases where it has been held that an award can be pleaded in a compromise) can enquire into any alleged misconduct of the arbitrator.<sup>14</sup> Further, if a party does not raise any objection to the recording of a submission and award as a compromise under this rule, he is estopped from questioning the Court's power to do so.<sup>15</sup> But a mere agreement to refer to arbitration has been held not to be a compromise within this rule.<sup>16</sup> Nor can an award under an invalid reference be accepted as a compromise or adjustment under this rule.<sup>17</sup>

10. Agreement to take oath. — The Oaths Act does not provide for the adjustment of a suit in an arbitrary way by the oath of a party. Hence, an agreement to be bound by the oath of the opposite party does not amount to an adjustment of the suit but the oath amounts only to a conclusive proof, as against the party agreeing to be bound, of the matter stated.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, if a party has agreed that if he fails to take a certain oath the suit should be decreed or dismissed, his failure to take the oath does not justify the disposal of the suit under the present rule. Under Section 12 of the Oaths Act, the Court can only record the failure to take the oath and the reasons given for such failure and proceed with the suit.<sup>3</sup> A party who has agreed to be bound by the statement on oath of the opposite party is entitled, at any time before the oath is actually taken, to resile from the agreement.<sup>3</sup>

11. Compromise of probate proceedings. — A compromise between an applicant for probate of a will and a caveator which aims at excluding proof of the genuineness of the will is opposed to public policy which requires that the question of the genuineness of a will should be decided only by the Court. Hence, such a compromise is unlawful and probate cannot be granted merely on the basis of such a compromise and without proof of the will in some form or other.<sup>1</sup> It is open to a caveator who has entered into such a compromise to resile from it and to require due proof of the will.<sup>2</sup> In the same way an executor who withdraws his application for probate in pursuance of a compromise is not debarred from filing another application for probate.<sup>3</sup>

13. Compromise pending arbitration. — A compromise entered into pending arbitration proceedings without the intervention of the Court is valid.<sup>1</sup> Proceedings under Sch. II, Para. 17<sup>2</sup> or under Para. 20<sup>3</sup> can be validly compromised. But where an arbitration is held on an order of reference by the Court, then, unless the arbitration is superseded, the parties cannot validly enter into any compromise.<sup>4</sup> The mere fact that the time fixed for making the award has expired does not amount to supersession of the arbitration.<sup>5</sup> But it has been held by the Lahore High Court that even after a reference to arbitration through the Court, the parties can validly compromise the disputes under the present rule.<sup>6</sup> In a Madras case, where the Court recorded a compromise under the present rule after the expiry of the time fixed for the making of the award by the arbitrator, it was held that the Court should be deemed to have superseded the arbitration.<sup>7</sup> An agreement not to dispute an award may be said to be a lawful adjustment of the suit within this rule.<sup>8</sup>

As to adjustment of an award, see the undermentioned decision.<sup>9</sup>

13a. Compromise of proceeding for setting aside award. — See Note 4 to Schedule II, Paragraph 15.

14. Compromise of guardianship proceedings. — A guardian appointed by the Court cannot be removed by a compromise as it would have the effect of withdrawing from the jurisdiction of the Court the question of the welfare of the minor and would defeat the provisions of Sections 40 and 42 of the Guardians and Wards Act.<sup>1</sup>

15. Pre-decree agreements in bar of execution. — An agreement between the parties to a suit entered into before the decree is passed to treat the decree as not executable wholly or partly cannot be given effect to by the executing Court.<sup>1</sup> But an agreement not to execute the decree in whole or in part, entered into after the decree is passed, is valid and binding.<sup>2</sup>

16. "Where the defendant satisfies the plaintiff." — In an old case of the Punjab Chief Court it was held that a Court cannot dispose of a suit according to a compromise if the plaintiff professes himself merely satisfied aliunde and that the defendant must have satisfied the plaintiff.<sup>1</sup> It is submitted that this view will hold good even now but that the "defendant" would include his agents also.

17. "Shall order such agreement, compromise or satisfaction to be recorded." — The provision requiring the Court to order that the compromise be recorded is not a mere matter of form but is one of substance as the aggrieved person has a right of appeal against such an order under O. 43 R. 1 (m) of the Code.<sup>1</sup> The omission to comply with the requirements of this rule goes to the root of the jurisdiction of the Court to pass a decree in accordance with the compromise,<sup>2</sup> as the rule makes it obligatory on the Court to record a compromise duly entered into by the parties to a suit.<sup>3</sup> The Court cannot refuse to record the compromise merely because the Court considers it too favourable to one side<sup>4</sup> or that the working of it would give trouble.<sup>5</sup>

It has been held by the Madras High Court<sup>6</sup> and the Chief Court of the Punjab<sup>7</sup> that till judgment is delivered in open Court, the Court has jurisdiction to record a compromise. In a Calcutta case<sup>8</sup> where an appeal had been dismissed for default, both parties being absent and they then presented a petition asking that the case should be decreed in terms thereof, it was held that the Court ought to restore the case giving effect to the petition of compromise. Where an ex parte decree is set aside by suit on the ground of fraud, the original suit is restored as on the date of the ex parte decree and any compromise entered into before the decree should be recorded.<sup>9</sup> But there can be no consent decree unless the case has come on the cause list of the Court.<sup>10</sup>

Where a plaintiff, in pursuance of a compromise, merely asks for a withdrawal of suit, the Court is not bound to record the compromise.<sup>11</sup> Where the parties enter into a compromise outside Court, but a compromise decree is not duly passed under this rule, and a decree is passed in the usual way, the terms of the agreement between the parties cannot be enforced.<sup>12</sup> If the Court's order does not embody the whole compromise but embodies only a portion of it, the compromise is not enforceable.<sup>13</sup> But the rule does not require that the order should set out the compromise verbatim. It is enough if the terms of the compromise are indicated with sufficient clearness.<sup>14</sup> An order of adjournment incidentally noting the fact of an agreement made out of Court between the parties as a ground of adjournment is not a record of the compromise.<sup>15</sup> Where the claim is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court it cannot pass a compromise decree. It can only return the plaint under O. 7 R. 10.<sup>16</sup>

18. "Shall pass a decree in accordance therewith so far as it relates to the suit." — A decree on a compromise under this rule can be passed only so far as it relates to the suit.<sup>1</sup> The question whether a particular term of a petition of compromise relates to the suit must be decided from the frame of the suit, the relief claimed and the relief allowed by the decree on adjustment by lawful agreement. The mutual connection of the different parts of the relief granted by a consent decree is an important element for consideration in each case in deciding whether any portion of the relief is within the scope of the suit. No hard and fast rule can be laid down and each case must be governed by its own facts.<sup>2</sup> Where the suit is merely for the recovery of specific properties, the compromise must relate to such properties only. But where the suit is not merely for the recovery of the property, but to establish particular rights, the facts have to be looked at as a whole to decide whether matters that do not relate to the suit have been introduced. In such cases, all terms which form the consideration for the adjustment of the matters in dispute, whether they form the subject-matter of the suit or not, become related to the suit, and can be embodied in the decree.<sup>3</sup>

Note 18

The following are instances in which the compromise was held to "relate to the suit" within the meaning of this rule —

- (1) The compromise of a suit for a money decree may provide for a charge being created on the defendant's immovable property for the payment of the amount agreed on.<sup>4</sup>

- (5) A and B, a lessee from A, sued C asserting A's title to certain land. The suit was compromised by providing that C, the defendant, should recognize the lease granted by A to B and that, in consideration for this, was to be entitled to a half-share of the rent paid by B. The compromise was held to be one relating to the suit.<sup>8</sup>

The following are instances in which the compromise was held not to "relate to the suit"—

- (1) A consent decree in a partition suit between brothers cannot deal with the rights in their mother's share after her death.<sup>10</sup>
- (2) Plaintiff claimed a certain sum with interest at nine and a half per cent. per annum. The suit was compromised by the defendant agreeing that he would pay a smaller sum within a fixed time and that on default he would pay the amount with interest at a very much higher rate. It was held that the stipulation as to the higher rate of interest did not relate to the suit.<sup>11</sup>
- (3) A suit for damages for crops misappropriated was compromised by the amount of damages being settled and also by a provision being made that the defendant should hold the land under the plaintiff at a certain rent. It was held that the agreement as to tenancy was outside the scope of the suit.<sup>12</sup>
- (4) Plaintiff sued to restrain the defendant from building a house in such a way as to interfere with the plaintiff's enjoyment of light and air. The suit was compromised by providing that the defendant should not build his house higher than it originally was and also that the defendant should not let water into the passage between the houses. The agreement as to the passage was held to be beyond the scope of the suit.<sup>13</sup>

Although it is obligatory upon a Court, under this rule, to pass a decree in terms of a compromise, after it has been recorded, it is not necessary that the decree should be passed simultaneously with the order recording the compromise. There is nothing to prevent the Court from postponing the passing of a decree in a proper case.<sup>14</sup> Also, the Court is not bound to pass a decree in the exact form which the parties propose.<sup>15</sup> Further, the decree is not vitiated merely because it does not recite verbatim the compromise.<sup>16</sup> A Court acting under this rule cannot make a declaratory decree inasmuch as, not having heard the case on the merits, the Court is not in a position to form its own opinion as to the merits of the case.<sup>17</sup> As the decree should be in accordance with the compromise, where the latter does not provide for a personal remedy, the decree also cannot grant it.<sup>18</sup> If a suit has been compromised by the original parties thereto, a third party cannot be allowed to intervene and oppose the passing of a decree on the compromise.<sup>19</sup>

19. Where compromise includes matters not relating to the suit.— It has been seen that a decree can be passed under this rule only so far as the compromise relates to the suit. But a compromise which includes matters extraneous to the suit is not unlawful<sup>1</sup> and cannot be rejected in its entirety by the Court.<sup>2</sup> Where a compromise comprises matters unconnected with the suit, the proper course for the Court is to recite the compromise as a whole in its decree or in the form of a schedule to the decree for purposes of reference but to restrict the operative part of the decree to those terms of the compromise which relate to the suit. In such a case the decree would be executable only in respect of the matters that relate to the suit.<sup>3</sup> The remaining terms of the compromise, i.e., those which are not incorporated in the operative part of the decree, may be enforced by means of a separate suit.<sup>4</sup>

Where a compromise which includes matters extraneous to the suit has been entered into on condition that it should be given effect to as a whole, the Court should not dismiss the suit,<sup>5</sup> but should permit the parties to suitably enlarge the scope of the suit by means of amendment of pleadings, so as to enable the compromise to be passed into a decree.<sup>6</sup>

As to whether, where a decree erroneously includes in the operative part of it, terms extraneous to the suit, the executing Court can refuse to execute the decree with respect to those terms and whether a separate suit lies in respect of them, see Note 27.

20. Parties to the compromise. — A compromise to which some of the parties to a suit alone are parties is not necessarily invalid<sup>1</sup> though on good cause being shown by any of the other parties, the Court has a discretion to reject such a compromise.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where a partial compromise would be prejudicial to the interests of the parties not joining it, it cannot be recognized.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, where the interests of the several parties to a suit are inseparable, it is not open to some of them alone to compromise the matter.<sup>4</sup> Thus, a suit for partition cannot be compromised by some only of the parties to it.<sup>5</sup>

A compromise between some parties alone cannot affect the position of the other parties to the suit. They are neither bound by it nor are entitled to enforce it.<sup>6</sup> In the undermentioned case,<sup>7</sup> however, it was held by the Oudh Chief Court that where certain defendants were ex parte and the Court passed an ex parte decree against them in the terms of the compromise that had been entered into between the other defendants and the plaintiff, the decree was not a nullity as against the ex parte defendants. A party is not bound by an unauthorized compromise entered into by his agent.<sup>8</sup> But a person who is suing or is being sued in a representative capacity can enter into a bona fide compromise and thereby bind the persons represented.<sup>9</sup> See also Note 23 to Order 1 Rule 8.

Where a compromise includes, as parties thereto, some persons who are not parties to the suit and the terms affecting the parties to the suit are not separable from those affecting the non-parties, the Court cannot pass a decree under this rule.<sup>10</sup> Where a consent decree between some of the parties alone is sought to be enforced in execution against the other parties to the suit who, however, are not parties to the compromise and such persons object to the execution of the decree against them on the ground that the consent decree is not binding on them, the dispute falls within Section 47 of the Code.<sup>11</sup> decree would be admissible under the provisions of the Evidence Act.<sup>3</sup> Where a suit is terminated by a compromise decree, a breach of its terms does not restore the parties to the rights which they had prior to the decree.<sup>3</sup> But a compromise decree is a creature of the agreement on which it is based and is subject to all the incidents of such agreement.<sup>4</sup> A compromise decree is but a contract with the command of a Judge superadded to it.<sup>5</sup> Hence such a decree is of no greater validity than the contract on which it is based.<sup>6</sup> It can, therefore, be set aside on any of the grounds, such as fraud, mistake, misrepresentation, etc., on which a contract may be set aside.<sup>7</sup> (See Note 28, infra). For the same reason, where a compromise decree contains any term which is in the nature of a penalty under Section 74 of the Contract Act, or of a forfeiture, it is open to the Court to grant relief against the forfeiture incurred under such penal clause.<sup>8</sup> As a minor's contract is void, a decree on a compromise with a minor is a nullity.<sup>9</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>10</sup> sub-section (1) of Section 17 which made the registration of certain types of documents obligatory. Hence, a compromise decree was held exempt from registration,<sup>1</sup> even in cases where the compromise which it embodied affected matters extraneous to the suit.<sup>2</sup> Under the Section as amended, a compromise decree comprising properties extraneous to the suit is not exempted from registration under Section 17, sub-section (2). As to whether a compromise decree requires registration in cases falling under clauses (a) and (d) of Section 17 of the Registration Act, there is a conflict of opinions, for which see the undermentioned cases.<sup>3</sup> A compromise in so far as it is not incorporated in a decree, is not exempt from registration if it is otherwise compulsorily registrable.<sup>4</sup>

A petition to the Court, which merely recites the compromise arrived at between the parties and prays for an order recording the compromise, does not come within the provisions of the Registration Act regarding compulsory registration of documents,<sup>5</sup> even though the compromise may include terms affecting matters extraneous to the suit.<sup>6</sup> Where the compromise does not transfer or declare any rights in immovable property but merely provides for the temporary management of the property, registration is not necessary.<sup>7</sup> Even where a compromise is compulsorily registrable the doctrine of part performance applies to such a compromise and where it has been acted upon, parties cannot resile from it.<sup>8</sup> (See Section 53A of the Transfer of Property Act as amended in 1930.)

When both the parties are agreed in stating that the suit has been adjusted, the Court has no option but to record the compromise. In such a case, it does not matter whether the compromise, though requiring registration under the law, was embodied in an unregistered document, because the admissions of the parties constitute in themselves the "proof" required by this rule. It is only when the matter is in dispute that the writing has to be used as evidence and the question of registration becomes material.<sup>9</sup>

26. Stamp. — A solanamah on stamped paper is not necessary for a compromise decree to be passed under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup>

27. Execution of consent decree. — A consent decree is executable in the same manner as an ordinary decree.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a consent decree providing for the execution of a document by one of the parties may be enforced under O. 21 R. 34.<sup>2</sup> But where the decree is incapable of execution, as for instance, where it merely creates a charge on property and does not confer the power of sale, a separate suit is necessary to enforce the right created by the decree.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, a decree can be executed only in respect of the terms included in the operative part thereof. Hence, where certain terms of a compromise are not included in the operative part of a decree as being concerned with matters extraneous to the suit, such terms cannot be enforced in execution.<sup>4</sup>

With regard to the power of an executing Court to go behind a consent decree, the question has arisen with reference to three matters as noted below —

(1) Where the decree gives effect to an unlawful compromise. — In such a case, the executing Court is entitled and bound to refuse to execute the decree.<sup>5</sup>

(2) Where the operative part of the decree gives effect to terms of a compromise which do not relate to the suit. — On this question there is a conflict of decisions. On the one hand, it has been held by the High Courts of Madras,<sup>6</sup> Allahabad,<sup>7</sup> Lahore<sup>8</sup> and Patna<sup>9</sup> and by the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>10</sup> that the executing Court cannot refuse to execute the decree in such a case. The reason, according to the Madras High Court, is that an objection to the decree cannot be allowed to be raised in the executing Court but must be taken by way of appeal.<sup>11</sup> The High Court of Calcutta,<sup>12</sup> on the other hand, has held that such a decree is inoperative and invalid and cannot be executed in so far as it gives effect to the terms of a compromise not relating to the suit. The High Court of Bombay seems to take the latter view.<sup>13</sup>

(3) Where the decree contains any provision in the nature of a penalty. — A compromise decree being of no greater validity than the contract on which it is based, an executing Court can, in the exercise of its equitable jurisdiction, relieve against any forfeiture incurred under any penal clause in a consent decree.<sup>14</sup>

It follows from the differences in views noted above that in respect of the terms of a consent decree which do not relate to the suit, a separate suit, according to the Calcutta High Court, can be brought on the contract;<sup>15</sup> while according to the Allahabad High Court, the question in such a case is one relating to execution and hence a fresh suit is barred under S. 47 of the Code.<sup>16</sup> Where, however, any terms of a compromise are not embodied in the operative part of a decree, the bar of S. 47 cannot apply to a suit to enforce such terms and such a suit will therefore lie.<sup>17</sup>

Where a consent decree orders the sale of any property, it can be executed and the property can be sold without the formality of an attachment.<sup>18</sup> Similarly, a consent decree in a mortgage suit can be executed without any final decree being passed (unlike the case of an ordinary preliminary decree on the mortgage).<sup>19</sup>

28. Mode and effect of setting aside compromise decrees. — No appeal lies from a consent decree: see Section 96 (3) and Note 31 below. But an appeal lies from an order recording a compromise [O. 43 R. 1 (m)] and when such an order is set aside, the decree based on it also falls to the ground: see Note 31 infra. Apart from this, the two usual methods of setting aside a consent decree are (a) by suit and (b) by review.<sup>1</sup> These two remedies are cumulative and not alternative, so that failure in an application for review is no bar to a suit to set aside the decree.<sup>2</sup>

A consent decree being only the contract between the parties with a command of a Judge superadded to it, a suit lies to set aside the consent decree on any of the grounds on which the contract can be set aside, such as fraud, mistake, etc.<sup>3</sup> In appropriate cases, a compromise decree may be set aside by means of an application under O. 9 R. 13. Thus, when such a decree is attacked on the ground that the compromise was not actually entered into by the defendants, that they were not duly served and that they were not present or represented at the trial, an application under O. 9 R. 13 is a proper remedy to set aside the compromise decree.<sup>4</sup>

But a consent decree cannot be set aside by rule on motion,<sup>5</sup> or by an application under Section 151.<sup>6</sup>

O. 23 R. 3
Notes 28-31

An interlocutory consent order can be set aside by application in the same suit.<sup>7</sup>

Parties cannot rescind a consent decree as an ordinary contract by mutual agreement.<sup>8</sup> So a consent decree cannot be varied by consent of parties.<sup>9</sup>

Where, by a mistake, the Court passes a decree which purports to be in accordance with the terms of the compromise between the parties, but is not actually in accordance with such terms, it has got power under Section 151 to correct its mistake and amend the decree so as to be in accordance with the agreement of the parties.<sup>10</sup>

When a compromise decree is set aside, both the parties are restored to their original rights in the former suit when the compromise was effected and the suit can be proceeded with from that stage.<sup>11</sup>

Ignorance of real facts, when it was within the party's power to know them,<sup>12</sup> or a mistake or ignorance of law<sup>13</sup> is no ground for setting aside a compromise decree. A compromise decree cannot be set aside on the ground of the defendant's absence at the time when the compromise was recorded by the Court.<sup>14</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>15</sup>

29. Compromise of appeal. — The present rule applies also to appeals and an Appellate Court can pass a compromise decree if the appeal is compromised.<sup>1</sup>

30. Compromise of execution proceedings. — See Rule 4 infra.

31. Appeal. — See also Note 15 to Section 96 ante, for a full discussion.

been passed on the compromise.<sup>2</sup> The High Court of Bombay<sup>3</sup> has held that where an order under this rule is made with the consent of the parties in the trial Court, there can be no appeal against the order under O. 43 R. 1. The reason is that there is no material before the Court on which a decision can be come to. The Madras High Court<sup>4</sup> has, however, dissented from this view and held that an appeal will lie against an order recording a compromise, whether such order has been passed after contest or not. It has been held by the High Court of Lahore<sup>5</sup> that that rule applies only where a compromise was actually made but the Court for some reason has refused to record it, and not where it has been found that there has been no compromise at all. The Allahabad High Court has taken a contrary view.<sup>6</sup>

32. Revision. — Although under this rule a Court has power only to record a "lawful" compromise, yet, where it requires evidence to be given of an illegal compromise, its order is not open to revision as such order is not likely to cause irreparable injury.<sup>1</sup> It has been held by the Allahabad High Court<sup>2</sup> that no revision will lie against a decree on a compromise on the ground that the Court omitted to order the recording of the compromise.

1. History of the Rule.—There was no provision in the old Code corresponding to the present rule. Hence, there was a conflict of decisions as to whether, by virtue of Section 647 (now Section 141) the provisions of this Order could be applied to proceedings in execution, some cases holding that they could be so applied<sup>1</sup> and others holding that they could not.<sup>2</sup> This conflict was set at rest by Act VI of 1892 which introduced Section 375A into the Code, by which the provisions of the Chapter were declared inapplicable to proceedings after the passing of the decree. In 1894 the Privy Council in I. L. R. 17 Allahabad 106<sup>3</sup> decided that irrespective of the changes made by Act VI of 1892, Section 647 (now Section 141) had not the effect of making the provisions of the Code relating to withdrawal and adjustment of suits applicable to execution proceedings. The present rule states in explicit terms that Order 23 does not apply to execution proceedings.<sup>4</sup> For fuller information, see Notes under Section 141.

2. Effect of the Rule. — Order 23 Rule 1 relating to withdrawal and abandonment of a suit does not apply to execution proceedings. But a decree-holder may apply to have his application for execution dismissed.<sup>1</sup> The Court has no power to allow an application for execution to be withdrawn with liberty of bringing a fresh application.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, the withdrawal of an application for execution without the Court's permission to bring a fresh application is no bar to a fresh application for execution.<sup>3</sup> Order 23 Rule 3 does not apply to execution proceedings and the Court has no power to pass a consent order in such proceedings.<sup>4</sup> Order 21 Rule 2 and Section 47 provide a complete procedure for the adjustment of decrees out of Court.<sup>5</sup> Where a decree leaves the amount of mesne profits to be ascertained in further proceedings, the suit being undisposed of, the parties can enter into a compromise pending the proceedings for the ascertainment of mesne profits.<sup>6</sup> But it has been held by the Rangoon High Court<sup>7</sup> that an agreement between a mortgagor and mortgagee after preliminary decree for sale and before the final decree for sale, whereby the mortgagor is to be given an extension of time for the payment of decretal amount, falls within O. 21 R. 2 and not under this rule. The High Courts of Patna<sup>8</sup> and Lahore<sup>9</sup> hold that an application to set aside an execution sale, under O. 21 R. 90, is not a proceeding in execution and hence O. 23 R. 3 applies to such application. According to the Bombay High Court,<sup>10</sup> where a preliminary decree is passed in a suit for partnership accounts and an enquiry is pending before the commissioner for taking the accounts, the parties can enter into a compromise, as the proceedings before the commissioner are not proceedings in execution.

Note 2

Whatever its other effects may be, Rule 4 does not in any way affect the rule of estoppel.<sup>11</sup> Thus, where an application for execution is allowed to be dismissed on the basis of a compromise which provides for a fresh application if the compromise was not carried out and the compromise is broken, the defendant is estopped from contending that as O. 23 R. 3 does not apply to applications for execution, the decree-holder cannot file a fresh application for execution as on the basis of the compromise.<sup>12</sup>

A pre-decree arrangement concerning the execution of the decree cannot be set up in bar of execution in the executing Court. But it can be enforced by means of a separate suit.<sup>13</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule deals with payments into Court in satisfaction of a claim after the institution of a suit and before decree.<sup>1</sup> Payments made after decree are dealt with by O. 21 R. 1. This rule does not apply to payments made into Court under Section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, before the institution of the suit,<sup>2</sup> nor to payments made in pursuance of the order of the Court under the provisions of O. 9 R. 13 setting aside an ex parte decree.<sup>3</sup>

The rule contemplates an unconditional deposit of a sum of money in Court by the defendant.<sup>4</sup> This is contrary to the corresponding English Rules of the Supreme Court (O. 22 Rules 1 and 6), whereunder a deposit may be made coupled with a denial of liability.

2. Payment into Court. — A mere expression of willingness to pay made in a written statement is not equivalent to a payment into Court<sup>1</sup> nor, it is conceived, will a payment into a post office by a money order be a valid payment under this rule unless and until it reaches the Court's hands.<sup>2</sup> But a payment into Government treasury under rules framed by the High Court will be a payment into Court.<sup>3</sup> Where moneys in the hands of the defendant were sought to be attached before judgment, and the defendant deposited the same into Court and the attachment was subsequently found not to have been validly made, the money deposited was construed to be a payment under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

3. Suit to recover debt or damages. — The rule applies to all suits to recover a debt or damages, though there may be other reliefs claimed in the suit.<sup>1</sup> It does not apply to a suit for a return of goods taken or their value.<sup>2</sup>

4. Suit for injunction. — A suit for injunction for obstruction to light and air is not a suit to recover a debt or damages within the meaning of this rule, even though the Court may, in a proper case, allow damages in lieu of injunction. According to the practice of the High Court of Bombay, however, where a defendant deposits money into a Court in a suit for injunction in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim and the Court allows damages in lieu of injunction to the extent of the amount deposited, the Court should apply the provisions of Rule 4 in directing the payment of costs.<sup>1</sup>

5. Suits for accounts. — The rule does not apply to suits for accounts.<sup>1</sup> But the Court has, in such suits, the power to direct the payment into Court of admitted sums in the possession of parties liable to account, or of persons in a fiduciary capacity; such a power is not, in any way, controlled by this rule.<sup>2</sup>

6. "At any stage of the suit." — These words show that the payment must be made before decree.<sup>1</sup> Note also the words "in full of the claim."

7. Insolvency of defendant after payment into Court. — According to English law where the defendant pays money into Court admitting liability to the plaintiff and then becomes a bankrupt, the plaintiff is secured creditor in respect of such amount. When the liability is denied, he is a secured creditor to the extent to which the claim is admitted or proved.<sup>1</sup>

R. 2. [S. 377.] Notice of the deposit shall be given through the Court by the defendant to the plaintiff, and the amount of the deposit shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be paid to the plaintiff on his application.

Synopsis

1. Form of the notice. | 2. "Unless the Court otherwise directs."

1. Form of the notice. — The words "in writing" which occurred in the old Code have been omitted as unnecessary in view of Section 142 of the present Code under which all notices under the Code should be in writing.

Where the deposit made is on the challenge of the plaintiff and in the presence of the plaintiff, a separate notice is not necessary.<sup>1</sup>

For form of notice, see Appendix H, Form No. 3.

2. "Unless the Court otherwise directs." — The Court has a discretion under this rule to refuse to allow the plaintiff to withdraw the money deposited in Court, but such discretion must be exercised reasonably. "In a case where the money sued for is due on a promissory note, it would be unreasonable, in the absence of special circumstances, not to allow the plaintiff to take the money out."<sup>1</sup> But where the amount in deposit is claimed by different parties, no party can, without an order of the Court, withdraw the amount.<sup>2</sup> The money deposited to the credit of the plaintiff but not withdrawn by him should not be treated as the defendant's money and paid over to the person who attaches the same in execution of his decree against the defendant.<sup>3</sup>

It is the practice of the Court to appropriate payment upon a bond first to the interest due, and then to the principal.<sup>4</sup>

R. 3. [S. 378.] No interest shall be allowed to the plaintiff on any sum deposited by the defendant from the date of the receipt of such notice, whether the sum deposited is in full of the claim or

Where the defendant deposits the amount in Court but stipulates that it should not be paid to the plaintiff until the termination of the trial, this rule does not apply and the plaintiff is entitled to interest even after the deposit.<sup>2</sup>

2. Tender without payment. — The general rule is that a creditor is not bound to accept a sum tendered which is less than what is due to him.<sup>1</sup> This rule provides an exception to the general rule in that interest ceases to run on the deposit, whether such deposit is in full satisfaction of the claim or falls short thereof. But the plea of tender before action must, in order to stop interest, be accompanied by a payment into Court after the suit; otherwise the tender is ineffectual.<sup>2</sup> Where the defendant was restrained by an order of injunction not to pay the amount due by him on a bond to the plaintiff, but the Court ordered him to deposit the amount in Court and he did not do so, he was held bound to pay interest from the date of the order.<sup>3</sup> A deposit in Court before the due date, of money due upon a bond is not a valid tender of the debt;<sup>4</sup> nor is a mere offer to pay the amount a valid tender.<sup>5</sup> A valid tender, if improperly refused, stops interest.<sup>6</sup>

As to the effect of a tender made to one of two joint promisees, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup>

3. Execution proceedings. — This Order does not apply to proceedings in execution.<sup>1</sup> But the benefit of this rule has been extended by way of analogy to judgment-debtors and as a result, a decree-holder, who might have, but has not, drawn the amount immediately after its deposit will be disallowed interest, even though the amount deposited is not the full amount due under the decree.<sup>2</sup>

(a) A owes B Rs. 100. B sues A for the amount, having made no demand for payment and having no reason to believe that the delay caused by making a demand would place him at a disadvantage. On the plaint being filed, A pays the money into Court. B accepts it in full satisfaction of his claim, but the Court should not allow him any costs, the litigation being presumably groundless on his part.

(b) B sues A under the circumstances mentioned in illustration (a). On the plaint being filed, A disputes the claim. Afterwards A pays the money into Court. B accepts it in full satisfaction of his claim. The Court should also give B his costs of suits, A's conduct having shown that the litigation was necessary.

(c) A owes B Rs. 100, and is willing to pay him that sum without suit. B claims Rs. 150 and sues A for that amount. On the plaint being filed A pays Rs. 100 into Court and disputes only his liability to pay the remaining Rs. 50. B accepts the Rs. 100 in full satisfaction of his claim. The Court should order him to pay A's costs.

1. "May prosecute his suit for the balance." | 2. Apportionment of costs.

1. "May prosecute his suit for the balance." — Where the plaintiff accepts the payment only in part satisfaction of his claim, he is entitled under this rule to prosecute the suit for the balance.

2. Apportionment of costs. — The Court has a discretion under this rule in awarding costs<sup>1</sup> and, in exercising such discretion, the Court ought to find which of the parties is most to blame for the litigation.<sup>2</sup> Where, at the settlement of issues, the defendant paid the amount into Court which plaintiff took out in part satisfaction and raised an issue as to damages and subsequently the plaintiff withdrew the suit accepting the same in full satisfaction of his claim, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to his costs upto the settlement of the issues.<sup>3</sup> Where the suit is not one "to recover a debt or damages" within the meaning of this rule, the Court has full discretion to apportion costs under Section 35 of the Code.<sup>4</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> it was held that the principles of this rule applied to a suit for injunction and damages in respect of an infringement of a registered design.

SECURITY FOR COSTS

R. 1. [Ss. 380, 382.] (1) Where, at any stage of a suit, it O. 25 R. 1

When security for costs

appears to the Court that a sole plaintiff<sup>11</sup> is, or (when there are more plaintiffs than one) that all the plaintiffs are residing out of British India, and that such plaintiff does not, or that no one of such plaintiffs does, possess any sufficient immoveable property within British India other than the property in suit, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any defendant, order the plaintiff or plaintiffs, within a time fixed by it, to give security for the payment of all costs incurred and likely to be incurred by any defendant.

(2) Whoever leaves British India under such circumstances Residence out of British India. as to afford reasonable probability that he will not be forthcoming whenever he may be called upon to pay costs shall be deemed to be residing out of British India within the meaning of sub-rule (1).

(3) On the application of any defendant in a suit for the payment of money, in which the plaintiff is a woman, the Court may at any stage of the suit make a like order if it is satisfied that such plaintiff does not possess any sufficient immoveable property within British India.

Local Amendments

1. Scope, object and applicability of the Rule. — This rule provides for the taking of security for the costs of the suit and O. 41 R. 10 provides for the taking of security for the costs of the appeal. Security for costs of the suit may, under this rule, be ordered to be given in the following cases —

O. 25 R. 1
Notes 1-2

- (1) Where the sole plaintiff is, or where there are more plaintiffs than one, all the plaintiffs are, residing outside British India and none of them has sufficient immovable property in British India other than the property in suit.
- (2) Where, in a suit for money, the plaintiff is a woman and she does not possess sufficient immovable property in British India.

"The object of the Section clearly is to provide for the protection of defendants in certain cases, where, in the event of success, they may have difficulty in realising their costs . . . . But there are cases in which the plaintiff in a suit for money (the claim being real and open to no objection) cannot be rendered liable for the defendant's costs of suit. In illustration I may refer to an administration suit by a creditor or legatee where the claim is admitted, or to a suit on a mortgage or promissory note where there is no defence. Is it to be supposed that it was intended that the defendant, in such cases should be in a position to ask as a matter of absolute right that security may be given for costs that he may choose to incur needlessly?"

And his Lordship held that no security should be demanded in such cases, even though the plaintiff is a woman having no sufficient immovable property within British India. See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup>

The provisions of the rule are wide enough to cover the case of every plaintiff, including a minor plaintiff<sup>3</sup> and will apply even though the defendant is himself a resident outside British India.<sup>4</sup> In the case of a pauper plaintiff, however, no security should be ordered to be furnished except in exceptional circumstances, inasmuch as it virtually deprives the plaintiff of the benefit of the order made in his favour under Order 33 of the Code.<sup>5</sup> As to when security for costs can be demanded from infants, see Note 8 below.

The rule does not apply to a reference under the Revenue Jurisdiction Act as there is no suit before the Court.<sup>6</sup> Irrespective of this rule, the High Court may, by Section 26 (3) of the Indian Patents and Designs Act, II of 1911, demand security for the costs to be incurred by the opposite party, from the person applying for the revocation of a patent, in proceedings under that Act.<sup>7</sup>

2. Residence outside British India. — "Residence" should be residence under such circumstances as will afford reasonable probability that the plaintiff will be forthcoming when the suit is decided.<sup>1</sup> A more temporary residence at the time of the suit is not "residence" within the meaning of this rule.<sup>2</sup> Thus, a resident of a Native State temporarily staying in British India for the purpose of legal proceedings to get his wife back from the person who had enticed her cannot be said to be "residing" in British India.<sup>3</sup> But where a subject of Bhopal, a Native State, was living for four years at Poona and there was nothing to show that he had come to Poona on a mere

4. Trading corporations. — Trading corporations comprise —

- (a) chartered companies,
- (b) companies incorporated by special Acts of Parliament, such as railway companies and the like including joint stock companies incorporated under special Acts, and
- (c) companies incorporated under the Companies Act.<sup>1</sup>

A trading corporation ought to have a place of foundation. It may have more than one residence. But it "dwells" at the place where it carries on its general administrative business and not where it carries on even a considerable part of its other businesses.<sup>2</sup> See Note 3 to Section 20.

5. Immovable property. — See Note 4 to Section 16, ante.

A beneficial interest in a part of the surplus income derived from immovable property cannot be said to be immovable property.<sup>1</sup> But a lease is a transfer of an interest in immovable property and a leasehold interest is therefore itself immovable property within the meaning of this rule.<sup>2</sup>

6. "The Court may . . . order." — The Court has a discretion under this rule to require or not, security for costs from the plaintiff.<sup>3</sup> There is no rigid rule for the exercise of such discretion, but the Court will not ordinarily make an order for security, unless it is shown that the exercise of power is necessary for the reasonable protection of the interests of the defendant.<sup>3</sup> The order should be in the Judge's own handwriting<sup>3</sup> and should contain reasons for ordering such security.<sup>4</sup> No specific sum need, however, be mentioned in the order, for which security should be granted.<sup>5</sup> A defendant asking that security may be taken from the plaintiff under this rule should not be guilty of delay in making the application.<sup>6</sup> He should supply full information on all necessary points.<sup>7</sup>

An order for security will not be made before the defence has been filed<sup>8</sup> or after the judgment has been passed.<sup>9</sup>

7. Poverty of plaintiff. — The mere poverty or insolvency of the plaintiff is not a sufficient ground for ordering him to give security for costs as a condition precedent to his going on with the suit.<sup>1</sup> "The general rule is," said Bowen, L. J., in Cowell v. Taylor,<sup>2</sup> "that poverty is no bar to a litigant; that, from time immemorial, has been the rule at common law, and also, I believe, in equity." There is, however, an exception to this rule introduced for the purpose of preventing abuse, that is, if an insolvent sues as nominal plaintiff for the benefit of somebody else, he must give security; in that case the nominal plaintiff is a mere shadow.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where A, an undischarged bankrupt, and his daughter B sued C for damages for breach of promise of marriage and it was contended by C that the suit was brought really for the purpose of benefiting A out of his daughter's engagement and that the daughter B had no property within British India, it was held that an order for security should be made against A.<sup>4</sup> But an insolvent plaintiff who is bound to hand over the fruits of his suit to the Official Assignee cannot be said to be a nominal plaintiff,<sup>5</sup> especially if the insolvent is also to benefit himself by the result of the suit as, for instance, where the suit is in respect of a sum earned by him subsequent to his adjudication and the amount claimed is in excess of the amount of his debt provable in insolvency.<sup>6</sup>

8. Where plaintiff is a minor. — As has been seen already in Note 1 ante, the rule applies to all plaintiffs including minors. But, save in exceptional circumstances, neither a minor nor his next friend should be called upon to give security for costs.<sup>1</sup> A suit on behalf of a minor plaintiff should not be stopped merely on the ground that the next friend is unable to give security for costs. The other parties are sufficiently protected by the power they have in a proper case of moving the Court either to stay the suit as not being for the benefit of the minor or if there is a just cause other than the poverty of the next friend to have him removed.<sup>2</sup>

process can be called upon to give security<sup>1</sup> and this sub-rule has been enacted in view of the provisions of Section 56 of the Code which provide that a woman is exempted from arrest in execution of a decree.<sup>2</sup> The Court has, however, a discretion in the matter and the principle to be adopted in the exercise of such discretion has been thus stated by Mr. Justice Davar in Sonabai v. Tribhuvandas<sup>3</sup>: "I have always been most averse to making orders against women for depositing security for the defendant's costs when I find that such an order would embarrass them and hamper them in the conduct of their cases. In the case of poor women, such an order amounts to a denial of justice to them. Unless the suit is on the face of it vexatious, or is one which I feel is filed merely for the harassment of the defendant, I do not make an order against a woman plaintiff for security for defendant's costs — when she says she is not in a position to give such security and I believe her statement." This principle was approved in a later case<sup>4</sup> by the same High Court though it was recognized that "the discretion given by the rule is one of the most difficult that a Court can be called upon to exercise." In no case will a Court order a female plaintiff to give security unless grounds are made out tending to show that the defence is true.<sup>5</sup>

A suit in which there are male and female plaintiffs, cannot properly be described as a "suit in which the plaintiff is a woman."<sup>6</sup>

10. Where leave has been granted to sue as a pauper. — There is a conflict of opinions as to whether security can be ordered against a plaintiff who has been allowed to sue in forma pauperis. On the one hand, it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta<sup>1</sup> that this rule does not apply to such cases and that the Court has no power to order security against a plaintiff suing in forma pauperis, the reason being that to do so would be to render the leave granted under O. 33 R. 8 nugatory. The High Court of Bombay<sup>2</sup> has held that where an order is made against the plaintiff for security for costs and subsequently he is granted leave to sue as a pauper, the order as to security ceases to operate, provided the leave is granted before the time limited for giving security has expired. On the other hand, it has been held by the High Courts of Lahore,<sup>3</sup> Madras<sup>4</sup> and Rangoon<sup>5</sup> that the rule is wide enough to cover the case of a pauper plaintiff also, though, as a rule, very special grounds must be shown for granting an order for security for costs against him.

11. Inherent power to order security for costs. — There is a difference of opinion on the question whether, apart from the provisions of this rule, the Court can order security for costs against a plaintiff. It has been held in the undermentioned cases<sup>1</sup> that the Court has such power to act in proper cases, as for example, where the plaintiff suing is not the real plaintiff but a mere puppet in the hands of others. A contrary view has however been expressed by Cuming, J., in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> to the effect that the Court has no inherent power to order security for costs apart from the provisions of this rule.

12. "Suit for the payment of money" — Sub-rule (3). — A suit which, though not exclusively for money, will result in a decree for money on the relief sought, is a "suit for the payment of money" within the meaning of this rule.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a suit to recover possession of certain ornaments and other moveable properties, or in the alternative to obtain a decree for their value is a "suit for the payment of money."<sup>2</sup> Similarly, a suit by an actress for damages for wrongful dismissal<sup>3</sup> or a suit on which a claim is made for a share in a partnership business<sup>4</sup> is a "suit for the payment of money." But the main claim in the suit must be one for money, the other reliefs being only incidental. A suit for dissolution of partnership and accounts and for the recovery of stridhanam property<sup>5</sup> or a suit for the administration of an estate consisting largely of immovable property and in which it may ultimately be necessary to sell the estate and distribute the proceeds in money,<sup>6</sup> is not a "suit for the payment of money" within this rule.

13. Claim and cross-claim. — A defendant cannot as a general rule be ordered to give security for costs<sup>1</sup> inasmuch as he is a person compelled to litigate and take proceedings in defence of the claim.<sup>2</sup> But where there is a claim and a counter-claim the position is different. The substantial position of the parties will have to be taken into consideration.<sup>3</sup> If the claim and the cross-claim arise out of one subject-matter a defendant setting up a cross-claim will not be ordered to give security.<sup>4</sup> If, however, the cross-claim is in respect of a matter wholly distinct from the claim, an order for security may be made.<sup>5</sup> In other words, if the counter-claim is really in the nature of a cross-action, a defendant out of jurisdiction will as a rule be required to furnish security for costs;<sup>6</sup> but if a cross-claim arising out of the same subject-matter is, in substance, the defence to the claim, the Court has a discretion to refuse to order such defendant to give security.<sup>7</sup>

14. Appeal.—No appeal lies under the Code from an order under this rule. It is, however, appealable under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent as a "judgment."<sup>1</sup> Where the plaintiff deposits in Court security for costs and ultimately the suit is decreed in his favour, the defendant appealing against the decree is not entitled to an order for detaining in Court, the money deposited by the plaintiff, pending the appeal.<sup>2</sup>

15. Revision. — A Court will be acting “illegally” in the exercise of its jurisdiction in ordering security for costs in a case to which this rule does not apply, as where it orders security for costs in an administration suit which is not a “suit for the payment of money” within this rule.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, it will be acting with “material irregularity” in the exercise of its jurisdiction if it orders security for costs against a plaintiff suing as a pauper, in the absence of exceptional circumstances.<sup>2</sup> In such cases, therefore, a revision will lie against the orders so passed. See also the undermentioned case.<sup>3</sup>

17. Liability of a person standing surety. — A was surety for costs for B, and the surety bond provided that if B failed to obey the order of the Court, the property of A would be liable, and that if the property proved insufficient, A would be personally liable. There was no provision for the principal debtor being proceeded against in the first instance. It was held that a failure to execute the decree against B in the first instance did not amount to a release of the surety's liability.<sup>1</sup>

18. Enforcement of security bonds given under this Rule. — The proper mode of enforcing a surety bond given under this rule is the one indicated in Section 145 (c) of the Code. For decisions under the old Code, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

After Rule 2, add the following new Rule 3 :

(Nagpur)

"3. (1) Where any plaintiff has, for the purpose of being financed in the suit, transferred or agreed to transfer any share or interest in the property in suit to a person who is not already a party to the suit, the Court may order such person to be made a plaintiff to the suit if he consents, and may either of its own motion or on the application of any defendant order such person, within a time to be fixed by it, to give security for the payment of all costs incurred and likely to be incurred by any defendant. In the event of such security not being furnished within the time fixed, the Court may make an order dismissing the suit so far as his right to, or interest in, the property in suit is concerned or declaring that he shall be debarred from claiming any right to, or interest in, the property in suit.

(2) If such person declines to be made a plaintiff the Court may implead him as a defendant and may order him, within a time to be fixed by it, to give security for the payment of all costs incurred and likely to be incurred by any other defendant. In the event of such security not being furnished within the time fixed, the Court may make an order declaring that he shall be debarred from claiming any right to, or interest in, the property in suit.

Note 2

2. "May in any suit issue." — The general trend of opinion is that the issue of a commission is a matter of judicial discretion.<sup>1</sup> The High Court of Madras, has, however, held in the undermentioned cases<sup>2</sup> that the word "may" must be read as equivalent to "is given authority to" and that a commission should issue as a matter of right unless the application for commission amounts to an abuse of the process of the Court. As a general rule, an application will not be granted unless —

- (1) the application is made bona fide,
- (2) the issue in respect of which the evidence is required is one which the Court ought to try,
- (3) the witness to be examined would give evidence material to the issue, and,
- (4) there are some good reasons why the witness cannot be examined in Court.<sup>3</sup>

But the Court has not the absolute discretion or inherent power to issue a commission except when authorized by the provisions of the Code; nor, according to the general trend of opinion, is the Court bound to issue a commission simply because all the conditions laid down in the rule exist. Where the examination on commission may result in manifest injustice to any party, or where it is not calculated to permit of the evidence being tested fairly, or when the application is made to avoid cross-examination before the Court, the Court is not bound to issue a commission.<sup>4</sup> The difference between the examination of a witness on commission and a viva voce examination in open Court is so greatly to the disadvantage, almost invariably, of the opposite party that the Court should very jealously inquire, in every case, into the reason for the commission.<sup>5</sup> The question is, whether the Courts can be said to have acted with jurisdiction in taking away from a litigant the right which he undoubtedly has of having the witness brought before the Court in accordance with the normal procedure.<sup>6</sup> Regard must always be had to the possibility of the witness not being a credible witness in which case the opportunity of noting his demeanour<sup>7</sup> and of hearing the exact and precise answers given by him would be lost.<sup>8</sup> This is specially so in a case where a party accused of fraud seeks to examine himself on commission.<sup>9</sup>

The fact that the witness sought to be examined is interested, or that the case of the party asking for the issue of the commission is improbable<sup>10</sup> or that the Judge thinks that no useful end would be attained by the evidence<sup>11</sup> is, however, no ground per se for refusing to issue a commission. See also the undermentioned case.<sup>12</sup>

As a matter of practice, notice ought to be given to the opposite party before ordering a commission.<sup>13</sup>

3. "Who is exempted under this Code." — Section 132 of the Code recognizes the right of pardanashin ladies who according to their custom can claim the privilege of being examined on commission.<sup>1</sup> The fact that an allegation of immorality is made against such a lady<sup>2</sup> or that she had appeared on a former occasion in public<sup>3</sup> or in Court,<sup>4</sup> is no ground for refusing to issue a commission. In the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> a commission was issued even though the lady was old and had entirely abandoned the purdah.

But where no custom of not appearing in public is made out,<sup>6</sup> or the custom alleged is of a varying and uncertain character,<sup>7</sup> the Court will not issue a commission. A pardanashin lady is not entitled to decline to be examined on commission at any place other than that of her choice.<sup>8</sup>

A religious preceptor is not entitled to be examined on commission on the ground of his social status.<sup>9</sup>

4. "Who is from sickness or infirmity unable to attend." — In the case of persons who, owing to illness, are unable to attend the Court, a commission ought not to be refused.<sup>1</sup> If sickness or infirmity is alleged, the Court will, of course, have to take into account the character and gravity of the sickness and the risk consequent upon the refusal to issue a commission.<sup>2</sup> Infancy, however, is not a ground for the issue of a commission.<sup>3</sup>

5. Procedure where evidence is taken on commission. — It is the duty of the party obtaining the commission to take all such steps as are necessary to secure the attendance of the witnesses before the commissioner.<sup>1</sup> The examination is on the same footing as that in Court<sup>2</sup> and the opposite party is entitled to cross-examine the witnesses,<sup>3</sup> though where the cross-examination is unnecessarily prolonged or amounts to an abuse of process, the Court can fix a time limit and order the cross-examination to be finished.<sup>4</sup> But the commissioner has no power to disallow questions and give rulings as to points about admissibility of evidence.<sup>5</sup>

Where a Court issues a commission for the examination of a person by written interrogatories on behalf of a party, the opposite party is entitled to insist upon an opportunity being given to him to cross-examine the witness orally and the Court would be acting without jurisdiction if it orders such party to file cross-interrogatories.<sup>6</sup> Where the commission is for examining a witness on interrogatories, the party is entitled to a copy of the cross-interrogatories filed by the opposite party.<sup>7</sup>

6. Arbitration. — Where a case is referred to arbitration under Schedule II (Section 506 of the old Code), it is competent to the Court to issue a commission under this rule as the suit is still before the Court.<sup>1</sup> But the Court has no power either under Section 75 or under this rule to issue a commission for examination in the case of private arbitration. The consent of parties cannot confer such power nor can the Court issue a commission in such a case under its inherent powers.<sup>2</sup>

7. Appeal. — An order under this rule is not appealable under O. 43 R. 1 or Section 104. Nor is an order directing the issue of a commission a "judgment" within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent.<sup>1</sup> The issue of a commission being a matter of discretion, neither the High Court nor the Privy Council will interfere in appeal with an order made in the proper exercise of the discretion.<sup>2</sup>

8. Revision. — An order made under this rule in the exercise of discretion cannot be interfered with in revision<sup>1</sup> unless there has been a wanton abuse of the process of the Court.<sup>2</sup>

In some decisions it has been held that such an order does not amount to a "case decided" within the meaning of Section 115 and hence is not revisable,<sup>3</sup> while the contrary view has been held in the undermentioned decision.<sup>4</sup> See also Note 5 to Section 115.

2. Deputy Collector, if can delegate an officer of his Court to take evidence on commission.

1. Scope of the Rule. — The rule contemplates the issue of a commission to any person for examining a witness or a party residing within its local limits.

But the failure to issue the commission to the commissioner will not invalidate the examination actually held by him pursuant to the order of the Court; the omission to actually issue the commission is only an irregularity which, if not objected to before the examination commences, will be deemed to have been waived.<sup>1</sup>

2. Deputy Collector, if can delegate an officer of his Court to take evidence on commission. — A Deputy Collector is competent to depute an officer of his Court to examine a witness on commission, provided the place where the witness is sought to be examined is within his jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup>

Persons for whose examination commission may issue.

R. 4. [S. 386.] (1) Any Court may in any suit issue a commission for the examination of —

- (a) any person resident beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction ;
- (b) any person who is about to leave such limits before the date on which he is required to be examined in Court ; and
- (c) any person in the service of the Crown who cannot, in the opinion of the Court, attend without detriment to the public service.

(2) Such commission may be issued to any Court, not being a High Court, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person resides, or to any pleader or other person whom the Court issuing the commission may appoint.

(3) The Court on issuing any commission under this rule shall direct whether the commission shall be returned to itself or to any subordinate Court.

1. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — The power of the Court is not more restricted under this rule than under Rule 1.<sup>1</sup> A party is entitled to the issue of a commission if it is clear that the witness is residing outside the jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>2</sup> It is not for the Court, as has already been pointed out in Rule 1, to decide whether the party will be benefited or not, as it is a matter entirely for the party.<sup>3</sup>

Where a commission is issued to a Court it should be addressed to the Court of first instance within the limits of whose jurisdiction the witness resides.<sup>4</sup>

O. 26 R. 4
Notes 1-4

2. "May issue." — As has been seen in Note 2 to Rule 1 ante, the word "may" in this rule as well as in Rule 1 has been construed in the undermentioned decisions<sup>1</sup> of the Madras High Court to mean "is given authority to," and the issue of a commission is a matter of statutory right. But according to the general trend of opinion, the Court has a discretion to grant or refuse a commission.<sup>2</sup> The discretion must, however, be exercised judicially.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 2 to Order 26 Rule 1, supra.

3. Plaintiff asking his evidence to be taken on commission. — The general and accepted rule is that the evidence of a plaintiff in a case ought not to be taken on commission except for very strong reasons.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the plaintiff has had a choice of the forum, and having chosen to institute his suit in a particular Court, he cannot ask for his examination elsewhere.<sup>2</sup>

4. Defendant asking his evidence to be taken on commission. — "But the case is entirely different," observed Mr. Justice Chitty in Ross v. Woodford, (1894) 1 Ch. D. 38, "when it is the defendant's application, and particularly that of a defendant lawfully resident out of the jurisdiction, according to the ordinary course of his life and business : and to compel these defendants to come over here at great expense to attend the trial, or give up their case would be oppressive and unfair, and in my opinion it would be wrong to apply to the case of a defendant the principles that are applicable to the case of a plaintiff asking for a commission to examine himself."<sup>1</sup> Thus, where a suit was instituted in Cuttack against a defendant residing at Colombo, a commission was issued for the defendant's examination at Colombo on the ground that it would be obviously unfair to compel him to come to Cuttack or practically give up his defence.<sup>2</sup>

6. Second commission on failure of the first. — If the first commission fails for no fault of the party, a second commission can be issued.<sup>1</sup> See also Rule 10 infra.

7. Appeal. — A Full Bench of the High Court of Madras<sup>1</sup> overruling two earlier decisions<sup>2</sup> has held that an order under this rule directing or refusing to issue a commission is only an interlocutory order and not a "judgment" within Clause 15 of the Letters Patent and is not appealable. The High Courts of Bombay,<sup>3</sup> Calcutta<sup>4</sup> and Rangoon<sup>5</sup> have also taken the same view as that of the Madras Full Bench.

An order under this rule is not an appealable order. Nor will the Appellate Court interfere with the order in the regular appeal from the decree in the suit, unless the discretion is shown to have been improperly exercised which has prejudiced the party aggrieved.<sup>6</sup>

8. Revision. — An order under this rule can be revised when the order is one made without jurisdiction, e. g., in the absence of any of the grounds mentioned in the rule<sup>1</sup> or where the Court has acted with material irregularity, e. g., in refusing to issue a commission to a defendant residing outside its jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup> Where the refusal to issue a commission would be tantamount to a denial of justice or would result in manifest injury, the High Court can interfere in revision.<sup>3</sup>

The High Court of Allahabad<sup>4</sup> has held that an order under this rule refusing to issue a commission is an interlocutory order and is not a case decided within the meaning of Section 115 ante.

1. Evidence of witnesses not residing within British India.
2. Plaintiff in foreign territory asking for a commission to examine himself.

4. Revision.

1. Evidence of witnesses not residing within British India. — This rule deals with the issue of a commission for the examination of persons residing outside British India.<sup>1</sup> For the definition of "British India," see Note 1 to Section 1 ante. Bangalore is not within British India.<sup>2</sup> Where the evidence of a person residing outside British India is necessary and an application is made for the issue of a commission for the examination of such person, the Court has no further discretion in the matter and the commission should be issued as a matter of course.<sup>3</sup>

Where a commission is issued for taking evidence in England, the bill of costs with respect to such commission is to be taxed by the Taxing Master in India though it is to be taxed on the same principle as would be adopted in England.<sup>4</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>5</sup>

2. Plaintiff in foreign territory asking for a commission to examine himself. — As noticed in Note 3 to Rule 4, the Court will be very reluctant to accede to the request of the plaintiff for the issue of a commission to examine himself abroad except upon very strong grounds. The plaintiff is entitled to choose his own forum and having chosen the forum, he is not entitled to say "I reside outside the jurisdiction. Therefore examine me on commission."<sup>1</sup>

3. "Letter of request." — These words are new. As for the form of letter of request, see Appendix H, Form No. 8.

4. Revision. — Interlocutory orders passed in the exercise of discretion under this rule cannot be revised by the High Court.<sup>1</sup> See also Notes to Section 115, ante

R. 6. [S. 388.] Every Court receiving a commission for the examination of any person shall examine him or cause him to be examined pursuant thereto.

R. 7. [S. 389.] Where a commission has been duly executed, it shall be returned, together with the evidence taken under it, to the Court from which it was issued, unless the order for issuing the commission has otherwise directed, in which case the commission shall be returned in terms of such order; and the commission and the return thereto and the evidence taken under it shall (subject to the provisions of the next following rule) form part of the record of the suit.

Synopsis

1. Return of commission.
2. "Duly executed."
3. Commissioner can note demeanour of witness.
4. "Shall form part of the record."

1. Return of commission. — The return should show that the evidence was recorded as the law requires it, viz., in the language in ordinary use in the proceedings before the Court and duly read over and signed by the witness.<sup>1</sup>

The time for the execution of the commission may be enlarged on the application of a party.<sup>2</sup>

2. "Duly executed." — If a party to the suit dies before the examination of a witness on commission is completed and the fact of death is brought to the notice of the Commissioner, the proceedings after death are rendered illegal and consequently the commission cannot be said to have been duly executed.<sup>1</sup>

3. Commissioner can note demeanour of witness. — A Commissioner is entitled by law to note his observation as to the demeanour of the witness examined by him.<sup>1</sup>

O. 26 R. 8

R. 8. [S. 390.] Evidence taken under a commission shall not be read as evidence in the suit without the consent of the party against whom the same is offered, unless —

1. Legislative changes.—The words "or is a civil or military officer who cannot, in the opinion of the Court, attend without detriment to the public service" in clause (a) were newly introduced in the Code of 1908. For subsequent changes, see foot-note to the text of the rule.

2. Evidence on commission, when may be read as evidence in the suit.
—The practice on the original side of the High Court of Calcutta is that evidence taken on commission does not become evidence in the suit, until the same has been tendered and read as evidence by the party on whose behalf it was taken,<sup>1</sup> while the practice of the mofussil Courts in Calcutta is that such evidence is treated as evidence in the suit, though it is not formally tendered in evidence as it is part of the record.<sup>2</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>3</sup>

A party wishing to rely on evidence taken on commission cannot, without the consent of the party against whom he offers it, have it read as evidence in the suit, unless he is able to show that the circumstances mentioned in clause (a) exist at the time the evidence is sought to be read, or unless he is able to persuade the Court to dispense with the proof of such circumstances.<sup>4</sup> Such evidence can be read at the instance of either party to the suit and not necessarily by the party who applied for a commission.<sup>5</sup>

The fact that the evidence was taken on commission in the absence of the opposite party is no sufficient ground for refusing to admit it in evidence.<sup>6</sup> But if the commission was issued for examining a particular witness and in spite of objection by the other side another witness was also examined, the Court would be justified in ignoring the evidence of such person.<sup>7</sup>

In the undermentioned case<sup>8</sup> it was held by the Calcutta High Court that the expression "beyond the jurisdiction of the Court" has reference to the question whether the witness is within the reach of the compelling or disciplinary powers of the Court in his capacity of a witness or potential witness and that the matter therefore would fall within the purview of O. 16 R. 19 which lays down that no witness is to be ordered to attend in person unless he is resident within a certain distance from the Court which extends to as much as 200 miles provided that for five-sixths of the distance there are adequate transport facilities for the witness in the way of railway or other communications. Hence, it was held in the above case that the mere fact that the witness was resident beyond the territorial limits of the jurisdiction of the Court is not sufficient to hold that he is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court within the meaning of this rule.

See also Note 1 to Section 75 ante.

4. Admissibility of documents. — Where a document is produced before the Commissioner and no objection is taken as to its admissibility, no such objection can be taken after the return of the commission at the time of the trial of the suit.<sup>1</sup> But if the document is objected to before the Commissioner, the party objecting is not precluded from urging other grounds of objection than those taken before the Commissioner at the time of trial.<sup>2</sup> disputes about the identity of lands are instances when a Court may order a local investigation under this rule.<sup>3</sup>

The Court has a discretion to order a local investigation or not; it is not bound to order it in all cases.<sup>4</sup> An application under this rule should be made at the hearing of the suit.<sup>5</sup> It cannot be made after the case is closed.<sup>6</sup>

The presiding officer or officers in enquiries under the undermentioned Acts<sup>7</sup> have been empowered to issue commissions for local investigation in accordance with this rule.

An Appellate Court has the power to issue a commission for a local investigation under this rule read with Section 107.<sup>8</sup>

Though this rule does not provide for the presence of the parties when a commission is issued, yet, natural justice requires that such commission should not be issued behind the back of one of the parties concerned.<sup>9</sup>

3. Local investigation by the Judge. — See Order 18 Rule 18.

By Section 144 of the Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), the Court may, in inquiries under that Act, make a local investigation, instead of issuing a commission under this rule.

4. Power of Commissioner to take evidence. — See Note 3 to Rule 10 infra.

5. "Such person as it thinks fit." — Under the Code of 1859, a commission had to be issued, in the first instance, to an officer of the Court and only when there was no such officer, to any other suitable person.<sup>1</sup> There is no such preference under this rule. Under the General Rules of the Allahabad High Court, however, commissions other than commissions for the examination of witnesses or of accounts, should not be issued to persons other than Civil Court amins except when such a course is impracticable, and in every case a person other than a Civil Court amin is employed, the Court should record its reasons therefor.<sup>2</sup>

Nor is it a "judgment" within Clause 15 of the Letters Patent.<sup>1</sup> The discretion exercised by the Court under this rule cannot be interfered with in appeal or second appeal.<sup>3</sup>

10. Revision. — According to the High Court of Patna,<sup>1</sup> where the order directing a local investigation would be a calamitous waste of time and money and would be determining the rights of parties on an improper basis, the High Court would interfere in revision. But the High Court of Madras in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> refused to interfere with an order directing a Commissioner to ascertain the mesne profits on the ground that the applicant had a remedy by way of appeal from the final decree.

1. Legislative changes. —

The words "or as to his report" have been added in the concluding part of sub-rule (2). Sub-rule (3) is new.

2. Scope of the Rule. — Sub-rule (2) is "intended to afford protection to the Commissioner who is a quasi-judicial officer and such protection is afforded on grounds of public policy so as to make it impossible for either of the parties to subject the Commissioner to a vexatious examination."<sup>1</sup>

This rule applies to suits under the Tenancy Acts.<sup>2</sup>

3. Functions and powers of the Commissioner. — The provisions of Order 26 do not amplify Section 75 of the Code and the Court cannot delegate to the Commissioner the trial of any material issue which it is itself bound to try.<sup>1</sup> In other words, a Judge cannot depute to the Commissioner functions which he can and should discharge himself.<sup>2</sup> All that the Court can depute a Commissioner to do is to inspect a disputed land, to prepare a map or to obtain information with regard to physical features of the property inspected.<sup>3</sup> It is not the intention of the Legislature to allow witnesses to be examined by the Commissioner in such cases, unless the nature of evidence is such that it ought to be taken only on the spot,<sup>4</sup> or unless the parties agree and accept the same.<sup>5</sup> Thus, the statements regarding a right of way, made by village officers to a Commissioner appointed to prepare a map, are not evidence.<sup>6</sup>

Any evidence taken by the Commissioner contrary to instructions cannot be looked into.<sup>7</sup> Thus, where a Commissioner who was appointed to ascertain the amount of mesne profits entered into the question of possession of the land, recorded evidence and arrived at a finding, it was held that the procedure was ultra vires.<sup>8</sup> If evidence is taken by him within the scope of his authority, such evidence should be reduced to writing. Information given by witnesses and not reduced to writing is not legal evidence.<sup>9</sup>

A Commissioner is bound to record the state of things as actually existing and not draw upon his own imagination or make surmises.<sup>10</sup>

Notice should be given to the parties of the time when local investigation will be held.<sup>11</sup>

4. Admissibility of the report of the Commissioner. — The report of the Commissioner together with the evidence, if any, recorded by him is legal evidence in the suit.<sup>1</sup> But the evidence alone without the report of the Commissioner cannot be received as evidence in the suit.<sup>2</sup> The Court is not justified in refusing to consider the report unless the local investigation is incomplete or inconclusive.<sup>3</sup>

The report, however, is not per se evidence in any other suit unless its accuracy is proved in the ordinary way.<sup>4</sup>

5. Examination of the Commissioner. — The parties are entitled to take objection to the report of the Commissioner and substantiate the same by examining the Commissioner or other witnesses.<sup>1</sup> But there must be some real ground for examining the Commissioner.<sup>2</sup> If the report is attacked on grounds which require explanation, it is necessary that the Commissioner also should be examined.<sup>3</sup> It is against established practice to find fault with his report behind his back and to reject it in toto.<sup>4</sup>

6. Objections to Commissioner's report. — The Court must fix a date to enable the parties to file objections, if any, to the report of the Commissioner<sup>1</sup> and is bound to enquire into such objections when filed<sup>2</sup> unless the parties agree to, or accept the report.<sup>3</sup> A party refusing to appear before the Commissioner has, however, been held not entitled to object to the report.<sup>4</sup>

Objections to the report of the Commissioner should be taken in the trial Court and cannot be raised for the first time in appeal,<sup>5</sup> although the Appellate Court has power to consider whether the report was outside or within the scope of the warrant of commission.<sup>6</sup>

7. Commissioner's report, how far binding on the Court. — A Commissioner's report is only evidence in the case. It is in no way binding on the Court. The Court has full power to arrive at its own conclusion even at variance with the report.<sup>1</sup> In fact, the report ought not to be made the sole basis and foundation for the judgment in disregard of the other evidence in the case.<sup>2</sup>

8. Further evidence after the Commissioner's report. — The rule does not contemplate the tender of further evidence after the receipt of the report of the Commissioner except the examination of the Commissioner himself. It does not however prohibit further evidence. The point has to be decided on general principles according to the facts and circumstances of each case.<sup>1</sup> It was held that the party cannot at the

9. Sub-rule (3). — The Court has a discretion to order a fresh commission or not and is not bound to do so in every case where the result of the local investigation is found to be unsatisfactory; it can decide the case on the evidence.<sup>1</sup>

Sub-rule (3) contemplates a further enquiry by the same Commissioner already appointed; it does not contemplate the issue of a fresh commission covering the same ground.<sup>2</sup> But where the Court is so dissatisfied with the whole proceedings of the Commissioner that it thinks it better to discard the whole record and start afresh, it may do so.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where the Court is of opinion, on considering the objections of the parties, if any, that the Commissioner has so misconceived his duties as to render his report valueless, it may wipe out and supersede the first report by a specific order to that effect<sup>4</sup> and may issue a fresh commission.<sup>5</sup> The mere filing of objections to the report is no ground for issuing a fresh commission.<sup>6</sup> When the Court issues a fresh commission it is not bound to wipe out off the record the report of the first Commissioner.<sup>7</sup>

10. Interference with the report. — The Court ought not to interfere with the result of a long and careful local investigation except upon clearly defined and sufficient grounds.<sup>1</sup> It has been laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council (and followed in a number of decisions of the High Courts in India) that an Appellate Court should not interfere with the finding of the trial Court based on a careful local investigation except upon very strong grounds.<sup>2</sup> But disregard of the report of the

COMMISSIONS TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS

O. 26 R. 11

R. 11. [S. 394.] In any suit in which an examination or adjustment of accounts is necessary, the Court may issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit directing him to make such examination or adjustment.

Commission to examine or adjust accounts.

[1877, Ss. 394, 395, 400; 1859, S. 181.]

Synopsis

1. Commissioner to examine accounts.
2. "Is necessary."
3. Power of Commissioner to decide questions of law.

4. Disobedience of order made by Commissioner.
5. Non-payment of Commissioner's fees.
6. Appeal.
7. Form.

1. Commissioner to examine accounts. — In a suit for accounts the usual and proper procedure is first of all to ascertain whether the defendant is liable to account. If the accounts are complicated and require an examination, then the Court may appoint a commission under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Where a case is remanded to the lower Court for taking accounts, it has got jurisdiction to appoint a Commissioner for such purpose.<sup>2</sup>

The Court may issue a commission even without the consent of parties.<sup>3</sup>

Under Section 265 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908), the Deputy Commissioner is empowered to issue commissions to examine accounts in any suit, appeal or proceeding pending before him.

2. "Is necessary." — Before an order for the appointment of a Commissioner can be made, the examination or adjustment of accounts must be considered necessary.<sup>1</sup>

3. Power of Commissioner to decide questions of law. — The Court cannot delegate its judicial powers to a Commissioner in the matter of taking evidence and determining issues.<sup>1</sup> Thus, it is for the Court and not the Commissioner to decide as to the truth or falsity of the account books<sup>2</sup> or as to whether a certain contract was or was not authorized.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, the duty of determining in whose possession the account books are cannot be delegated to the Commissioner.<sup>4</sup> So also, it is not open to the Court to refer to the Commissioner the question as to whether the dealings between the parties constituted in law, a mutual, open and current account between them.<sup>5</sup> Their Lordships of the Privy Council<sup>6</sup> have held that it is irregular to appoint a Commissioner to give findings on mixed questions of law and fact, such as, for instance, the nature of a contract. The Commissioner can determine only the extent, or the quantum and not the factum of liability.<sup>7</sup> The function of the Commissioner is to place himself as an assistant to the Court so as to enable the Court to understand and appreciate the accounts and come to a decision.<sup>8</sup>

A Commissioner has no power of review either under Section 151 or under Order 47 Rule 1.<sup>9</sup>

The High Court of Bombay has held in the undermentioned case<sup>10</sup> that a Commissioner appointed by a Judge on the original side of the High Court can decide questions of law arising while accounts are taken.

4. Disobedience of order made by Commissioner. — A Commissioner is an officer of the Court and the Court can issue an attachment to compel a party to obey his order.<sup>1</sup>

5. Non-payment of Commissioner's fees. — The suit should not be dismissed for failure to deposit the Commissioner's fee.<sup>1</sup>

6. Appeal. — An order under this rule is not a decree and is not appealable<sup>1</sup> nor is the order one appealable under O. 43 R. 1. The High Court of Calcutta has, however, held in the undermentioned cases<sup>2</sup> that an order giving directions to the Commissioner amounts to a decree and is appealable. See Notes to Section 2, sub-section (2).

1. Scope of the Rule. — The Court is bound to furnish the Commissioner with the requisite proceedings and issue definite instructions as to what he should do. The Commissioner may, if necessary, apply for enlargement of time fixed for the return.<sup>1</sup>

The rule contemplates the appointment of only one Commissioner. But the appointment of more than one is only a mere irregularity.<sup>2</sup>

2. "Shall be evidence in the suit." — The report of the Commissioner together with the evidence, if any, taken by the Commissioner is evidence in the suit<sup>1</sup> unless the Court is dissatisfied with it and directs a further enquiry. But the report has not the effect of a decision in the case.<sup>2</sup>

The Court is not bound to take any other evidence than that furnished by the report, where it sees no reason to doubt its correctness.<sup>3</sup>

3. Objections to the Commissioner's report. — A party is entitled to file objections to the report of the Commissioner and the Court is bound to give him a reasonable opportunity to produce evidence in support of his objections.<sup>1</sup> But where a discretion in the matter of issuing a commission. It is not, under this rule, bound to appoint a Commissioner in every case.<sup>1</sup>

The essential difference between an arbitrator and a Commissioner appointed under this rule is that the latter merely submits his report for the approval of the Court, whereas the former has a final authority to settle all matters of difference between the parties. Further, the former is selected by the parties and therefore his decision cannot be questioned except on the limited grounds specified in Schedule II, whereas the latter is selected by the Court and the parties are therefore at liberty to challenge his report.<sup>3</sup>

An application for the appointment of a Commissioner is not governed by any rules of limitation.<sup>3</sup>

Where an order dismissing the suit for default is passed after a preliminary decree for partition, the order though illegal cannot be ignored unless expressly set aside or revoked. Nor does an order under this rule appointing a Commissioner to make a partition amount to an order setting aside the dismissal of the suit for default.<sup>4</sup>

By Section 12 of the Bengal Estates Partition Act (V of 1897), a Civil Court passing a decree for an undivided share of an estate governed by this Act may cause the same to be executed as prescribed by this rule.

3. "Such person as it thinks fit." — The choice of the Commissioner lies with the Court. But a relation of one of the parties or their pleaders should not be appointed except with the consent of the other party.<sup>2</sup>

4. Appeal. — An order issuing a commission under this rule is not appealable under O. 43 R. 1. Nor is the order one passed in execution within the meaning of S. 47.<sup>1</sup>

PATNA

Substitute the following for sub-rules (2) and (3) :

"(2) The Commissioner shall then prepare and sign a report or the Commissioners (where the commission was issued to more than one person and they cannot agree) shall prepare and sign separate reports appointing the share of each party and distinguishing each share (if necessary) by metes and bounds. The Commissioner or Commissioners shall append to the report, or where there is more than one, to each report, a schedule showing the plots and areas allotted to each party and also, unless otherwise directed by the Court, a map showing in different colours, the plots or portions of plots allotted to each party. In the event of a plot being sub-divided, the area of each sub-plot shall be given in the schedule and also measurements showing how the plot is to be divided. Such report or reports with the schedule and the map, if any, shall be annexed to the commission and transmitted to the Court; and the Court, after hearing any objections which the parties may make to the report or reports shall confirm, vary or set aside the same.

(3) Where the Court confirms or varies the report or reports it shall pass a decree in accordance with the same as confirmed or varied and, when drawing up the final decree shall incorporate in the decree the schedule, and the map, if any, mentioned in sub-rule (2) above, as confirmed or varied by the Court. The whole report or reports of the Commissioner or Commissioners shall not ordinarily be entered in the decree. When the Court sets aside the report or reports it shall either issue a new commission or make such other order as it shall think fit."

Appeal. See Note 9.

Metes and bounds. See Note 5.

"Confirm, vary or set aside." See Notes 4 and 5.

Partition Act, IV of 1893. See Note 4.

1. Legislative changes. — In sub-rule (1), the words "after such enquiry as may be necessary" have been substituted for "ascertain and inspect the property and shall".

Sub-rule (3) is almost new.

In sub-rule (2), the words "or the Commissioners . . . shall prepare and sign separate reports" have been newly added and the words "shall confirm, vary or set aside the same" have been substituted for the words "shall either quash the same." The object of the latter amendment was to negative the view taken in Janki v. Gouri, (1906) I. L. R. 28 Allahabad 75, that the Court had no power to vary the report.

2. Mode of effecting partition. — It is not contemplated by the rule that the Commissioner should propose a number of schemes and ask the Court to choose any one of them;<sup>1</sup> only the shares as ascertained by the decree have to be worked out by him. But the Court may, in the case of a joint Hindu family with the consent of all the coparceners, order that any part of the property should remain joint.<sup>2</sup> Where a partition cannot be made without destroying the intrinsic value of the property,<sup>3</sup> or where it would be inconvenient to disturb the exclusive possession of one co-sharer,<sup>4</sup> the Court may also award a money compensation instead of dividing the properties.

3. Partition of revenue-paying immovable property. — A partition of revenue-paying land which has the effect of breaking up the joint liability of the sharers for revenue cannot be effected by the Civil Court<sup>1</sup>: see Section 54 ante. Therefore, when a revenue-paying estate has to be partitioned into several revenue-paying estates, such partition can be done only by the Collector because the revenue is affected.<sup>2</sup> But where no allotment of separate revenue is asked for, the Civil Court is competent to allot the shares leaving the whole estate liable for the whole revenue.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is excluded only on questions affecting the right of the Government to assess and collect in its own way the public revenue.<sup>4</sup>

4. Partition of joint family dwelling-house. — In the case of partition of non-revenue-paying immovable property such as a joint family dwelling-house, the Court can actually fix the particular area, rooms or part of the house to be allotted to the respective sharers.<sup>1</sup>

and for cases regarding valuation of suits, see the decisions cited below.<sup>3</sup>

O. 26 R. 14
Notes 4-8

5. Allotment of shares. — The duty of the Commissioner is not to give possession but to allot the shares and prepare a report fixing the shares and distinguishing the same by metes and bounds, if so ordered.<sup>1</sup> The Court after considering the rights and objections of the different parties should make the final allotment.<sup>3</sup> A casting of lots for an equitable distribution of shares is not opposed to the rule and can be resorted to by the Courts.<sup>3</sup>

An order of the Court approving the allotment and division made by a Commissioner has been held to be binding on the parties, even though a fresh decree is not passed in accordance with the report.<sup>4</sup>

6. Objections to Commissioner's report. — Objections to the report can be filed within the period fixed by the Court.<sup>1</sup> When they are not so filed in the trial Court they cannot be raised for the first time in appeal.<sup>2</sup> But the High Court has power to see whether the Commissioner has exceeded his jurisdiction or acted within the scope of his warrant of commission.<sup>3</sup>

The provision in this rule requiring the Court to 'hear' the objections to the report of the Commissioner implies that evidence can be let in to support the objections.<sup>4</sup>

7. Resistance to Commissioner. — As already seen in Note 4 to Rule 11, Commissioners are officers of the Court and a process of attachment can be issued by the Court to enforce the orders of the Commissioner. But the Court is not justified in dismissing the suit when the Commissioner is resisted in executing his warrant of commission.<sup>1</sup>

8. Issue of a new commission. — Ordinarily a second commission ought not to be issued on the mere objection of a party.<sup>1</sup> But where the report is unsatisfactory,<sup>2</sup> or the Commissioner has so misconceived his duties as to render his report useless, a second commission may be issued in which case, however, the old report should be

Notes 8-11 Commissioner.<sup>4</sup>

9. Decree. — The proceedings contemplated by the rule are proceedings in the suit and not in execution<sup>1</sup> and the Court is bound to pass a final decree after perusing the report.<sup>2</sup> The High Court of Madras<sup>3</sup> has held that the Court can pass a final decree suo motu without an application by the party, the reason being that the suit must be considered pending until a final decree is passed. Though the final decree is appealable, no appeal lies against an order of the Court confirming or varying the report.<sup>4</sup>

10. Final decree to be engrossed on stamp paper. — A final decree for partition passed in accordance with the report of the Commissioner must be stamped as an instrument of partition within the meaning of Section 2, clause (15) of the Indian Stamp Act (II of 1899).<sup>1</sup>

11. Preliminary decree in a partition suit — Appeal. — Under Section 396, clause (1) of the old Code corresponding to Rule 13 of this Order, it was provided that the Court can issue a commission "after ascertaining the several parties interested . . . and their several rights. . . ." There was a conflict of opinions as to whether such an ascertainment amounted to a decree. It was held by the High Courts of Calcutta<sup>1</sup> and Madras<sup>2</sup> that it did amount to a decree while the Chief Court of the Punjab<sup>3</sup> held that it did not. The conflict has now been set at rest by the Legislature by using the words preliminary decree in Rule 13 to avoid any possible doubt in the matter.

Local Amendment

O. 26 R. 18
Note 1

MADRAS

Re-number the existing Rule 15 as Rule 15 (1) and insert the following as sub-rule (2):

"(2) Before executing and returning any commission issued by foreign Courts under the provisions of Section 78, the Court or the Commissioner required to execute the commission may levy such fee as the High Court may from time to time prescribe in this behalf in addition to the fees prescribed for the issue of summons to witnesses and for expenses of such witnesses under Rule 2 of Order 16."

Synopsis

1. Expenses of commission.
2. Reduction of Commissioner's bill, when justified.

1. Expenses of commission.—The rule provides that the Court may, if it thinks fit, order the party requiring the commission to deposit the necessary expenses therefor.<sup>1</sup> The rule is not exhaustive and does not prevent the Court from imposing any terms that it chooses as a condition precedent to the issuing of a commission.<sup>2</sup> Nor does an omission on the part of the Court to require the deposit of the expenses prevent the Commissioner from recovering his remuneration from the party at whose instance he was engaged.<sup>3</sup>

The object of requiring the expenses to be deposited beforehand is, that the Commissioner who is an officer of Court ought not to be driven to a separate suit or execution to get his fees.<sup>4</sup> As to whether an order directing the deposit of fees to the Commissioner is capable of execution, the High Court of Madras<sup>5</sup> has held that it is not capable of execution. The decisions of the High Courts of Calcutta<sup>6</sup> and Lahore<sup>7</sup> are conflicting. An order directing one of the parties to pay a certain sum to the Commissioner cannot be made a part of the decree, the reason being that the Commissioner is not a party to the suit.<sup>8</sup>

apply to persons required to give evidence or to produce documents under this order whether the commission in execution of which they are so required has been issued by a Court situate within or by a Court situate beyond the limits of British India, and for the purposes of this rule the Commissioner shall be deemed to be a Civil Court.

O. 26 R. 17
Notes 1-2

(2) A Commissioner may apply to any Court (not being a High Court) within the local limits of whose jurisdiction a witness resides for the issue of any process which he may find it necessary to issue to or against such witness, and such Court may, in its discretion, issue such process as it considers reasonable and proper.

[1877, S. 399.]

1. Scope of the Rule. | 2. Sub-rule (2).

1. Scope of the Rule. — Under this rule the Commissioner is given the powers of Court in regard to the summoning and procuring the attendance of witnesses. The reason is that the Commissioner is a delegate of the Court acting under its authority.<sup>1</sup> Although under O. 26 R. 16 it is in the discretion of the Commissioner to examine or not to examine a witness, yet, once the Commissioner has decided to examine a witness, the mandatory provisions of this rule come into play and those provisions in their turn attract the provisions of Order 18 of the Code and Section 138 of the Evidence Act. Hence, the parties must be afforded an opportunity of examining, cross-examining and re-examining the witnesses and it is not open to the Commissioner to examine the witnesses in the absence of the parties without giving them sufficient notice of the time and place when he proposes to examine the witnesses.<sup>2</sup>

2. Sub-rule (2). — Sub-rule (2) is new. In the absence of a similar provision under the old Code it was held that if a witness residing outside jurisdiction refused to appear before the Commissioner pursuant to his notice, the only course left to the Commissioner was to return the warrant of commission.<sup>1</sup> Such a contingency has now been obviated.

R. 18. [S. 400.] (1) Where a commission is issued under this Order, the Court shall direct that the parties to the suit shall appear before the Commissioner in person or by their agents or pleaders.

Parties to appear before Commissioner.

(2) Where all or any of the parties do not so appear, the Commissioner may proceed in their absence.

Local Amendments

MADRAS

Insert the following as Order 26 A (new) :

"ORDER XXVIA

O. 26A R. 1
(Madras)

Rule 1. The Court may in any suit issue a commission to such persons as it thinks fit to translate accounts and other documents which are not in the language of the Court.

O. 26A R. 2
(Madras)

Rule 2. The report of the Commissioner shall be evidence in the suit and shall form part of the record.

O. 26A R. 3
(Madras)

Rule 3. Before issuing any commission under this Order, the Court may order such sum (if any) as it thinks reasonable for the expense of the commission to be, within a time to be fixed, paid into Court by the party at whose instance or for whose benefit the commission is issued."

RANGOON

The following shall be added as Rules 19 to 30. (This is added before the amendments of Rules 19 to 22 by the Indian Legislature in 1932) :

"Fees to commissioners for local investigation, and commissioners of partition, or to take accounts or for examination of witnesses.

O. 26 R. 19

24. When under the orders of a Court in the Town of Rangoon, or of a District Court, an oath or solemn affirmation is administered to a declarant of an affidavit, at his request elsewhere than at the Court, a fee of Rs. 16 shall be paid by the said declarant :

O. 26 R. 24
(Rangoon)

Provided that —

(a) the administration of the oath or of solemn affirmation elsewhere than in Court shall be authorised by the Court by order in writing ;

(b) if more than one affidavit is taken at the same time and place, the fee shall be Rs. 8 for each affidavit after the first ;

(c) in no case shall the fees for taking any number of affidavits at the same time and place exceed Rs. 80 ;

(d) in pauper suits and appeals, when the affidavit of a pauper is taken, no fee shall be charged.

25. Affidavits taken under Rule 24 shall be taken out of Court hours. The fees shall be retained by the Commissioner for administering the oath or solemn affirmation.

O. 26 R. 25
(Rangoon)

No fee for administration of oath under the order of a Court.

26. No fee shall be charged for the administration of an oath under the order of any Court other than those specified in Rule 24.

(Rangoon)

27. (1) If a High Court is satisfied —

(a) that a foreign Court situated in a foreign country wishes to obtain the evidence of a witness in any proceeding before it ;

(b) that the proceeding is of a civil nature ; and

(c) that the witness is residing within the limits of the High Court's appellate jurisdiction, it may, subject to the provisions of Rule 28, issue a commission for the examination of such witness.

O. 26 R. 27
(Rangoon)

(2) Evidence may be given of the matters specified in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of sub-rule (1) —

(a) by a certificate signed by the consular officer of the foreign country of the highest rank in India and transmitted to the High Court through the Governor-General in Council ; or

(b) by a letter of request issued by the foreign Court and transmitted to the High Court through the Governor-General in Council ; or

(c) by a letter of request issued by the foreign Court and produced before the High Court by a party to the proceeding.

28. The High Court may issue a commission under Rule 27 —

(a) upon an application by a party to the proceeding before the foreign Court ; or

(Rangoon)

O. 26 R. 28
(Rangoon)

(b) upon an application by a law officer of the Local Government acting under instructions from the Local Government.

(Rangoon)

29. A commission under Rule 27 may be issued to any Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the witness resides, or, where the High Court is established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or the Government of India Act, 1915, and the witness resides within the local limits of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction, to any person whom the Court thinks fit to execute the commission.

"Company authorized to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or trustee." See Note 1.

Suit should be dismissed. See Note 3.

1. Legislative changes. — The words "or by a company authorized to sue or be sued in the name of an officer or of a trustee" which occurred in the old Section after the word "corporation" have now been omitted. The reason for the omission is that most companies nowadays are registered, and companies which are unregistered but which are authorized by law to sue must be very few, if any indeed exist, and no special treatment is necessary in respect of these.<sup>1</sup>

2. Suits by or against corporations. — This Order deals with the subscription and verification of pleadings in suits by or against corporations; it says nothing about the manner in which the suit itself is to be framed.<sup>1</sup> There is nothing in this rule or Order to suggest that the cause title of the plaint should also contain the particulars showing the names and description or place of residence of the person who purports to verify or sign the pleadings.<sup>2</sup>

A "corporation" is a fictitious or imaginary person invested by law with the attribute of perpetuity.<sup>3</sup> For the purposes of this Order it may be stated to be a body authorized by law to act as one individual and constituted either by prescription, by the Letters Patent, or by an act of the Legislature.<sup>4</sup> A corporation by prescription is one which has existed as a corporation "from a time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, and therefore, is looked upon in law to be well created." In other words, it is a corporation of such antiquity that the consent of the sovereign may be presumed.<sup>5</sup> A registered company under the Companies Act is a corporation,<sup>6</sup> but not an unregistered one, unless it is authorized by law to act as an individual. Unregistered companies so authorized are, as has been seen in Note 1, now practically non-existent.

A corporation must sue or be sued, not in the names of its agents or servants but in its own corporate name,<sup>7</sup> and, in the case of registered companies, in the form given in Appendix A, First Schedule, Form No. 2<sup>8</sup> and described as "the A. B. Company, Limited, having its registered office at" or as "A. B. a public officer of the C. D. Company."<sup>9</sup> A description given as "A. B., agent of C. D. Company" is not in conformity with the rule.<sup>10</sup> Where in a suit against two companies, the description given was "the Indian General S. N. R. Co., Ltd., and the Rivers S. N. Co., Ltd., by their joint agent A. B. Rogers" it was held that the suit was substantially against A. B. Rogers and not against the companies referred to.<sup>11</sup> Where, however, relief is really sought against the company, and the error is merely one of misdescription, a suit, though nominally against the agent, may be treated as in substance one against the company.<sup>12</sup> Similarly, where in a suit by a municipal body, the plaintiff was described as "A. B., Chairman of the Municipal Board of . . . ." but the intention was clear that it was the Municipal Board that was suing, it was held that the defect was merely one of form and could not be a ground in appeal for the reversal of the decree.<sup>13</sup>

This rule merely authorizes the persons mentioned therein to sign and verify pleadings on behalf of a corporation. The rule does not authorize such persons to institute suits on behalf of the corporation.<sup>14</sup>

Where the manager of a company is authorized by the articles of association to file suits with the previous sanction of the executive board, a suit instituted by him without such sanction is unauthorized and the fact that the act of the manager is ratified after the period of limitation by a resolution of the board of directors is of no avail.<sup>15</sup>

3. Suit by or against unregistered company. — A suit by or against an unregistered company or unincorporated body of persons must be brought in the names of, or against all the members of the company or body.<sup>1</sup> Thus, an unregistered club or society cannot sue in the name of its secretary.<sup>2</sup> A suit brought in the names of some only of the members of such a society will be dismissed.<sup>3</sup> It was observed by the High Court of Calcutta in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> that where it appeared that the plaintiff did not know of what persons the company in question was composed, he might sue the company in the name under which it was carrying on the business, provided he had stated in the plaint that he was unable to give a better description of the defendant.

This view has, however, not been followed, but has, on the other hand, been expressly dissented from by the Allahabad High Court.<sup>6</sup>

Where the company consists of numerous persons the suit may, under the provisions of O. 1 R. 8, be instituted by one or more of such persons on behalf of all with the permission of the Court.

5. Companies authorized to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or secretary. — As has been seen in Note 2, the authority of a company or a body of persons to sue or be sued in the name of an officer or trustee thereof can only be created by prescription or by Letters Patent or by an Act of the Legislature. The Indian Companies Act is one of such Acts of the Legislature.<sup>1</sup> See also Act VII of 1890 under which a company such as the Comptoir National Decompte de Paris may be sued in the name of its chief manager.<sup>2</sup>

Where a gift was made to the members of an unincorporated society by a deed and the society was subsequently registered, the registered society can enforce the gift without a formal deed of transfer from the unincorporated society.<sup>3</sup>

5. Foreign corporation. — It is an established rule of Private International Law, that a corporation duly created according to the law of one State may sue or be sued in its corporate name, in the Courts of other States<sup>1</sup> and it is not necessary that it should be registered under the Indian Companies Act before it can claim the benefit of this rule in India.<sup>2</sup> Thus, a plaint filed in the Delhi Court on behalf of the Singer Manufacturing Company which is incorporated in the United States of America may be verified by an agent holding a general power of attorney from the company as a "principal officer" of the company within the meaning of this rule.<sup>3</sup> The fact that the agent also acts for another is not material.<sup>4</sup>

6. "Other principal officer of the corporation." — The official liquidator of a registered company in liquidation is competent to sue on behalf of the company.<sup>1</sup> Where a branch of a bank was conducted by a manager holding a power of attorney under the seal of the company, and such a manager had in his absence delegated, in pursuance of such power, all his authority to an accountant, but such substituted power omitted words giving power to sue, it was held by the Privy Council that such substitute was a "principal officer of the corporation" and could sign and verify a plaint by the company.<sup>2</sup> The signing of the plaint by the "principal officer of the corporation" is not

Notes 6-8

Where the plaint is signed and verified by an officer other than those specified in the rule, the Court may, in its discretion, allow the plaint to be amended by filing a properly signed and verified copy of the plaint.<sup>4</sup>

7. "Who is able to depose to the facts of the case." — It is not necessary that the principal officer of the corporation should verify the plaint from actual personal knowledge; he may verify upon his information and belief.<sup>1</sup> According to the rules of the Calcutta High Court,<sup>2</sup> it is necessary that the fitness of the person verifying the pleading on behalf of the corporation should be proved by an affidavit at the time of presenting the pleading. But, the Bombay High Court<sup>3</sup> has held that it is not necessary, in a suit by a corporation, that the plaintiffs should state in the body of the plaint or by an affidavit that the person verifying was a principal officer of the plaintiffs able to depose to the facts of the case. An insufficiency of verification is not a ground in appeal, for dismissing the proceedings had in the first Court, in the absence of any prejudice caused to any person by such defect.<sup>4</sup>

8. Subscription and verification of pleadings. — A plaint, on behalf of the corporation, may, under this rule, be signed and verified either —

- (a) by the secretary, or
- (b) by a director of the corporation, or
- (c) by other principal officer of the corporation.<sup>1</sup>

A Registrar of a Joint Stock Company is not a proper person to represent the company, he not being one of the persons specified.<sup>2</sup> There is a conflict of opinions as to whether the provisions contained in O. 6 R. 14 apply to cases within this rule, so as to enable a plaint by a corporation to be signed and verified by a person duly authorized by it, where, by reason of absence or other good cause it could not be signed by the persons specified in this rule. In Delhi and London Bank, Ltd. v. Oldham,<sup>3</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"Their Lordships are of opinion that Section 51 of the Code (now O. 6 R. 14), which regulates proceedings taken by or on behalf of ordinary plaintiffs does not apply to such a case as the present, but that this case must be decided with reference only to Section 435, which expressly applies to corporations."

The High Court of Bombay<sup>4</sup> has held that the said decision of the Privy Council must be taken to apply to the particular facts of that case and that it is not an authority for the proposition that O. 6 R. 14 does not apply to cases governed by this rule; and they have consequently held that an agent holding a power-of-attorney is entitled to sign and verify the plaint on behalf of a corporation under the provisions of Order 6 Rule 14. The High Court of Lahore<sup>5</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind<sup>6</sup> are also of the same opinion.

To enable a principal officer of a corporation to verify a plaint or a written statement, it is not necessary that permission of the Court should be obtained for that purpose; but, according to the Calcutta High Court,<sup>7</sup> it should be shown by a statement in the plaint or in the written statement or by an affidavit, that the person purporting to verify is a principal officer of the corporation and is able to depose to the facts of the case. 1. Scope of the Rule.—It is a general principle of law that a plaintiff who wishes to obtain a decree against several persons must make them all parties to the suit. Where A makes a promise to B, C and D the right to enforce the promise rests with them all, under the provisions of the Contract Act, Section 45, so that all of them are necessary parties to a suit to enforce such promise.<sup>1</sup> It was accordingly held under the old Code, which did not contain any provisions corresponding to this Order, that in suits by or against firms, all the members composing the firm were necessary parties.<sup>2</sup>

This Order has been newly introduced into the present Code and provides, as it were, an exception to the provisions of Section 45, Contract Act, in that it allows two or more partners alone to sue, provided the suit is brought in the name of the firm.<sup>3</sup> A firm as such, has no existence in law; it is a mere abbreviated name for the partners of which it consists, and not a legal entity as a corporation,<sup>4</sup> and when a suit is brought against a firm, it is precisely as though it were brought in the name of all the partners.<sup>5</sup> The effect of using the name of the firm is simply to bring all the partners before the Court and the procedure indicated in this rule is adopted only as a convenient method for denoting the persons who constitute the firm at the time of the accrual of the cause of action.<sup>6</sup> A decree against a firm in the name of the firm has the same effect as a decree against all the partners.<sup>7</sup> This is made clear by the various rules of this Order. Thus, Rule 2 provides that in a suit brought in the name of the firm, the plaintiff shall, on a written demand of the defendants, declare, in writing, the names and residences of the partners and that, on such a declaration being made, the suit will proceed as if all the partners had been named as plaintiffs in the plaint. Rule 6 provides that where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm, they shall appear individually in their own names, but all subsequent proceedings shall, nevertheless, continue in the name of the firm. But the Order merely provides a new procedure and does not affect the plaintiff's right of bringing a suit against a firm by impleading all or any of the members as defendants thereto in conjunction with the firm.<sup>8</sup> Where a suit is to be brought against A and B as partners of the firm A, B & Co., the proper form is not to sue them as "A, B & Co., by partners A and B" but to sue as follows —

- "1. A, B & Co., a firm
2. A, a partner in the firm
3. B, a partner in the firm."<sup>9</sup>

Where the plaint describes the plaintiff as the "firm X through B, the proprietor of the said firm," and the plaint is signed by B, the plaintiff cannot be deemed to be suing in the firm's name but in his own name and the mere fact of the firm's name being mentioned in no way affects the matter.<sup>10</sup>

The provisions of this Order apply only to a firm or contractual partnership and do not apply to a joint Hindu family business. Therefore an undivided Hindu family carrying on business is not entitled to sue as a firm under this Order.<sup>11</sup> Further, the provisions of this Order assume that the "firm" is legally constituted and do not have any bearing on the question of the maintainability of a suit against an illegal association.<sup>12</sup>

This Order applies only to suits by or against partners and persons carrying on business in names other than their own. The execution of decrees against firms and the attachment of partnership property are dealt with in O. 21 Rules 49 and 50.

Where a decree is obtained in the name of a firm, as to whether a payment of the decree amount to one of the partners is a valid discharge, see Note 8 to Order 21, Rule 15, ante.

2. "Any two or more persons." — This rule applies only where there are two or more persons carrying on business in the name of a firm. One single person carrying on business in the name of a firm cannot sue in the name of the firm.<sup>1</sup> Nor can one of several partners carrying on business in the name of a firm, sue in his own name on a cause of action which has arisen in favour of the firm.<sup>2</sup> But he can institute a suit in the name of the firm in such cases, and this rule does not bar him from doing so.<sup>3</sup>

3. "Firm," meaning of. — Under Section 4 of the Indian Partnership Act, IX of 1932, (Section 239 of the Contract Act, 1872), "persons who have entered into partnership with one another are called individually 'partners' and collectively a 'firm'." In the earlier part of the same Section it is enacted that "partnership" is the relation between persons who have agreed to share the profits of a business carried on by all or any of them acting for all. A "firm" is thus a short, collective name for the individual members who constitute the partners<sup>1</sup> and, as has been seen in Note 1 above, is not a legal entity or an artificial person as a corporation. It follows that a firm in the cause title as the plaintiff without saying "through M" but the addition of those words does not matter.])

firm cannot, as such, enter into a contract and be a member of a partnership<sup>3</sup> nor can it be a party to a reference under the Arbitration Act.<sup>3</sup> It cannot appear in any suit as a firm; if, however, a partner is made a co-defendant along with the firm he may put in a separate defence for himself and one on behalf of the firm.<sup>4</sup>

A, B and C carry on business as a firm X. They enter into a partnership with D. Then A sues D in the name of the firm X for a dissolution of the partnership with D and for accounts. Such a suit is maintainable. Though the firm X as such cannot enter into a partnership with another, the individual partners therein, A, B and C can do so and the suit as brought must be deemed to be one on behalf of all three of them.<sup>5</sup>

Before the passing of the Partnership Act of 1932, the insolvency of one of the partners in a firm did not cause a dissolution of the firm and hence, a suit could be instituted in the name of the firm even after the insolvency of one of the partners.<sup>6</sup>

4. Minor. — Section 30 of the Indian Partnership Act, IX of 1932 (Section 247 of the Contract Act, 1872) provides that a person, who is under the age of majority according to the law to which he is subject, may be admitted to the benefits of partnership, but cannot be made personally liable for any obligation of the firm; but the share of such a minor in the property of the firm is liable for the obligations of the firm. The person under the age of majority cannot, under the Indian law, become a partner by contract, and cannot be one of that group of persons called a "firm," inasmuch as a contract by a minor is void.<sup>1</sup> In this view, the share, of which S. 247 speaks, is no more than a right to participate in the property of the firm after its obligations are satisfied.<sup>2</sup> If a suit is brought under Order 30 against a firm where a minor has been admitted to some kind of benefit, the minor cannot be regarded as a party to the suit.<sup>3</sup> Where a suit is brought against a firm, the mere fact that there is a minor member of the firm, does not bring the suit within the purview of Order 32 and no sanction is necessary under the provisions thereof where the matter in dispute in such suit is referred to arbitration.<sup>4</sup> According to the law of England a contract by a minor is only voidable and not void. He may be a partner<sup>5</sup> though he cannot be made personally liable for the debts of the firm. A judgment against the firm may be executed against the partnership property including the share of the minor.<sup>6</sup>

5. Suit against manager and owner of the firm. — See O. 30 R. 10, infra.

persons claiming or being liable as partners are carrying on business in British India.<sup>1</sup> A foreign firm may carry on business in British India in which case this Order will apply to suits by or against it, even though the partners themselves are residing outside British India.<sup>2</sup> The partners of a foreign firm who do not carry on any business in British India cannot sue<sup>3</sup> or be sued<sup>4</sup> in the firm name, but must proceed or be proceeded against individually.<sup>5</sup> But, where in such a case a suit is originally instituted in the name of the firm and the plaint is subsequently amended showing the names of the partners, it cannot be said that until the amendment the suit must be treated as not instituted at all. Further, the suit as originally instituted is only a suit by or against the partners constituting the firm even though their names were not disclosed and when their names are subsequently disclosed, there is no substitution or addition of new parties so as to attract the application of S. 22 of the Limitation Act.<sup>6</sup>

The question whether a firm is carrying on business within jurisdiction is one of fact depending upon the circumstances of each case. The words "carrying on business" must be understood in their ordinary sense and not as having any special significance.<sup>7</sup> Thus, if a firm has an office of its own within jurisdiction at which a partner or a manager is in control carrying on the business, that is sufficient to bring it within the rule.<sup>8</sup> If the firm has only an office within the jurisdiction, at which the business is done for the firm by an agent, the question whether it is carrying on business within jurisdiction depends on the powers and the authority of the agent. If the agent merely has authority to take orders and transmit them to the firm, that is not carrying on business.<sup>9</sup> If, however, the agent has the power to conclude contracts on his own initiative on behalf of the firm, the latter will be taken to be carrying on business through the agent within the jurisdiction.<sup>10</sup>

See Section 20 Note 8 for a full discussion as to the meaning of the words "carrying on business."

7. "May sue or be sued in the name of the firm." — As has been seen in Note 1, two or more partners can sue in the name of the firm and it is not necessary that the other partners should be named in the plaint as plaintiffs or should sign it.<sup>1</sup> A suit brought in the name of the firm cannot, therefore, be dismissed on the ground of non-joinder of other partners; all that the defendant is entitled to is the disclosure of the names of those partners under Rule 2.<sup>3</sup> An addition of one of the partners after the period of limitation, or the correction of the name of a wrong representative of the firm who has been made a party to the suit, will not amount to an addition or substitution of a new party to the suit within the meaning of Section 22 of the Limitation Act.<sup>3</sup>

The cause of action in respect of a contract with a firm vests in all the partners jointly, and if, after the contract, one of the partners retires and a stranger comes in, the new partnership cannot enforce the contract entered into by the old. Nor can it, by substituting the names of the old partners, alter the period of limitation for instituting the suit or avoid the bar of limitation.<sup>4</sup> Where a firm continues to be known by its old name even after the original partners are dead though occasionally the name of the actual head of the firm is also added to the old name, the omission of the latter's name in a suit by the firm does not amount to any misdescription.<sup>5</sup> It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>6</sup> that in a suit for libel made against a firm all the partners should join as plaintiffs.

8. Firm as "agriculturist." — A firm can be an "agriculturist" within the meaning of Section 2, Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), only when, by itself, or by its servants, or by its tenants it earns its livelihood wholly or principally by agriculture carried on within the limits of a district to which the Act extends. The mere fact that an individual partner or even all the partners of the firm earn their livelihood from an agricultural income does not make the firm an "agriculturist." A plaintiff suing a firm which, by itself, does not earn its livelihood by agriculture must be sued only at the place where it carries on business and not where the individual partners reside.<sup>1</sup>

9. Suit by firm on promissory note. — Where a promissory note is executed to A, a partner of a firm, for a debt due to the firm, A is personally entitled to sue on the note although the benefit of the decree would result to the partnership firm.<sup>1</sup> The firm is also entitled to sue on the note, though it is advisable, before suit, to get the instrument endorsed in its name.<sup>3</sup> Where A sues individually to recover a debt due to the firm consisting of partners A and B, the correct procedure, if B will not join A as co-plaintiff, is to make him a defendant.<sup>3</sup>

10. "At the time of the accruing of the cause of action." — A suit may be brought under this rule in the name of a firm which has been dissolved before the date of the suit, provided the cause of action has arisen before the date of the dissolution.<sup>1</sup>

11. Suit against firm — Reference to arbitration. — Where a reference is made to arbitration in a suit in which a firm is a party, all the members of the firm who are sought to be bound, must join in making the reference; sub-rule (2) of this rule does not empower one partner alone to refer the case to arbitration so as to bind the other partners who have not agreed to, or joined in, the application for reference.<sup>1</sup> A proceeding before an arbitrator under the Arbitration Act is not a suit and, therefore, the provisions of Order 30 do not apply thereto.<sup>2</sup>

11a. Suit in name of firm — Compromise. — Although a suit is instituted in the name of a firm, all the partners are in reality plaintiffs and it cannot be compromised by one of the partners alone.<sup>1</sup>

12. Statement of names and addresses. — Both Rules 1 and 2 provide for the disclosure of the names of partners. Under Rule 1 any party may apply to the Court for a statement of the names and addresses of the partners to be furnished as directed by the Court. Under Rule 2, a defendant may, on demand in writing, without recourse to Court, ask the plaintiff or his pleader to declare in writing the names and places of residence of the partners. Where a statement under Rule 1, or a declaration under Rule 2 is made, the Court cannot direct a cross-examination on such statement or declaration; nor can it direct the trial of an issue as to who were the partners of the firm at the time of the accruing of the cause of action. But the statement or declaration, as the case may be, will be treated as embodied in the plaint and will be a necessary part of the cause of action.<sup>1</sup>

13. Subscription and verification. — It is quite sufficient, under the provisions of sub-rule (2), that, in suits by or against a firm, the pleading on behalf of the firm is signed and verified by one of the partners composing the firm; it is not necessary that it should be signed by two or more persons, though under sub-rule (1) no suit can be brought in the name of a firm unless it consists of two or more partners.<sup>1</sup>

14. Death of partner before suit. — A suit may be brought against a firm in the name of the firm, even though one of the partners is dead before the institution of the suit,<sup>1</sup> inasmuch as the suit must be deemed to be against the surviving partners. The judgment so obtained against the firm, though enforceable against the partnership property, cannot be enforced against the private estate of the deceased partner, unless his legal representatives are actually made parties.<sup>2</sup>

15. Suit against individual partners. — This rule does not affect, in any way, the operation of Section 43 of the Contract Act. In a suit upon a contract made by a partner on behalf of the partnership, the promisee can compel all or any one of the partners to perform the whole of the promise.<sup>1</sup> As has been seen in Note 1, an individual partner may be sued personally along with the firm.<sup>2</sup>

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule.

2. Disclosure of partners' names.

3. Proceedings to continue in the name of firm. See Rule 6 Note 2.

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule applies only to suits instituted by and not against partners in the name of the firm; in other words, it applies only to the case of plaintiffs suing in the name of the firm.<sup>1</sup> Sub-rule (2) of this rule does not control the provisions of O. 21 R. 50 and does not apply to anything that follows after the suit has reached the stage of a decree,<sup>2</sup> nor does it in any way contradict the provisions of O. 30, Rule 4 and it is therefore not necessary to join the legal representatives of a deceased partner as parties to the suit.<sup>3</sup>

2. Disclosure of partners' names. — An incomplete disclosure or a wrong declaration of the names of the partners is not a fatal defect to the suit; the proper procedure in such a case is not to dismiss the suit but to allow a further declaration making a full disclosure.<sup>1</sup> The effect of such a fresh declaration is equivalent to that of the addition of a party and therefore it should be made before the expiry of the period of limitation.<sup>2</sup> A suit for dissolution of a partnership existing between an individual on the one hand, and a different partnership on the other, may be instituted against such the firm is an existing one or has not been dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the date of suit, there are two modes of service prescribed by this rule :

O. 30 R. 3
Notes 1-2

- (a) upon any one or more of the partners ; or
- (b) upon the manager of the business at the principal place thereof within British India.

A service effected in one of the above modes is a good service against the firm, and a decree can be passed against it;<sup>2</sup> it is immaterial that all the partners are not individually served,<sup>3</sup> or that all or any of them resides outside British India.<sup>4</sup> If the summons be not served in either of the two modes mentioned above, the service is irregular and no decree can be passed against the firm.<sup>5</sup> But though the firm is properly served by adopting the above modes of service, it is not sufficient to make a member who has not been actually served, a person "who has been individually served as a partner" within the meaning of O. 21 R. 50.<sup>6</sup> That rule provides that a decree obtained against a firm may be executed —

- (a) against the partnership assets ;
- (b) against any person personally who has been individually served with summons and has failed to appear ;
- (c) against any person personally who has appeared in his own name under Rules 6 and 7 of Order 30, or who has admitted in the pleadings that he is, or who has been adjudged to be, a partner ;
- (d) with the leave of the Court, against any person personally as being a partner of the firm, even though he has not appeared or been individually served in the prescribed manner.

As to the mode of service to be adopted in cases where the firm has been dissolved before the institution of the suit and the effect of not complying with the rule of service so prescribed, see Note 2 below.

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup>

2. Dissolution of partnership before suit. — The proviso to this rule deals with the method of service to be adopted where the firm has been dissolved before the date of the suit. If the plaintiff, at the time of instituting the suit, is not aware of the dissolution, the proviso has no application and a service effected in one of the modes mentioned in clause (a) or clause (b) of the rule is good service against the firm, and a decree passed against it can be executed against the partners in the manner prescribed by O. 21 R. 50. If, however, the plaintiff is aware of the fact of dissolution before the date of the suit, he must, if he seeks to make any person liable as a partner, serve it on such person individually. If instead of doing so the service is effected as prescribed by clause (a) or clause (b) only, there will no doubt be a decree against the firm, but it cannot be executed, even with the leave of the Court, personally against the partner not individually served, under sub-rule (2) of O. 21 R. 50.<sup>1</sup> To this extent the proviso to this rule overrides O. 21 R. 50, which allows a decree against a firm to be executed against a partner personally with the leave of the Court, even though he has not been served individually.<sup>2</sup>

Where a partner dies before the institution of the suit, the partnership gets dissolved under the provisions of Section 42 of the Partnership Act, IX of 1932 (Section 253 of the Contract Act). If the plaintiff is aware of the death at the date of the suit, he must, if he wishes to make the private estate of the deceased partner liable, implead the legal representatives as parties and obtain a decree against them.<sup>3</sup> But the proviso to this rule does not imply that if the plaintiff was not aware of the dissolution by the death of the partner, the latter's legal representatives can be treated as partners themselves and proceeded against under sub-rule (2) of O. 21 R. 50 in respect of the private estate of the deceased partner. It has accordingly been held by a Full Bench of the High Court of Madras<sup>4</sup> that the fact that the plaintiff had no knowledge of the death of the partner before the suit does not affect the question of the liability of the legal representatives in respect of the private estate of the deceased partner and that the scope of O. 21 R. 50 sub-rule (2) cannot be enlarged by a reference to the rule of service prescribed by the proviso. A different view has been taken by the High Court of Bombay. According to that High Court the legal representatives can be proceeded against under sub-rule (2) of O. 21 R. 50, in respect of the private estate of the deceased partner.<sup>5</sup> The Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court has also held a similar view.<sup>6</sup> It is submitted that the Bombay view is not correct. Sub-rule (2) of O. 21 R. 50 applies only to execution against a person as being a partner of the firm, and the legal representatives are, in no sense, the partners of the firm.<sup>7</sup>

"Suppose a partner dies before action is brought and an action is brought against the firm in the firm's name. The dead man is not a party to the action so far as his private estate is concerned, for a dead man cannot be sued, though the legal personal representatives of a dead man can be sued in a proper case . . . . If the legal representatives of the deceased partner are not added expressly as defendants and the action is brought against the firm in the firm's name, then judgment can only be obtained as against the surviving partners and be enforced against them and against the partnership assets . . . . I have so far dealt with the case of the death of a partner before action. Now what happens if a partner dies between service of writ and the trial of the action and judgment? In that case equally, the dead man's estate is not bound. Judgment can only be obtained against the surviving partners and enforced against them and against the partnership assets."

Where a suit is instituted against a firm which has been dissolved before the date of the suit, the date of the institution, for the purpose of limitation, is the date of the suit and not the date of the service of summons individually upon a partner, subsequent to the institution of the suit.<sup>9</sup>

The mere fact that in cases covered by the proviso, service of summons individually on all the partners in the dissolved partnership is required does not mean that in such cases there cannot be a decree both against the firm as well as against the individual partners who have been served.<sup>10</sup>

3. Service by registered post. — As has been seen in Note 1, a summons can be served in suits against a firm only in the modes specified in clauses (a) and (b) of the rule. Therefore, where service by registered post has been ordered, the registered letter should be addressed to a partner or to the manager of the business and not to the firm name at the place where the business is carried on.<sup>1</sup>

4. "Person having . . . partnership business." — The person "having at the time of service, the control and management of the partnership business" must be a servant of the firm; a receiver or a manager appointed by the Court is not such a person as is referred to in clause (b) of the rule.<sup>1</sup>

5. Successive services. — Where more than one service is effected, the time for appearance by the firm runs from the last service. In a case where service was effected on the person in control of the business and five days later, upon a partner, and judgment in default of appearance was signed on the first service before the eight days had elapsed from service on the partner, the judgment was set aside.<sup>1</sup>

6. "Principal place at which the partnership business is carried on." — Where a suit is filed against a firm, service on an agent at the principal place of business of the firm within jurisdiction is good service on the firm, whether any members of the firm are within jurisdiction or not.<sup>1</sup> But where the mandate to the bailiff is to serve the summons at the place of the business of the firm on the manager or managing partner, without specifying the name of the person to be served, it is not within the competence of the bailiff to effect service by the affixture of summons at the residence of the managing partner.<sup>2</sup> Where the manager at the place of business refuses to accept service, a copy of the summons may be affixed on the premises.<sup>3</sup>

7. "As the Court may direct." — These words do not occur in the corresponding English rule. According to the latter, the plaintiff has an option to serve the summons upon a partner or upon the manager. Under the present rule, the plaintiff has no such option but should obtain the directions of the Court as to the method of service to be followed. If the method prescribed in each particular case is followed and service is so effected, then prima facie there has been good service on the firm.<sup>1</sup>

8. Mortgage suit. — A mortgage suit by or against a firm is on the same footing as other suits relating to the properties of the firm and service of summons or notice on the manager of the firm is service on all the partners of the firm.<sup>1</sup>

section 45 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, where two or more persons may sue or be sued in the name of a firm under the foregoing provisions and any of such persons dies, whether before the institution or during the pendency of any suit, it shall not be necessary to join the legal representative of the deceased as a party to the suit.

(2) Nothing in sub-rule (1) shall limit or otherwise affect any right which the legal representative of the deceased may have —

(a) to apply to be made a party to the suit, or

(b) to enforce any claim against the survivor or survivors.

1. Joinder of legal representatives. — Under Section 45 of the Contract Act, where a person has made a promise to two or more persons, then, unless a contrary intention appears from the contract, the right to claim performance rests, as between him and them, with them during their joint lives and after the death of any of them, with the representative of such deceased person, jointly with the survivor or survivors, and after the death of the last survivor, with the representatives of all jointly. Where therefore a contract is made in favour of A and B, A alone cannot enforce the contract without impleading the legal representatives of B, in case B dies before suit. In applying this rule to cases of suits by or against partners in respect of partnership debts, there was, however, a conflict of opinions among the High Courts. All the High Courts except the Calcutta High Court held that in the case of such suits the legal representatives of a deceased partner need not be impleaded as parties.<sup>1</sup> The High Court of Calcutta<sup>2</sup> held that the general rule applied to this class of suits also and that the legal representatives were necessary parties. This conflict has now been set at rest by the enactment of O. 30 R. 4, modifying the operation of Section 45 of the Contract Act so far as the frame of suits relating to partnership is concerned, and making it clear that the Calcutta view ought not to prevail.<sup>3</sup> But the rule will enable a decree to be obtained only against the partnership assets, and cannot be carried further so as to alter the substantive law laid down in Section 45 and fix liability on the private estate of the deceased partner. If the plaintiff wishes to fix such liability, he is bound to make the legal representatives of the deceased partner also parties.<sup>4</sup>

Note 1

There is a conflict of opinions as to whether this rule applies where the suit is not brought in the name of the firm, but by one or more partners in respect of the partnership. It was held by the Calcutta High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> that the suit need not be brought in the name of the firm, and that this rule was enacted to simply uphold the view of the High Courts under the old Code, that, in suits on behalf of a partnership the legal representatives of a deceased partner were not necessary parties. The High Court of Rangoon<sup>6</sup> has held that where the suit could not be brought in the firm name by reason of the firm having no name at all, this rule does not become inapplicable. The High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>7</sup> Lahore<sup>8</sup> and Patna<sup>9</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind,<sup>10</sup> and the Calcutta High Court itself in a later case,<sup>11</sup> have held that the rule applies only when the suit is brought in the name of the firm.

Sub-rule (2) of this rule is intended to safeguard the rights of the legal representatives in case, for instance, there should be any collusion between debtors to the estate and the surviving partners. Similarly, sub-rule (2) (b) may enable them to claim contribution from the surviving partners under Section 43 of the Contract Act, in the event of there being a partnership liability.<sup>13</sup>

It follows from what has been stated in the above paragraphs that where a partner dies during the pendency of the suit, the suit does not abate but can be proceeded with by or against the firm.<sup>13</sup> This principle will not, however, apply unless two or more persons constituted a firm; where the sole proprietor dies, the suit will abate, unless the legal representatives are brought on the record within the limitation period.<sup>14</sup>

A person who sues some of the partners in their individual capacity, cannot be permitted to prove his case against them as partners of the firm.<sup>15</sup>

The rule does not apply to a joint Hindu family firm.<sup>16</sup>

1. Notice, in what capacity served. — "The object of the notice as to the capacity of the person served is obvious, namely, the Legislature intended to remove the possibility of dispute as to the character in which a particular person has been served. If there is a notice in writing, the person served is apprised of the character in which he is sought to be made liable. It is worthy of note that the language used is, not that the person served shall be presumed to be served as a partner, but that the person shall be deemed to be served as a partner . . . . In the absence of a notice consequently, the person must be deemed to have been served as a partner, and if in reality not a partner he should proceed in accordance with R. 8."<sup>1</sup> The failure to give notice under this rule will expose the plaintiff to the risk of being liable for costs in case the defendant appears under protest under Rule 8.<sup>2</sup>

2. Service on manager. — See Rule 3 ante.

3. Person served both as manager and partner. — Where there is doubt whether the person appears denying that he is a partner, judgment can still be signed in both as a partner proper appearance upon the service on him as the manager or controller. the partner of the firm will be liable in execution. Order applies only to suit in default of appearance. Order applies to two or more persons than one.

As to the contract, the notices served on the judgment-debtor during the course of arbitration proceedings as a managing partner of the firm will not enable the decree-holder to take execution at once against him without leave of the Court under Order 21, Rule 50, sub-rule (2).<sup>1</sup>

4. Appearance under protest. — See Rule 8, infra.

5. Form of Notice. — See Form Nos. 23C and 23D of Appendix B to the English Rules of the Supreme Court.

against partners in the name of the firm. It is, therefore, enacted by this rule that the partners should appear individually in their own names, though all the subsequent proceedings should continue in the name of the firm. The word "individually" does not mean "in person" and, therefore, no partner can be compelled to appear in person.<sup>1</sup> He can appear by an agent or a solicitor or a pleader and such appearance will be an individual appearance within the meaning of the rule.<sup>2</sup> Under this rule the appearance of one partner is appearance of the firm, that is, of all the partners of the firm.<sup>3</sup> The fact that the firm has been represented by the appearance of one partner does not disentitle another partner from putting in his appearance; the reason is that if such partner considers that his rights will not be adequately represented by the other partner who has appeared or who has been impleaded, or that his interests are adverse to those of such partner, it is just and fair that he should be allowed to appear individually and assist the claim.<sup>4</sup>

Where a partner does not appear in the suit and has not also been served individually with a summons in the suit, the decree obtained against the firm cannot be executed against him personally except with the leave of the Court under O. 21 R. 50, sub-rule (2). If he does appear under the provisions of this rule, execution can at once issue against him personally under O. 21 R. 50 sub-rule (1).

The only persons who can appear under this rule are persons who allege that they are partners of the firm sued against and persons who are sued as partners but who deny that they are such (see Rule 8). A person merely served as manager cannot appear under this rule (see Rule 7).

2. "All subsequent proceedings shall continue in the name of the firm."

— Where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm, they should under this rule appear individually in their own names, but all subsequent proceedings are nevertheless to continue in the name of the firm.<sup>1</sup>

3. Defence in suits against firms. — Each partner appearing individually can put in a separate written statement but each written statement is the written statement of the firm. It is only when a person is sued personally along with the firm that he may put in a personal defence.<sup>1</sup> Where a person was served as a partner and not individually and he put in a written statement in his own name, but there was nothing individual in the defence, it was held that there was only a technical flaw which could be corrected by the Court.<sup>2</sup>

Where several partners individually appear and put in separate written statements and such written statements are inconsistent with one another, the plaintiff is bound to meet all the defences and is bound to show that none of the defences prevents decree being passed against the firm.<sup>3</sup>

4. Decree in suits against firms. — The firm being sued in the firm name, judgment can be passed against it only in that name and not against the individual partners, though it may be enforced against them personally under O. 21 R. 50. The judgment must follow the writ, i.e., the decree must be against the firm in the firm name and if one of the partners fails to appear no decree can be passed against him separately for default of appearance.<sup>1</sup> But the judgment has the effect of a judgment against all the partners as partners<sup>2</sup> and therefore, the assets of the firm are primarily liable to satisfy the decree. Whether a particular partner is also personally liable to satisfy the decree can only be decided in execution under O. 21 R. 50.<sup>3</sup> A judgment entered against a firm may be a ground for a valid cause of action against an individual partner and an action may be brought upon it against him.<sup>4</sup>

5. Revision. — Where a Court refuses to allow a partner, who has entered appearance but has not filed a separate statement, to take part in the conduct of the case against the firm, it acts illegally in the exercise of its jurisdiction and the order is open to revision.<sup>1</sup>

R. 7. [New.] Where a summons is served in the manner provided by rule 3 upon a person having the control or management of the partnership business, no appearance by him shall be necessary unless he is a partner of the firm sued.

1. Scope of the Rule. — A person served as manager is under no obligation to appear in Court unless he is a partner.<sup>1</sup> This rule is to be read subject to Rule 5 above. It contemplates only a case where a person is served as a manager and not a case where the person served is deemed to be served as a partner.<sup>2</sup>

The object of the rule is to avoid unnecessary delay caused by the appearance of persons who are neither partners nor their agents.

O. 30 R. 8

R. 8. [New.] Any person served with summons as a partner under rule 3 may appear under protest, denying that he is a partner, but such appearance shall not preclude the plaintiff from otherwise serving a summons on the firm and obtaining a decree against the firm in default of appearance where no partner has appeared.

1. Scope of the Rule.

2. Party appearing under protest not entitled to file written statement on his own behalf.

3. Party appearing under protest, if can question liability of firm.

4. Defence of party entering appearance under protest in proceeding under Order 21, Rule 50.

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule enables a person who is served with summons as a partner under Rule 3 to appear under protest and deny that he is a partner. The effect of such an appearance has nothing to do with the merits of the suit but it nullifies the service altogether as regards the firm.<sup>1</sup> But the plaintiff is not precluded thereby from otherwise serving the summons on the firm. He may disregard the appearance of the person denying that he is a partner and may again effect a service upon a partner or partners or upon the manager of the business as required by Rule 3, or he can contend that the person served was a partner at the time the cause of action accrued, and apply on that basis either to have the appearance entered struck out, or to have the denial of partnership struck out of the appearance.<sup>2</sup> According to the High Court of Bombay<sup>3</sup> the person protesting that he is not a partner has a right to have the issue as to whether he was a partner of the defendant firm, tried in the suit itself and not be left hanging over him until execution proceedings are taken out against him under O. 21 R. 50. On the other hand in the undermentioned case of the Calcutta High Court,<sup>4</sup> Mr. Justice Buckland was of the opinion that an inquiry of the kind prior to judgment is not within the contemplation of the rule, inasmuch as there is an express provision in O. 21 R. 50 for the decision of the question before according leave to proceed in execution. The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind has, also, taken the same view.<sup>5</sup> See also the case cited below.<sup>6</sup>

2. Party appearing under protest not entitled to file written statement on his own behalf. — A party who has been served as a partner under Rule 3, and entered appearance under protest, is not entitled to file a written statement on his own behalf denying that he is a partner.<sup>1</sup>

3. Party appearing under protest, if can question liability of firm. — A defendant entering appearance under protest is not precluded from taking alternative defences, namely, that he is not a partner and that, assuming that he is a partner, the firm is not liable.<sup>1</sup> It was held in England in the undermentioned case<sup>2</sup> that under the corresponding rule (O. 48A R. 7) of the Rules of the Supreme Court, such a defence was not open to the defendant. That rule, however, has been substituted by a new rule in 1929 under which such a defence is now permitted in England. That English case, therefore, has now been rendered obsolete in England.

4. Defence of party entering appearance under protest in proceeding under O. 21 R. 50. — A files a suit against a firm and serves B with a summons as a partner of the defendant firm. B appears under protest stating that he is not a partner, and a decree is passed in his absence against the firm. A then seeks to execute the decree personally against B under the provisions of O. 21 R. 50, sub-rule (2). B can, in such proceedings, defend himself on the ground that he is not a partner of the firm. He can also take any other defence that is open to him, unless, to allow him to do so would be to negative any rule of procedure.<sup>1</sup> and one or more of the partners therein and to suits between firms having one or more partners in common; but no execution shall be issued in such suits except by leave of the Court, and, on an application for leave to issue such execution, all such accounts and inquiries may be directed to be taken and made and directions given as may be just.

1. Scope of the Rule. — The general rule of procedure is that a person cannot be both a plaintiff and a defendant.<sup>1</sup> This rule provides an exception to that rule<sup>2</sup> and makes this Order applicable to suits between firms and one or more of the partners therein, and to suits between firms having one or more partners in common.<sup>3</sup> A suit may also lie by one firm against another when all the members of one firm are members of the other.<sup>4</sup> The rule does not alter the substantive law as it existed before,<sup>5</sup> and does not lay down when and under what circumstances suits can be laid as between partners.<sup>6</sup> It only lays down the possibility of such suits and the procedure to be followed therein.<sup>7</sup> No suit will lie as between partners or between firms having common partners for recovery of moneys due on accounts without asking for accounts.<sup>8</sup> But an action for the balance of a settled account will not be barred merely because there are other unsettled accounts between the parties.<sup>9</sup>

One of the directors of a company who has been excluded from acting as a director by the other directors can maintain an action in his own name on the ground of individual injury to himself.<sup>10</sup>

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule.
2. Non-resident foreigner.
3. "All Rules under this Order shall apply."

1. Scope of the Rule. — In order to maintain a suit against a firm in the name of the firm, there must be two or more persons who are alleged, or who claim, to be partners therein.<sup>1</sup> A single person cannot constitute a firm, though he is carrying on business in a name or style other than his own. This is made clear by the use of the words "as if it were a firm" and "so far as the nature of the case will permit" in this rule.<sup>2</sup> Such a person cannot, therefore, sue in the name of a firm, but must sue in his own name.<sup>3</sup> Where, however, he files a suit in the name of the firm, but is willing to amend the plaint by inserting the words "(plaintiff) carrying on business under the name and style of (firm)," the amendment should be allowed on terms that he should pay all the costs incurred up to the date of the amendment.<sup>4</sup> Where the title of the plaint mentioned the plaintiff as "A, owner of the shop O," there is no misdescription inasmuch as the plaintiff is A and not the shop O.<sup>5</sup>

But though a single person trading in a firm name cannot sue in the name of a firm, he can be sued in that name under the provisions of this rule.<sup>6</sup> But the business must be carried on in British India and must be an existing one at the time when the suit is instituted.<sup>7</sup> If the sole proprietor dies, no suit can be brought against him in the name of the firm, for such a suit will be only a suit against a dead person and therefore a nullity.<sup>8</sup> The proper form of the suit will be against the legal representatives of the deceased proprietor.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, if he dies pending the suit, it will abate unless his legal representatives are brought on the record within the prescribed period of limitation (90 days from the date of his death).<sup>10</sup>

This rule only applies to the case of a single individual carrying on business in a name or style other than his own. Where the sole proprietor of a business dies and the business is then carried on by the guardian of his minor sons on their behalf, this rule does not apply.<sup>11</sup>

2. Non-resident foreigner. — It has been held in England that English Courts cannot seek to exercise jurisdiction over a single trader residing in a foreign country, notwithstanding the fact that he carries on business within the jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> In this country, it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta<sup>2</sup> that, there is nothing in this rule which says anything about residence either within or without the jurisdiction of the Court, and that a Court can exercise jurisdiction over persons who carry on business within its local limits though they are resident outside it. The same question came for consideration before the Privy Council in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> where the Courts below had assumed they had such jurisdiction. Their Lordships of the Privy Council did not, however, decide the point but left it with the remark that the assumption appeared to their Lordships to require more attention than it had received.

3. "All Rules under this Order shall apply." — All the rules of this Order relating to suits against firms have been made applicable by the latter part of the rule to suits properly laid against a person trading in a name other than his own so far as the nature of the case will permit. Thus, the business must be carried on in British India and the defendant may be asked to disclose his real name and address (Rules 1 and 2). Service may be effected as provided under Rule 3 and the Court has got power to order substituted service when no person having control or management of the business can be found.<sup>1</sup> Rule 4 will not apply (see Note 1). The defendant must appear individually in his own name though the subsequent proceedings might continue in his assumed name. Judgment can be passed against him in the firm name and execution will issue as provided by O. 21 R. 50. Where the service has only been effected upon the person having the management and control of the business, it may be that execution can issue without leave only against the property found at the business premises unless the person so traded has appeared. Where appearance has been entered or the person has been served personally or an order for substituted service has been obtained, execution may be issued against the business assets and against the defendant personally.

[See however (196) AIR 1986 Oudh 245 (248). (In this case it seems to have been assumed that this rule will apply to a case in which the sole proprietor of a business dies and after him the business is carried on by his heirs.)]
